MGM is interested

(c) New York Times

New York — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc., operator in Las Vegas of the world's largest casino hotel, expressed strong interest Wednesday in the possibility of opening a casino hotel in Atlantic City.

Frank E. Rosenfelt, president and chief executive officer, said in an interview here that MGM previously had ruled out such an investment in Atlantic City because it appeared that New Jersey legislation governing casino operations would be too restrictive.

Soviets hit Carter

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union unleashed its most vitriolic personal attack yet on President Carter Wednesday, charging his "hullabaloo" about human rights is an attempt to force a confrontation at the Belgrade East-West meeting this month.

The official Soviet news agency Tass and the Communist daily Pravda said Carter has "encouraged and kindled" anti-Soviet campaigns, threatened detente and tried to undermine the Helsinki accords.

Mitchell's jail is easy

Montgomery, Ala. (UPI) — "They refer to this as Maxwell Country Club," said Tom Stidham Wednesday as he showed a reporter around the federal prison camp at Maxwell Air Force Base, the prison that will soon house former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell.

It wasn't a donation

Tallahassee, Fla. (AP) — A work crew for Goodwill Industries came upon an unusual item in one of the charity's collection boxes — a $2,200 rhinestone-studded suit.

Country-western star Freddy Fender had reported it stolen, and the thief had called police to tell them it was in a Goodwill box. The police asked Goodwill to keep an eye out.

Fender, happy to have his suit back, said he won't press charges — if and when the thief is arrested.

Third hostage let go

Assen, The Netherlands (AP) — South Moluccan terrorists released a third hostage from their hijacked train Wednesday and mediators prepared for another try to free 55 others held 17 days in the train and a nearby school.

The released hostage, Theo van Hattem, 46, may have suffered a slight heart attack aboard the train, medical officials said.

One top Dutch specialist who examined Van Hattem warned that many of the 51 hostages still aboard the train may not be able to stand the "intolerable" strain much longer.

Lumberyard burns

Millard (AP) — Firefighters were battling a five-alarm fire at a suburban Omaha lumberyard late Wednesday night.

The blaze at the Millard lumberyard was reported at 10:33 p.m. and a fifth alarm was turned in at 11:20 p.m. authorities said.

There were no reports of injuries. Cause of the blaze was unknown.

IRS audits Carter, Mondale

Washington (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is auditing recent tax returns of President Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, administration spokesmen said Wednesday.

The tax agency is auditing Carter's returns for 1975, when he used income averaging and claimed a $41,702 tax credit to cut his tax bill, the President's spokesman said.

Carter said he did not seek the audit.

"They've inventoried, they've checked my income taxes I think almost every year for the last 10 years," the President told reporters on his way to Budget Director Bert Lance's home in Washington's fashionable Georgetown section for dinner.

"But I think that it's a good thing to do," Carter added. "We're suggesting they do it every year I'm in office."

The President's spokesman said there has been no allegation of any impropriety or illegality in Carter's return. Carter "feels he has no problems," said White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum.

Mondale's return for 1976, filed earlier this year, is being audited although, his spokesman said, "it is a fairly simple return.

Al Eisele, the vice president's press secretary, said Mondale was informed of the audit a week or two ago and was asked by the IRS to supply additional information in support of his return.

"The best we can tell, it's a routine audit," Eisele said.

The IRS has not told Carter what prompted its audit of his return, said Press Secretary Jody Powell. He said IRS agents have gone over Carter's records in Georgia as part of the review.

Powell said one reason for the audit might be that the tax agency wants to avoid any criticism like the flood which followed revelations that then-President Richard M. Nixon had been granted tax deductions for his gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

Mondale's vice presidential counsel, Michael Berman, and an accountant he employed to prepare his return will meet with an IRS agent within the week, Eisele said.

The spokesman, replying to queries from reporters, said Mondale's 1976 income consisted largely of his salary as a Democratic senator from Minnesota, three days of transition salary as vice-president elect and some speaking fees.

Eisele said Mondale filed a joint return with wife Joan, who reported a small income of her own.

The Mondales' salary figures were not immediately available nor was any other information about their tax returns.

Mondale was audited on his 1972 return, Eisele said, and was found to owe no additional taxes.

"He thought it (the 1972 audit) was politically motivated," said the spokesman. Mondale was on one of the "enemies lists" prepared by Nixon aides.

Information about Carter's audit emerged from a tangle of what Powell conceded were "mistakes and unwarranted assumptions" made by Carter spokesmen during a 2¼-hour news briefing devoted almost exclusively to questions about the IRS audit of the President's 1975 tax return.

At one point, the briefing was interrupted by an unusual recess so Powell and Granum could check their facts.

With White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz, they conferred by telephone for more than an hour with Carter's accountant in Georgia.

Granum noted that Carter's 1975 return, which was made public by the President during his campaign for the White House, includes a "big portion" of income from Carter's partnership in the warehouse with his mother and his brother.

The tax return shows Carter paid $17,484.14 in tax that year on an income of $136,138. The return shows he took a $41,702 credit related to purchases of farm machinery. A credit is subtracted directly from taxes owed.

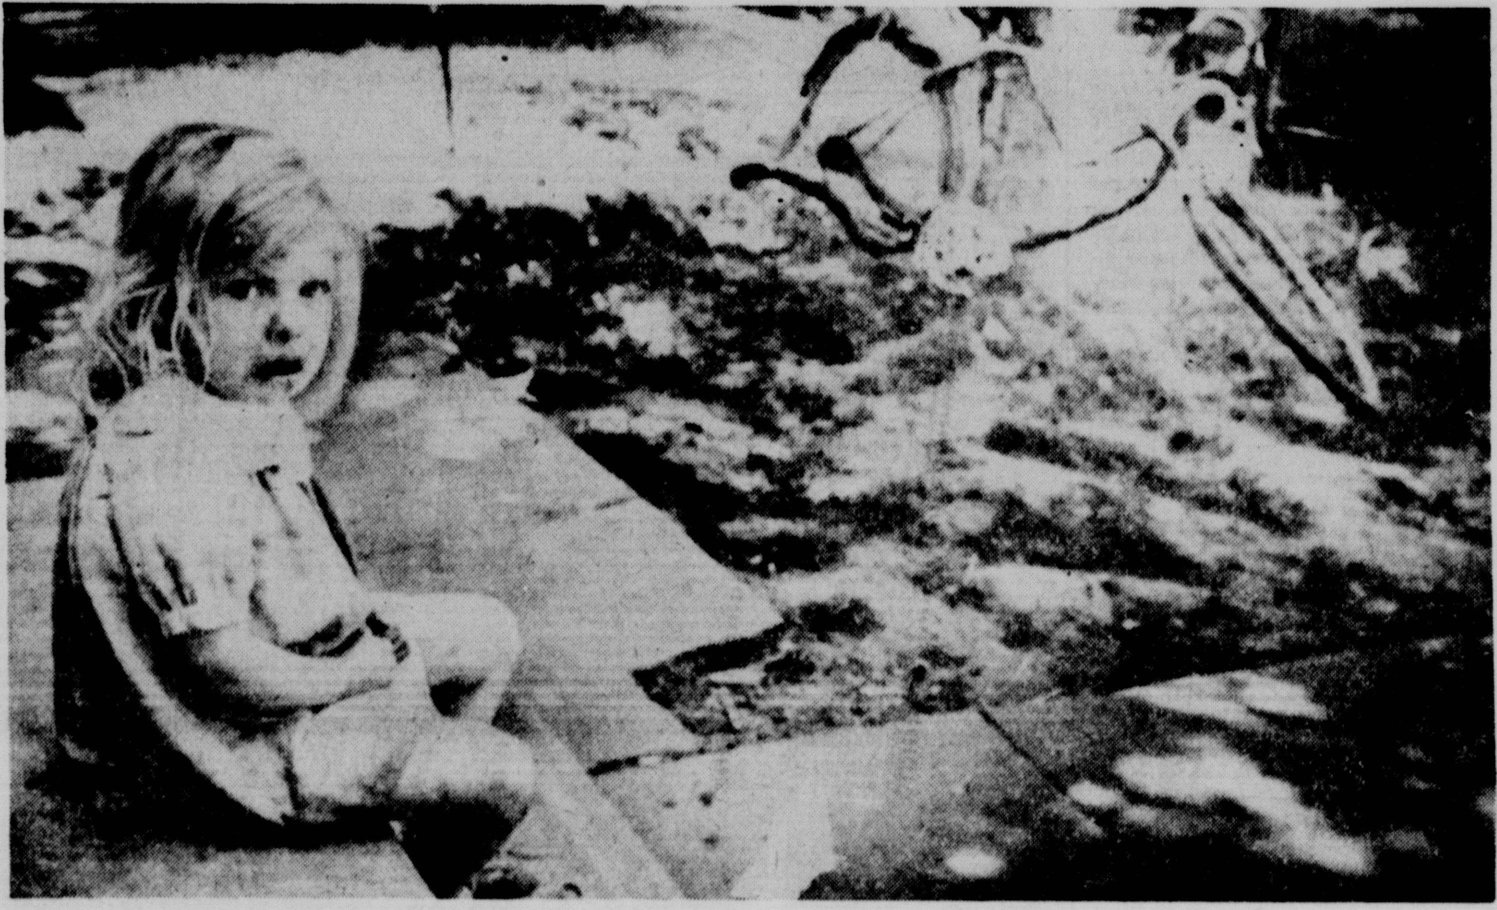
Carter's tax return for 1975 shows the bulk of his income, $119,244, came from his peanut-seed business, Carter's Warehouse. He also reported $3,293 in income from his autobiography, "Why Not The Best?"

Carter's investment tax credit of $41,702 was equal to about 10 per cent of the $410,646 he spent for equipment for his peanut business.

During the campaign, Carter pledged to eliminate many tax shelters, but said he would retain the investment tax credit as an incentive for business to invest.

Carter also reduced his tax obligation by averaging his income over a five-year period. Since his taxable income fluctuated from a low of $50,195 in 1972 to the 1975 high, it was to his advantage to do so.

Without the income averaging and investment tax credit, Carter had a potential tax of $58,981.



Little girl's brother won't be coming back

Three-year-old Sonya Riddle of Kansas City is crying because her parents left her at home Tuesday when they went to make arrangements for the funeral of her 11-year-old brother, Michael. That's Michael's bicycle in the upper right. Police reported he was distracted by a baseball game Monday night, ran a stop sign at the end of the block and crashed into a big truck on the through street.

House members requested to list S. Korean favors

(c) New York Times

Washington — The House Ethics Committee voted Wednesday to require every member of the House to disclose details of his association with South Korea in an effort to ascertain the scope of the allegedly illegal Korean attempt to influence Congress.

In a separate action, another House committee investigating the Korean connection obtained the agreement of the former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Hyung Wook, to testify in open session on Korean actions aimed at affecting American policy toward Korea.

In the ethics committee, a dispute broke out over a proposed agreement with the Central Intelligence Agency under which CIA documents pertaining to the Korean operation would be disclosed to the committee. Several Republican members objected that the CIA would retain too much control over designating which information was to be released and what use could be made of it.

But the committee voted to require all of its own members to acknowledge to the committee all gifts from Koreans valued at more than $100. Last month, a similar motion offered by a first-term Republican, Bruce F. Caputo of New York, was rejected when senior members protested that it impugned their integrity.

The ethics committee further confirmed, in a status report and during discussion in a meeting Wednesday morning, that vast amounts of information about the Korean trail of alleged bribes, gifts, favors and travel was scattered in files over nearly a dozen agencies.

The ethics committee, whose proper title is the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, will send out a questionnaire to each House member to determine whether there was "a concerted pattern of efforts by the Korean government or its alleged agents to influence the House."

"We are asking each person who is or was a member of Congress during the past seven years to fill out" the confidential questionnaire, a covering letter reported. The Korean operation is believed to have begun in 1970, when the government in Seoul feared a lessening of the American commitment to Korea's defense.

While couched in polite terms, the request is backed by the threat of a subpoena in the event any member declines to respond in the alloted 14 days.

The questionnaire asks whether the member or his staff have visited Korea, whether the member or his family or staff or business partners have been offered gifts by a Korean official or "any person now suspected" of representing the Korean government.

The form specifically asks whether members of his family or staff have accepted or been offered anything worth more than $100, or had social or business dealings with five people — Tongsun Park, the businessman charged with being a secret agent; Kim Dong Jo, a former Korean ambassador here; Sue Park Thomson, a Korean-born former member of former Speaker Carl Albert's staff; Mancho Kim, another businessman here who was reportedly being groomed as Tongsun Park's successor, and Kim Sang Keun, a KCIA officer who defected from the Korean embassy.

City could get up to $1 million

Rep. John Cavanaugh announced Wednesday that Lincoln will be eligible to receive up to $1 million under a "pocket of poverty" designation authorized in the new public works law passed recently by Congress.

The money will be split among various political subdivisions, such as the city, school board and Airport Authority, according to Reid Charles, administrative director for Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis. How that money will be divided hasn't yet been determined.

Under the public works law, Nebraska was eligible for $30 million. Cities of more than 50,000 people could be eligible for some of that money if they could prove there is a need to hire unemployed workers for public projects, Charles said. The money can only be used to help finance construction of new projects.

Unemployed people are hired to work on those projects, which will be paid for by federal funds.

Cavanaugh said Omaha will receive a maximum of $17.8 million, while Douglas County will receive $2.9 million and the State of Nebraska will receive $3.2 million. Bellevue will receive up to $1.3 million, Fremont will receive $673,000, Falls City $407,000 and Sarpy County $401,000.

Other amounts include Walthill $384,000; Auburn $362,000; Rosalie $216,000; Thurston County $114,000; Cass County $84,000; Plattsmouth $83,000 and Richardson County $77,000.

State, county and city officials now must indicate priorities in applications for the money to the Economic Development Administration, Cavanaugh said.

Girls home panel supportive amid faults

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Suggestions for improvements at the WICS (Women in Community Service) group home in a recently-publicized report should not be interpreted as criticisms, the authors of the report said Wednesday.

A six-member professional advisory committee appointed by the County Board to study the WICS program issued a public statement stressing their full support of the home.

"It was our intent to preserve and strengthen the program, not to devalue it," the statement said.

The committee's report neglected to mention many of the positive aspects of WICS because its intention was to outline areas for improvement, explained Dr. Herbert Howe, a committee member.

The committee's primary recommendation was that the county should contract with WICS at the same per diem rate ($500 per month) as other counties, rather than $250 per month currently being paid.

Other recommendations suggested ways to improve the home's "image" among teenagers and improve the staff.

Meeting with the advisory committee and the WICS board Wednesday night, County Board members indicated a willingness to follow the new funding arrnagement, since next fiscal year WICS will lose its state grant.

On the other recommendations, "it is for the WICS board to decide how to act," said County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton.

"If we contract on a per diem basis, WICS can divest itself of any responsibility to the County Board," said Commissioner Jan Gauger.

"We're in no way trying to influence, direct or in any way interfere with policy, programs or procedures of WICS," she added.

The committee's report suggested that one of the home's rules, mandatory delousing for runaways, be abolished.

WICS director Lucy Nevels explained that the rule was instituted because more than once a runaway returned and infested every girl in the home with lice.

Several parents and WICS board members defended the structured environment of the home. Marilyn Biggs of the juvenile court said she has sent many girls to WICS who could be helped by no other facility, because they needed strict rules.

WICS board member Eleanore Enersen said that the very girls who think WICS is too strict often look back on their experience there with gratitude.

Yet the home is unpopular among delinquent girls, who often go elsewhere when given a choice, Mrs. Nevels said.

"How do we make it more attractive to young ladies who need the kind of help we can provide?" asked WICS board chairman Ed Schwartzkopf.

Man takes cycle, car, pickup after escaping from jail chapel

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Michigan man who escaped from the County-City Jail Wednesday afternoon left a trail of stolen vehicles behind him before being captured south of Panama.

Police identified the escapee as Martin Caudill of Detroit, arrested in Lincoln in March when authorities found he was wanted for escaping from a federal prison in Michigan.

Shortly before 3:30 p.m., police said, Caudill climbed through some ceiling panels while washing walls in the jail chapel. He then took a metal drain cap, broke through some ceramic tile and made his way into a storage area and out the garage, police said.

In the north parking lot of the County-City Building, he persuaded a 27-year-old Lincoln woman to let him try out her motorcycle. He hopped on the cycle and fled. He later abandoned the motorcycle at 19th and H and took a car at 1253 S. 21st, which had been left in the driveway with its engine running, police said.

From there, he went to the Major Oil station south of Lincoln on Highway 77, where he allegedly commandeered a pickup-camper at knifepoint.

State patrolmen spotted the camper traveling south on Highway 43 at about 5:30 p.m., and chased it, having heard broadcasts on the stolen vehicle.

The escapee tried to turn the camper onto a field road about 3½ miles south of Panama, but flipped the truck over. Patrolmen apprehended him at the scene of the accident, and he was returned to the jail in Lincoln.

Wheat crop looks like best since '58

Nebraska's 1977 wheat crop Wednesday was forecast at 106.8 million bushels, 13% more than last year's, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Based on June 1 conditions, the latest prediction is 3.1 million bushels higher than last month's estimate, apparently reflecting timely rains received throughout most of the state in May.

The yield-per-acre is expected to be 35 bushels, three bushels above last year, up one bushel from last month, but seven bushels below the 1971 record yield and one bushel below the five-year average (1971-75), the service said.

If realized, this year's production would be the highest since Nebraska's 1958 record output of 113.4 million bushels, the service pointed out.

The acreage harvested for grain is expected to reach 3,050,000 acres, or 3% more than in 1976, according to the service.

Britons can't leave Uganda

Associated Press

Uganda radio announced Wednesday that British residents would be barred from leaving that East African nation, in apparent retaliation for Britain's efforts to keep President Idi Amin from attending the Commonwealth conference in London.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan said he was "keeping his cool" concerning the safety of an estimated 300 Britons living in Uganda. Most are teachers, missionaries or medical volunteers who remained after Britain broke relations with Uganda on July 28, 1976.

"I do not take these reports very seriously and I wish you would not either," Callaghan told reporters as he left the afternoon session of the Commonwealth meeting in London.

"Why don't we all keep cool about this and not give President Amin the chance to think he is putting the wind up us (worrying us)?" he said. "He may have put the wind up you but he hasn't put the wind up me."

British Foreign Secretary David Owen said he has always been anxious about the safety of Britons in Uganda but said those who remained "will know houw to cope."

A Ugandan spokesman in London said the estimated 300 Britons living in Uganda "are in no physical danger," and he denied any link between their restriction and the Commonwealth summit.

The meeting opened with the Ugandan seat conspicuously empty and with the exact whereabouts of Amin, reportedly on his way to London, still a mystery.

The Ugandan spokesman, Idi Osman, said Amin had made it "absolutely clear" he was coming and would probably arrive later this week on his presidential jet.

"The president has been described as a murderer," Osman said. "Up until now he has not had the chance to refute these allegations. The conference could give him this chance."

The embargo against the Britons was the latest in a bizarre series of claims, threats and rumors surrounding the brash dictator's pledge to crash the summit despite the opposition of other Commonwealth leaders reacting to his alleged reign of terror in Uganda.

The latest move recalled a similar ban imposed on about 240 American nationals in Uganda five months ago after President Carter declared that reports of mass arrests and killings in Uganda had "disgusted the entire civilized world." The ban was lifted after four days.

The official Uganda radio, quoting a spokesman for Uganda's vice president, Gen. Mustafa Adrisi, who was reported to be in charge while Amin headed for London, said a decision on the "plight" of the British would have to await the president's return.

Adrisi was quoted as saying that Ugandan security forces had been directed to ensure that no British nationals leave the country. The report, monitored in Kenya, said the troops were told to watch for "such likely movements to defy the directive such as slipping through minor outlets like Mbale and Lake Idi Amin."

Mbale is near the Kenyan border, and Lake Idi Amin is near Zaire.

Adrisi ruled out the possibility of an Entebbe-style raid to rescue the Britons "since most British nationals are scattered over the country."

Rebate for gas misers dead, Rep. Ullman says

Washington (AP) — President Carter's proposed rebates for buyers of energy-efficient cars are dead, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee said Wednesday.

And one of several Ways and Means members who oppose the proposed stiff tax on gas-guzzling cars said there is a least a 50-50 chance of killing that provision as well.

The pessimistic estimates of key portions of the energy plan were offered as the General Accounting Office released a report saying the President knowingly set over-optimistic conservation goals that cannot be met by his proposals.

Only if Americans voluntarily save more energy or if stringent mandatory measures are enacted can Carter's goals be reached, GAO said.

As the Ways and Means Committee adjourned for the day, its chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, told reporters, "the rebate (for purchasers of fuel-efficient cars) doesn't have any support at all."

However, Ullman said a majority of the panel wants a gas-guzzler tax, but he predicted it would not go into effect before the 1979 model year. Some opponents are pressing for a delay until 1980. Carter wants it to take effect on 1978 models as soon as it becomes law.

Rep. Joe Waggoner, D-La., told reporters that 20 of the 37 members of the Ways and Means Committee were ready to vote against the rebate on Wednesday. He said he is advising against delaying the tax because that would weaken the case for removing it from the energy tax bill altogether.

In an effort to cut national gasoline consumption 10 per cent by 1985, Carter proposed a tax of up to $2,500 on inefficient cars and a rebate of up to $500 for purchasers of efficient models.

The rebate ran into trouble immediately when congressmen realized that much of the money would come from buyers of American cars and be paid to buyers of imported cars.

Earlier, the Ways and Means committee approved a maximum $2,000 tax credit for windmills or solar devices installed by homeowners between April 1977 and the end of 1982.

Those tax credits are among the voluntary portions of Carter's energy plan that the GAO said will do little to solve the energy crisis.

The GAO delivered its critical assessment of Carter's energy package in a report to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee.

Urging the administration to redesign its plan to bring goals for 1985 in line with specific proposals, the congressional auditors said:

"Based on the administration's own estimates, with few exceptions, the plan will fall short of the goals — even if the plan is fully implemented.

"We believe that it is somewhat incongruous to ask the Congress to establish a set of national energy goals, and then propose a national energy plan that is not expected to achieve them," said the GAO.

"Based on the administration's estimates, it does not appear that the conservation provisions of the plan will cause much reduction in energy demand," the GAO said.

Instead, the agency said, "The major impact of the plan . . . seems to be reducing oil imports by shifting to coal rather than by conserving energy."

Missionaries tell Mrs. Carter of treatment in Brazilian jail

Recife, Brazil (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter, confident she has narrowed some of the human rights differences between Brazil and the United States, listened quietly Wednesday as two American missionaraies discribed the horror of their confinement in a Brazilian jail.

Mrs. Carter met for 25 minutes with the Americans, who painted her a picture of half-starved prisoners kept naked in overcrowded cells.

Afterwards, she told reporters that "I sympathize with them," adding that she would take "their personal message" back to President Carter.

The two Americans — Thomas Capuano, 24, a Menonite lay worker from upstate New York, and the Rev. Lawrence Rosebaugh, 42, a Catholic priest from St. Louis, Mo. — were jailed naked for three days last week after their arrest in Recife's central market area while gathering leftovers to feed the poor.

The United States has filed a "note of concern" with Brazilian authorities over the incident.

Capuano said he told Mrs. Carter that he and Rosebaugh were stripped naked and placed in a 9-by-25-foot cell filled with 35 other men, all naked. At night, they said they heard the screams of prisoners being beaten and whipped.

"There was a terrible stench of human excrement and something the prisoners call mold that just sort of grows on you," Capuano said.

For food, the prisoners received a handful of flour, a piece of meat "the size of a nickel or a quarter," and sometimes but not always a small piece of bread, the Americans said.

They said prisoners were so hungry that they lay down and "licked crumbs of bread up" off the floor.

The missionaries said they asked Mrs. Carter to use her influence to bring about an independent investigation of their arrest, saying that the investigation promised by Brazil is being conducted by the same police who arrested them.

"She listened very closely. We don't know what will happen but she knows," Rosebaugh said.

Mrs. Carter's meeting with the two missionaries was the most dramatic example so far of the concern she has placed on human rights during 10 days of travel through Latin America.

Pleased at the results of her talks in Brasilia with President Ernesto Geisel and other officials in this largest South American nation, the First Lady came to Recife to relax and pay a social call on friends here, Mr. and Mrs. Camillo Steiner.

Mrs. Carter said Geisel wanted to talk about relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, while she kept trying to bring the discussions back to human rights.

A U.S. official traveling with the First Lady said Brazil believed the State Department report earlier this year criticizing the human rights situation here was written at the Carter administration's initiative rather than ordered by an act of Congress.

The report so angered Brazil that it canceled a $50 million arms purchase credit and dropped out of a military assistance deal.

Daddy's little boy tells the whole truth

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — A policeman checking on a 3-year-old while his partner was giving the child's father a traffic ticket found the youngster happily playing with a .38 caliber revolver and four bags of marijuana.

Police stopped Leno McGarity Jr., 23, on a traffic violation Tuesday and asked him to step out of the car. While one officer talked to McGarity the other went to tell the little boy not to cry.

Upon stepping up to the car he found the child, the gun and the marijuana.

"My daddy has one just like you," the child said as the officer took the pistol. "And he keeps his dope right there."

The young boy pointed to a paper sack in the front seat and the four plastic bags of marijuana.

McGarity was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and marijuana possession. He was released on $800 personal bond.

Nebraska's check to be slimmer

Washington (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced Wednesday it will cut $142 million in Medicaid payments to 20 states because they have failed to meet requirements for reviewing the quality and efficiency of nursing-home care for the poor.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said he was taking the action because the law requires it but that he would urge Congress to change the law to restore the funds being withheld and to set new requirements for the states.

New York will be hardest hit by the decision to withhold a portion of the Medicaid payments due to go to the states July 1. It will lose $53.8 million, more than one-third the total being withheld from all 20 states.

HEW said it has notified the 20 states involved and is also advising some of those states and several other states that they may have to pay back $377 million in 1975 Medicaid funds they have already received from the federal government.

The states that will get reduced checks on July 1 and the amount of reductions are: Alabama $274,083; Indiana $ 1,214,955; Kansas $1,898,586; Montana $737,379; Nebraska $1,386,147; Tennessee $4,355,809; California $15,359,223; Colorado $2,295,397; Iowa $3,124,071; Maryland $2,236,487; Massachusetts $9,794,808; Michigan $9,196,973: Missouri $1,473,751; New Jersey $4,684,016; New York $53,806,152; North Carolina $2,687,131; North Dakota $503,327; Ohio $6,943,149; Pennsylvania $13,593,459; and Wisconsin $6,616,883.

Delaware, Nevada and Louisiana already had been penalized by HEW for failing to meet the review requirements for mental hospitals. But HEW did not actually reduce the payment to them because they have asked for reconsideration of their cases.

During the previous administration, HEW fought a running battle with Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the House investigations subcommittee, who insisted that the department invoke the penalty clause against states that failed to perform so-called utilization reviews to insure that institutions caring for Medicaid patients are providing quality care at fair prices.

Califano said Wednesday, "The law must be enforced, but it urgently needs to be changed to be reasonable, equitable and effective."

He said he would ask Congress to continue its requirement for quality and efficiency reviews but to simplify the administration of the program and reduce the penalties.

The law requires that each state participating in the federally supported Medicaid program must conduct annual reviews of the care provided by all long-term care facilities that take Medicaid patients.

If the required reviews are not performed in every facility covered by the law, then the state is held in noncompliance and HEW must penalize that state by reducing the amount of federal matching funds for Medicaid.

The GAO examined HEW's records of enforcement and found that the required penalties were not being levied and directed Mathews to invoke the penalty provisions.

The department said it was advising 27 states that they may be forced to pay back $377.6 million in Medicaid funds they received last year.

The department said it was still reviewing the status of those cases, which also involve the states' failure to meet the monitoring requirements.

Califano gave no clue about when a final decision will be made in these cases but he said the legislative changes he will propose "would restore any funds withheld."

Those 27 states are: California $44,993,000; Colorado $3,320,000; Iowa $45,000; Maryland $3,136,000; Massachusetts $19,540,000; Michigan $23,749,000; Missouri $1,539,000; New Jersey $4,981,000; New York $142,252,000; North Carolina $3,954,000; North Dakota $1,753,000; Ohio $9,442,000; Pennsylvania $45,751,000; Wisconsin $13,600,000; Connecticut $11,318,000; Florida $10,836,000; Kentucky $3,897,000; Hawaii $1,218,000; Illinois $5,780,000; Minnesota, $7,561,000; Mississippi $5,577,000; New Hampshire $259,000; Texas $4,137,000; Virginia $679,000; Washington $7,771,000; Oregon $165,000; Vermont $354,000.

Exon aide says HEW working to change law

Associated Press

Norman Otto, an aide to Gov. J. James Exon, said Wednesday he has been assured that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will work immediately to change retroactively laws that have forced the suspension of $1,386,147 in Medicaid payments to Nebraska.

The money was to be paid to the state beginning July 1.

Otto said he had no details on the suspension, caused by the state's inadequate compliance with HEW requirements for review of patient care standards in nursing homes.

But Otto said an HEW deputy director told him by telephone that congressional bills now being considered by the House of Representatives could be amended to prevent a permanent suspension.

He said the Exon administration was told that HEW "is immediately moving to change the law and make it retroactive so the money would be returned to us at a later date."

"It was their desire that would be done before cash flow problems develop," Otto said.

Nebraska is one of 20 states penalized a total of $142 million because of noncompliance with the federal dictates.

The state directors of the Public Welfare and Health Departments could not be reached for comment.

Nebraska was not among another group of states that may be required to pay money back to HEW because of noncompliance with the nursing home regulations.

Baptist minister moves

The Rev. Bruce Edwards, who stirred up his Baptist congregation in Plains, Ga., last year when he tried to get it to allow blacks to become members, will minister to a Hawaii congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Edwards, who resigned his post here in February, said he will take a post with the Makakilo Baptist Church sometime in July.

Robbyn visits Carter

Robbyn Foxx, 8, the cystic fibrosis child for this year, and her brother Travis, 6, met President Carter in the White House Wednesday but mostly were interested in Amy Carter's treehouse.

"You're just beautiful," the President told Robbyn when he met the two youngsters and their parents from Emporia, Kan.

"Where's Amy's tree house?" asked Travis.

Carter led the children out the door, down the path to the tree house. Amy, 9, was in school at the time.

Man sentenced in bombing

Dwight Armstrong was sentenced Wednesday to seven years in a state prison for his part in a fatal 1970 bombing on the University of Wisconsin campus. Armstrong, 25, told the Dane County, Wis., circuit court that the bombing in which a young physicist, Robert Fassnacht, was killed was "a well-intended act" in protest against the Viet Nam war.

Sailor will try again

Ed Lormand, a 41-year-old Louisiana-born music teacher, will set out again Saturday on his second attempt to sail the Atlantic alone in his 28-foot sloop.

Lormand's first attempt last year ended in failure when a storm off the North Carolina coast washed away one of his sails.

Mamie honors old friend

Mamie Eisenhower, widow of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, made a rare public appearance Wednesday to honor an old family friend.

Mrs. Eisenhower attended a reception held by Gov. Milton J. Shapp to honor Fred Waring, the former big band leader.

Governor praises symbol

Edmund G. Brown Jr., California's governor, received hearty applause from members of the Office and Professional Employes Union meeting in Los Angeles. He said the proliferation of paperwork is a symbol of human progress and is good for the economy, creating more jobs "shuffling paper."

Politician turns comedian

Lester Maddox, the former Georgia governor and segregationist, who recently launched a nightclub routine with a black man, has been signed by NBC for a guest performance in a comedy special to be aired in September. NBC's announcement Tuesday did not disclose how much Maddox or his partner will receive.

Maddox and Bobby Lee Fears, whom Maddox pardoned while he was governor, bill their act "The Governor and the Dishwasher."

Consumer agency bill nearly dead

Washington (UPI) — President Carter got the word from Capitol Hill Wednesday that the Consumer Protection Agency Bill — battered by years of veto threats, filibusters and lobbyists — is virtually dead for this session of Congress.

Despite strong support this year from Carter, organized labor, consumer advocate Ralph Nader and consumer groups everywhere, the bill fell victim to an intense lobbying campaign by business, a crowded legislative agenda in the Senate and dwindling support in the House.

At a White House briefing with Democratic congressional leaders, Carter was told by Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd that the bill would not be brought up for action in this session unless the House first acted favorably on the measure.

However, House sponsors said the bill was still 20-25 votes shy of a majority and urged that the Senate — which in the past has approved the bill by hefty margins — act first to give the measure some momentum.

Standing quietly behind the entire impasse was James Allen, D-Ala., the Senate's master filibusterer and a chief opponent of the bill. Allen has once again promised to debate the bill at considerable length.

Reporters covering Congress share in $1 million worth of freebies

By Bill Keller
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — Joe Reporter pushes back his chair from the private press table in the Senate Dining Room and folds up his hometown newspaper. He brushes his chin with a linen napkin and strides to the cashier to pay his check: slab of rare top round of roast beef, broccoli spears, spinach salad, fresh french rolls and iced tea — $2.75, no tax.

Pushing through the throngs of waiting tourists, he boards the special elevator reserved for staff and reporters, which whisks him to the third floor.

Joe enters the Senate Press Gallery and checks with one of the employes for messages. Then he plops down in front of his free typewriter, grabs a fistful of the free stationery with the impressive letterhead "U.S. Senate Press Gallery," and begins rapping out a letter to his editor.

"Dear Chief: Just read the piece we ran Sunday on how congressmen live like kings. Great story. I wish I'd written it myself . . . ."

The perquisites our pampered elected representatives enjoy include plush offices, free parking, free medical care, free plants and picture-framing, discount hairstyling, massages — you remember the list from perennial, damning news accounts.

What you probably don't remember, because it doesn't get reported nearly as often or as enthusiastically, is that reporters who cover Congress share in many of these "perks" at taxpayer expense — more than $1 million worth of taxpayer expense each year. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., made the estimate in a recent speech to the Western Wisconsin Press Association.

What's more, it can be argued that in the case of the press, these perks are an ever-present potential conflict of interest. For the relative comfort of the Capitol Hill press corps is controlled by members of Congress, the very people the reporters are supposed to be watching with sturdy objectivity.

In his speech, Obey listed some of the taxpayer-supported goods and services supplied to reporters who cover Congress, with estimates of what they cost each year. A few he left out have been added. Here's the list:

— Twenty-four employes of the House and Senate press galleries keep track of legislative activities and field phone messages for reporters. There are also special doorkeepers and messengers. Cost: $592,517.

— One hundred eighty-one free, reserved parking spaces in choice locations on the Capitol grounds. Comparable cost in a paid lot: $130,000.

— About 180 free telephones, adding up to about $23,000 a year in phone bills.

— Desks, chairs, typewriters and other equipment to furnish two main press galleries overlooking the House and Senate, and comfortable work stations in the congressional office buildings. Also, separate offices, with soundproof studios, for radio and TV reporters. Cost to maintain: about $40,000.

— Semi-private elevators shared with members of Congress or staff.

— Exclusive press tables in the House and Senate dining rooms, with waiters and menus separate from the tourists. Not as fancy as the dining rooms for congressmen and senators, but a big improvement over the long lines and clatter in the public sections of the dining rooms.

— Free stationery with congressional letterhead. Free typing paper, photocopying, and loaner copies of many newspapers from around the country.

— Access to the same discount office supplies and barbers, underground subways and convenient check-cashing facilities as members of Congress.

— Access to the well-stocked Senate library, document rooms, and a bill status service, which will provide a free computer printout of all the legislation introduced by any member of Congress and its history.

"Next thing you know," observed Rep. Robert Duncan, D-Ore., "they'll be letting you guys into our gym."

Congress hasn't gone that far. Some things — the swimming pool, sauna and handball courts, the free plants and picture-framing, the free car-washing — congressmen keep to themselves. Nor do many reporters make $57,000, Barbara Walters notwithstanding.

But if congressmen live as kings, reporters on Capitol Hill can live as courtiers — and some do.

Obey, who heads a commission looking into House operations, won't say whether he thinks some of the press perks should be taken away. His commission may venture some recommendations on the subject late this year. (Obey has, however, advocated that reporters be required to disclose their financial holdings, the way congressmen must do under a new law.)

Obey's point is that there is at least a tinge of hypocrisy in reporters' berating congressmen for the comfort of Capitol Hill without acknowledging that the press considers many of those niceties indispensible to their own work.

And to the extent that these frills can seduce congressmen into thinking they are better than the people who sent them here, the same may be true of the press.

Obey conceded in his speech that "a million dollars is a small price to pay to enable the press to do its constitutionally protected job of reporting to the American public of the activities of their elected public servants. They have an important job to do, and we ought to make it as easy as possible for them to do it well.

"But the same is true of Congress.

"I don't mind serious stories about congressional waste. I welcome them because with a $60-billion deficit we cannot afford waste anywhere . . . .

"What I do mind is the national TV reporter who does a three-minute network clip on congressional perks such as free parking without ever getting around to telling his viewers that he himself has a free space on that same Capitol Hill."

Trains run slower since Amtrak begun

(c) Washington Star

Washington — Several months ago, Amtrak, the government-financed railroad passenger corporation, quietly put up for sale its three Turbotrains — something of an odd situation, since the $2.3 million Turbos were the fastest trains ever to carry passengers in the United States.

What is stranger still — at least on the surface — is that Amtrak should stop service by trains capable of reaching 170-mile-an-hour speeds at a time when many of its trains are running slower than they were six years ago when the corporation started.

Not only that, but in some instances Amtrak's trains are even slower than passenger trains were when the railroads were running them nearly three decades ago.

In fact, an examination of Amtrak's current schedules, Amtrak's first schedule on May 1, 1971, and a variety of railroad timetables from the late 1940s and early '50s shows:

— In 1949 a traveler could leave Washington aboard the Pennsylvania Railroad's Liberty Limited at 5:30 p.m. and arrive in Chicago at 8:30 the next morning — 16 hours later — an excellent schedule for businessmen. The Baltimore & Ohio's Capital Limited made the trip in 15 hours, 35 minutes. By the time Amtrak took over in 1971, the trip took 17 hours. Today, it's 19 hours and 50 minutes — when it's on time, which turned out to be never in March and only 6.7% of the time in April.

— In 1949, a Pennsylvania train required 20¼ hours to travel from Washington to St. Louis. The current travel time is 24¼ hours — but that's scheduled time. The actual time could be far longer, since the National Limited was on time only 11.1% in March and 7.7% in April.

— The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad whisked passengers from Chicago to Minneapolis in 7 hours and 45 minutes in 1949, a trip that takes Amtrak — on the Milwaukee's rundown tracks — 10 hours and 19 minutes.

Precisely why trains in many instances are slower today — or, in a few instances, only marginally faster — than they were 30 or more years ago is difficult to determine.

One major reason, it appears, is the deterioration of track on the financially sick railroads in the Northeast and Midwest which operate Amtrak's trains.

Paul F. Cruikshank, vice president for operations and maintenance at the financially troubled Milwaukee Road, points out that the track between Chicago and Minneapolis over which Amtrak trains travel — and which is also the railroad's principal freight route — has deteroriated sharply. Speeds on the line, which were generally 70 miles an hour in 1971 are now down to an average of 40 and, in some places, only 20 m.p.h.

As a result, the railroad has asked the federal government for $91million worth of aid to repair the track. Pending a decision on that, the Milwaukee has asked for $8 million for what apparently is a quick patch-up job to bring the speeds back to 60 miles an hour.

Wallace W. Abbey, the Milwaukee's publicist, reminded a reporter that when the railroad was in its heyday, its famed Hiawatha passenger trains reached speeds of 100 miles an hour.

Other reasons for today's slower speeds include a 1947 order of the Interstate Commerce Commission concerning speed and train safety equipment, and the fact that fewer trains are running, with more local stops, according to Amtrak President Paul H. Reistrup.

Sparrows go around in circles

Birmingham, Ala. (AP) — There's a group of sparrows here that keep going around in circles. Their home is in the bottom of a revolving sign.

There's a small hole in the hollow sign and the sparrows must time their entry when the revolutions of the sign. They do this by perching atop a nearby street light post, eyeballing the turning sign and taking off just as it starts its turn toward the service station.

That's when the small hole lines up at an angle with the light pole. The birds fly over quickly, squeezing themselves inside before the sign has a chance to turn completely around again.

The birds fly out of the sign on the backside of its turn while it is facing away from the station.

The only problem, according to Paul Contorno, the station owner, is that when the baby birds come out, "they fly in circles, because that's all they've been doing inside the sign."

What would Texas be without Rangers?

By John M. Crewdson
(c) New York Times

Waco, Tex. — A decade after their controversial involvement in a bloody farm workers strike produced official suggestions that they ought to be done away with, the Texas Rangers are still around.

And it is beginning to look as though, in the words of one of their favorite aphorisms, "As long as there is a Texas, there will be a Texas Ranger."

The trouble started 10 years ago this month when A.Y. Allee, a Ranger captain, and his men were sent into the Rio Grande Valley in a divisive and unsuccessful attempt by the fledgling United Farm Workers Union to strike melon growers at the height of the harvet season.

The Rangers escorted workers brought from Mexico across the picket lines to work in the fields and carried out mass arrests of the pickets, something that union supporters charged was instrumental in breaking the strike.

After hearing complaints that the Rangers had intimidated some union members and subjected others to verbal and physical abuse, the Texas arm of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission recommended that the Rangers, then only three years away from their 150th anniversary, be abolished.

The idea of Texas without Rangers was as horrifying to most Texans as an announcement that some East Coast concern was planning to turn the Alamo into a taco stand. Here on the banks of the slow-moving Brazos, a deep green river that seems to flow with a drawl, such feelings are not hard to comprehend. For it was here that, in 1837, men with names like Anson Darnell, Sterrett Smith and Jacob Gross set up the encampment that has become the unofficial home of the Texas Rangers.

Fort Fisher, as it is known, has been fully restored in recent years and it is now the site of one of the most unusual monuments ever dedicated to a law-enforcement agency, the Texas Rangers Hall of Fame. The history reflected inside the hall is not just that of the Rangers but of an entire state where, for many years, they were the only real law.

The 20 Ranger heroes enshrined here are perhaps larger in death than in life, though probably not by much.

There is Captain Jack Hays, the renowned Indian fighter, who frequently left the ground "littered with the victims of his fearless spirit."

There is John B. Armstrong, who captured John Wesley Harden, the notorious outlaw, by clubbing him over the head with the massive barrel of his Colt .44.

There is Frank Hamer, the Ranger captain who led the posse that did in the bank robbers Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker. And there is William J. McDonald who, the story goes, was sent to quell a riot in an East Texas town early in this century.

As the Ranger stepped from the train, the mayor asked him why only one man had been dispatched. "Well," McDonald is reputed to have answered, "You ain't got but one mob, have you?"

He probably never said it, but to Ranger history, legend is nearly as important as fact. The mythical Lone Ranger, a Texas Ranger to be sure, is accorded a special place in the Hall of Fame.

The calls for the abolition of the Rangers have faded, in part because, as an official of the American Civil Liberties Union put it, "They've kept a pretty low profile since all that stuff in the late 1960s."

Jim Harrington, a 31-year-old lawyer who runs an ACLU project in San Juan, near the Mexican border, said there had been no recurrence of the troubles a decade ago.

For more than 40 years, the Texas Rangers have been a sub-unit of the State Department of Public Safety, which has a much larger uniformed force that carries out most criminal police functions. There are some who now question the need for a hand-picked force of Rangers.

Compared to their fierce-looking, moustachioed 19th Century predecessors whose photographs adorn the Hall of Fame, the present-day Rangers, many of them bespectacled men of middle age and spreading paunch, seem an unprepossessing lot.

But they are still possibly the most elite law enforcement agency in the country, if only because their ranks are so small. There are only 94 of the distinctive star-in-a-circle Ranger badges to go around (the number is fixed by law), and such hard-won prizes are generally surrendered only upon retirement or death.

There are no black Rangers, and no women. The first Mexican-American, Arturo Rodriguez, was admitted in 1969 and one or two others are said to have joined since then.

Although the modern Rangers have for the most part remained aloof from Texas politics, the organization was mildly embarrassed in 1972 when it was disclosed that commissions had been handed out to some 300 "Special Rangers" who were given, without the benefit of any training, badges and a license to carry handguns and make forcible arrests.

Many of the Special Rangers turned out to be private investigators or security officials for companies like Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Apart from riot control and the apprehension of fugitives, the Rangers, who are scattered in big cities and little towns throughout the state, are primarily criminal investigators. And even though they are no longer chasing fence cutters and cattle rustlers or repelling Mexican revolutionaries who stray across the border, the spirit of independence acquired in more rought-and-ready days seems not to have faded much.

Space plans afoot

Washington (UPI) — The space agency is developing a planetary exploration plan that proposes a 1984 launch of two roving Mars vehicles, a possible robot landing on Mercury, and flights to Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Halley's Comet and four asteroids.

The plan also envisions a 1990 launch of automated ships to land on Mars, collect samples of rocks and soil, and return them to Earth.

"These are possible candidates for the future — high priority mission opportunities," said A. Thomas Young, head of planetary and lunar programs, in an interview following a series of presentations to a meeting of the American Geophysical Union.

In addition to the Mars expeditions, the plan includes:

— A spacecraft for launch in 1986 at the earliest to orbit Mercury and possibly land a simple exploratory robot on the surface of the planet nearest the sun.

— A satellite to set out in 1983 to orbit Venus and map its cloud-shrouded surface with advanced imaging radar.

— A spacecraft to be launched in early 1982 to orbit Jupiter and send an instrumented probe deep into its dense, hot atmosphere.

— A spacecraft for launch in 1985 to orbit Saturn and launch two probes, one to study the planet's atmosphere and one to examine the atmosphere of the Saturn moon, Titan.

— A spacecraft to set out to 1982 to rendezvous with and examine Halley's Comet.

— A probe for launch in 1985 to survey the 240-mile-thick asteroid Vesta and three smaller asteroids.

Young emphasized that only one of those missions is currently approved by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration management and the White House. It is the $285 million Jupiter orbiter-probe mission and it has run into budgetary trouble in Congress.

As it now stands, NASA has two planetary exploration projects in the works. One is the launch of two voyager spacecraft this summer from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to explore Jupiter, Saturn and possibly Uranus. The other is a flight of a Pioneer spacecraft and an atmospheric probe to Venus next year.

In addition, two Viking Mars landing craft continue to operate on the red planet, although their life detection experiments have been completed without conclusive results and other investigations have been reduced for the long, cold Martian winter.

The 1984 Mars expedition would cost about the same as the Viking project — $1 billion — and expand the search for life and conduct much more detailed and extensive investigations of the planet's surface and environment.

Karen Kuehn 'the bird lady'

Milwaukee (UPI) — Her friends call Karen Kuehn "the bird lady."

They have good reason. Last year, Mrs. Kuehn and five others took care of more than 1,500 birds.

The 37-year-old mother of two is director of bird rehabilitation for the Izaak Walton League of America.

"The general attitude of most people when they find a baby bird is, 'give it a worm,' " Mrs. Kuehn said at a recent talk on birds and bird care at the Wisconsin Humane Society in Milwaukee.

"Well, sparrows, barnswallows and hawks, for example, don't feed their babies worms.

"The first thing you should do when you find a baby is keep it warm. Their normal body temperature is about 110 degrees. So get a light on it, for Pete's sake, and bring it inside.

"If you find an adolescent, leave it alone. If you're not sure whether the bird has been abandoned, wait until sunset. If it's still there, bring it in. Remember, the mother could have three others that she's off getting food for — and daddy, well, he could be down at the corner bar."

She got interested in bird care about five years ago when she found an injured bird in her yard. The fascination grew even though she discoverd she is allergic to birds and her husband dislikes them.

Gasohol on brink of progress but could go down drain

Seemingly on the threshold of a breakthrough, is gasohol now about to go down the drain? Not the drain from the gasoline tank in your car to the carburetor but the proverbial drain of lost dreams.

Gasohol is a mix of one part grain alcohol, called ethanol, and nine parts standard gasoline. The enthanol comes from various grains grown on the farms of the nation.

The idea has been around a long time but never taken very seriously by most people. Now, the federal government appears on the verge of providing grants whereby gasohol plants could be set up and run for a profit on an experimental basis.

Thus, the idea that has been around so long suddenly appears to have taken on real possibilities. As you might suspect, the critics are now coming out of the woodwork.

The big pitch is that gasohol is economically unfeasible, that it costs too much to make the product by the time you extract the alcohol from the grain and mix it with the petroleum. Additionally, it is claimed that public acceptance of the product is unproven.

All of those things may be right but it seems to us that the whole idea of the federal program is to determine whether the critics or advocates are right. So do we stop the experimental program now or let it continue and provide us the answers?

The government intends to pump some $85 million into this project, with four plants throughout the nation. It is believed that one of the plants would be located here in Nebraska and a group is formed and waiting for just such an opportunity.

It is claimed by critics that the $85 million is a boondoggle, as is the state gasoline tax subsidy that would enter into the program. But not every experimental effort is a boondoggle and this one seems to have enough going for it to give it a try.

What concerns us is that the entire program be judged on its merits rather than a strictly political basis. Very obviously, there would be forces in the economy that would prefer to leave ethanol the sleeping dog it has been.

There are legitimate objections to the program and plenty of room for questioning of its validity but it is to provide some answers that the program is now proceeding. If the proposition now gets bogged down in an endlesss controversy, it will be unfortunate.

Such controversy does not always produce the best decisions and we hope this is not the case with the gasohol proposal.

Country living no picnic

Things aren't all peaches and cream when you move to the country. If you think otherwise, ask the people living in Wagon Train Heights on the edge of Hickman.

That is not really country living but it is living in a more rural area than Lincoln. Wagon Train Heights is a product of a Farmer's Home Administration low-income housing project.

But two things have happened there. One, the housing has turned out to cost a lot more than expected in terms of payments for utilities and taxes. Secondly, the development has created water supply problems for Hickman that the town is finding difficulty in solving.

No doubt Hickman felt kindly in the beginning about the development, as it does represent growth and, therefore, opportunity for the area. The people getting the homes undoubtedly felt good because that is what home-ownership does to people — makes them feel good.

But having a place of your own and growth in a community have inherent problems and it behooves people and governments to figure out the problems in advance, to whatever extent possible. Some small towns other than Hickman have had the same experience — the housing developments bringing unexpected supporting difficulties.

No doubt these problems will eventually be solved but the business of people lured to the countryside for low-cost living is not the best kind of business. Certainly, the Farmer's Home Administration should do a better job in the process than it has done.

Citizens in general ought to look at such developments with skepticism. Wherever you live, you must pay one way or another for the conveniences of modern living and a lot in what used to be a cow pasture can't change that.

We suspect that the smaller towns around Lincoln have learned something in all this and will look for a lot more answers the next time opportunity comes knocking at the door.

We goofed

In a Tuesday morning editorial here, we mistakenly reported that State Game and Parks Commission Director Eugene T. Mahoney had been appointed by Gov. J. J. Exon.

Governor Exon had nothing to do with the appointment, its being made by the seven-member commission itself.

The un-vacationers

Jim Bishop

New York — Our chief executives will not acknowledge that a true vacation is impossible. When a president of the United States leaves Washington, the trappings of apprehension go with him.

The military aides are in attendance. So is the White House physician. There is a daily briefing on the situation of the world. The hot line to Moscow sits on an end table. State Department and congressional liaison teams phone daily reports.

Herbert Hoover was the last president to take a true holiday. He used to sit on a houseboat in the Florida keys casting for bone fish. No officials were allowed aboard unless invited. He cooked his own breakfast.

Franklin D. Roosevelt enjoyed the waters at Warm Springs, Georgia. The world was tense, so he brought his team and his switchboard with him. He spent each morning signing White House letters.

His secretary, Bill Hassett, insisted that presidential missives should be signed with pen and ink. FDR complied. The secretary dropped each letter on the carpet to dry. The president called it "Hassett's laundry."

Harry Truman enjoyed Key West. He wore a flamboyant sports shirt, but he conducted White House business as usual and conducted press briefings. The president is "on stage" all the time.

Dwight D. Eisenhower visited his farm at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. He also liked long weekends golfing in California. For John F. Kennedy, it was the family compound at Hyannisport, Massachusetts. One of the joys of the family was to toss a political question in air, and allow every one to analyze it, tear it to shreds, and solve it.

Lyndon Johnson was the hardest worker of all. He spent more time in and out of the White House, laboring at affairs of state than the job called for. His cherished fun was to fly to Texas and sit in the kitchen with two black cooks and listen to the local gossip.

Richard Nixon was sold on Key Biscayne, Florida, by his friend Bebe Rebozo. He had three houses rigged up for any emergency, complete with guard gates and heliport. He played poor golf, didn't care for fishing. His greatest pleasure was discussing politics.

Gerald Ford made Vail, Colorado, famous. He was more athletic than the others. Ski slopes became a challenge. He won a few, lost a few. He also enjoyed golf and is building a mansion at Palm Springs, California.

President Carter uses a cottage at St. Simon's Island, Georgia. It is called Grove House, an old wooden building crept over by azalea. His friend, Smith Bagley, heir to the Reynolds Tobacco corporation, owns 1,800 acres there.

Between Brunswick and Savannah, there is a group of barrier islands off the edge of Georgia. In a snobbish sense, St. Simon's could be called the wrong island. Jekyll Island — next door — used to be so laden with millionaires that President Roosevelt said that one-eighth of the world's wealth was at Jekyll in 80 families.

The so-called "Golden Isles" are gifted with deep granulated beaches, thunderous green breakers and the chirp of cicadas. On St. Simon's, John and Charles Wesley, founders of the Methodist Church, built Christ Church in 1736.

Major Pierce Butler, a signer of the U.S. Constitution, ran a big slave plantation there. When Aaron Burr shot and killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel at Weehawken, N.J., he hid on St. Simon's in 1804. The Confederate Army destroyed the old lighthouse during the Civil War; it was rebuilt by the U.S. in 1871.

Today, neither Jekyll nor St. Simon's is expensive. Both have motels and museums and horse trails and golf courses. Reasonable families on reasonable budgets vacation there. Mr. Carter enjoyed the fishing and the salt air at St. Simon's long before he became president.

There's a difference. He just found out that the old, relaxed vacations are gone. A year ago it was Jimmy, Rosalynn and Amy. And a couple of suitcases.

This time it was a cavalcade of automobiles preceded by troopers on motorcycles with sirens. It was reporters, commentators and cameraman. It was aides, secretaries and specialists. It was hot lines and the U.S. Signal Corps setting up long-range radios. It was Secret Service agents and press secretaries.

Navy frogmen examined the bottom of his fishing boat before the engines were started. It was a mockery of a vacation for a man who works hard. His dear friend, Jim Bishop, was his fishing guide. The wrong one, of course . . .

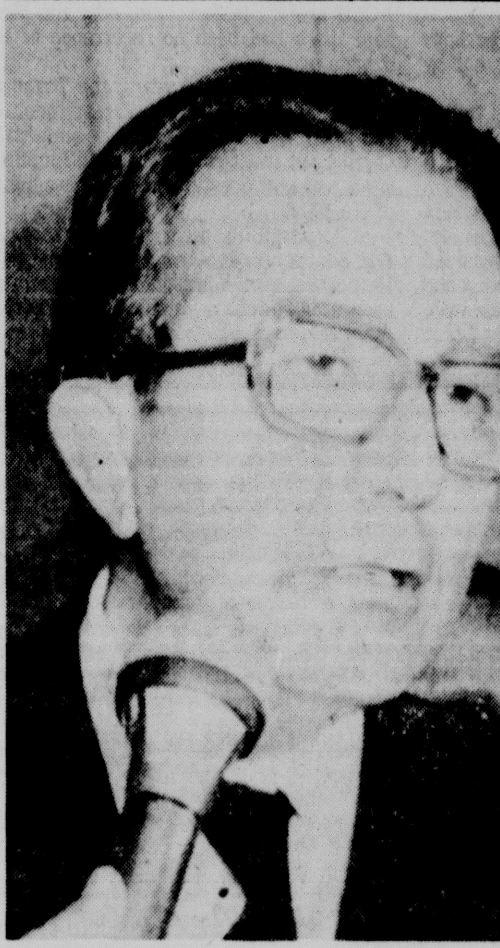
Italy's Andreotti, 30-years durable

James Reston

Rome — In this city of heroic monuments and feeble governments, Giulio Andreotti stands out as the most durable politician in Europe, with the lone exception of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. For over 30 years, he has survived in the service of his country — six times as under-secretary to the president of the council of ministers, 14 times as minister of internal affairs, finance, treasury, defense or industry, and now, for the third time, as premier at the age of 58.



He looks and talks in his dim office in the Palazzo Chigi like a professor of philosophy, and to hear him tell it in a private talk, the outlook for the future is no worse than the past and maybe a little better. He made the following points:

—The development of Europe over these last 30 years has been disappointing in some ways but remarkable in others. At the beginning, a united Europe was just a dream of De Gasperi. Everyone thought it would be difficult to bring Britain into the Common Market, but now Britain is in and some progress obviously has been made.

—Even in Italy, though over a million young people are unemployed and inflation is running at 20%, the standard of living today would have been unthinkable 30 years ago. Some of Italy's problems are the result of its success in spreading education without providing enough work for the new college graduates.

—It would be inaccurate to say that the rising generation in Italy all share the dream of a united Europe, but there is a great awareness that the European Economic Community has been instrumental in avoiding a third world war for 30 years — what he called "the longest period of peace we've had in Europe."

—There was political unrest, uneasiness in Italy today, even a revolutionary spirit. "It comes from two factors: first, great wealth in one section of Italian society and great poverty in another, which we are trying to correct through tax reform, and second, a vast migration of people from the land into the cities." But he insisted, "For the moment there are no threats of a popular front government including the communists."

—Still there were, he said "great difficulties," particularly because of what had happened in the field of international economics. "The oil crisis greatly slowed down the work on economic and monetary union. It was originally scheduled for 1980 and is now much further off in the future."

Incidentally, the theme at Communist Party headquarters is not all that different from Andreotti's observations. Sergio Segre, head of the foreign section of the Partito Communista Italian, sounds infinitely patient and even co-operative. He does not see the Soviet Union as an "imperialist" power. His party is concentrating, he says, on building a consensus for order and a better standard of living in Italy. It sees no conflict between detente with the Soviet Union and President Carter's campaign for human rights.

He does not agree that Italy is in a "revolutionary" mood or even that it is in the "pre-revolution" phase of its history.

Andreotti, who is going to Washington later this summer, had some amiable observations about Carter's presence at the recent summit meeting in London.

"What impressed me," he said, "was Carter's sense of perspective. He sees and places great emphasis on a few lines of world policy, for example, energy policy and raw materials. He has a very wide view of things, I would say almost a religious view. This comes out in the way he approaches problems. I believe it reflects a great moral conviction. He doesn't get bogged down in procedures. We were very favorably impressed."

On the larger question of Italy's present attitude toward the United States, the premier said that the anti-American campaign of a few years ago, provoked by communist propaganda, had declined. "As an example, there were great polemics against the La Maddalena base (American tactical nuclear submarine base in northern Sardinia) years ago.

Today we have much less difficulty on measures regarding NATO. In the parliament the other day, the vote to strengthen our NATO forces went through with an easy majority."

The premier acknowledged that there seemed to be a rise of terrorism in this country, and that he didn't quite know the cause of it. Partly it was the result of the crowded cities, partly the result of using "permissive" anti-fascist legislation to weaken the authority of the state, and partly the result of a general moral decline in Western societies.

Perhaps, he said, Italy had emphasized economic development too much and ignored moral and cultural development, but he believed the influence of the family and to a lesser degree of the Roman Catholic Church was still strong. For example, he said, after a more liberal divorce law was passed in Italy, there was a remarkably small number of requests. Shortly after he spoke, the Italian senate defeated a bill to legalize abortion, after a strong anti-abortion campaign by the church.

Asked about the rise of so-called independent national Communist Parties or Eurocommunism, he said this was a problem for both the democracies of Western Europe and for Moscow. Eurocommunism, he said, was born out of the atmosphere of detente which former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger worked so hard to create.

. The West must be cautious, he said, not to write off the possibility of independent national Communist Parties, and he implied that it would be wrong to criticize such a development too casually. "Naturally," he said, "it seemed to us a bit strange that you (specifically Kissinger) should take such a rigid attitude toward this problem (Eurocommunism) while you were cultivating good relations with Peking and Moscow."

In general, however, looking at the perspective of his 30 years in Italian politics, Andreotti took a cautiously optimistic view of the last quarter of the century. Having survived so much over so long a time, he was not prepared to believe, he said, in the collapse of Western democracy.

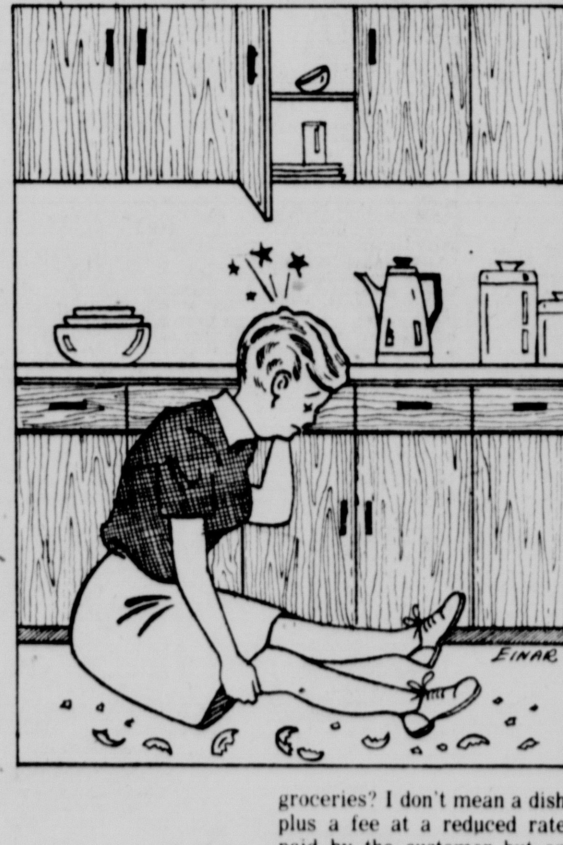
A shelf only as strong as smallest peg

By LaVerna Hassler
Star Staff Writer

Patchwork Prairie Country

How many years has it been since grocery stores gave free dishes with a purchase of groceries? I don't mean a dish plus a fee at a reduced rate paid by the customer but an honest-to-goodness dish free of any strings.



A number of years ago I collected custard cups, oven-ware cups, that made so many trips into the oven I might well have stored them there. But I didn't. I put them on the top shelf of a small cupboard in the kitchen. There they were safe.

Last week I opened the door and was bopped soundly on the head. Two cups tumbled out followed by the entire row. I gasped as I viewed the shattered glass on the floor. Eleven custard cups were safe no longer. One was left tottering on the shelf.

What happened? I found the small peg that holds the shelf on the underside had become loose and allowed the shelf to tilt outward. Thus when I opened the door, the support was taken from the dishes and they tumbled out only to crash at my feet.

I began to think back, counting the years, and decided it must have been at least fifteen years ago that I added the cups to my cupboard. I had never broken or chipped one until that day when it sounded as if the whole world had crashed down.

Yesterday I visited the city and made another purchase of similar baking dishes. These, too, are oven-ware but larger than the conventional custard cups. They are not the pottery type which are quite expensive but brown glass, bright and shiny with a new shape. Whether they will be as serviceable will remain to be seen but I have found a new storage place for them.

How the corn and milo grow these hot and humid days. With the adequate rainfall we have had, it makes everything grow rapidly. Today The Farmer is attaching the cultivator to the tractor and plans to begin cultivating milo this afternoon. The rains that make the field crops grow also make the weeds grow. In fact some of the fields are so green with weeds that it is difficult to see the rows. At the moment farmers are hoping for a few days of sunshine to allow the fields to dry so they can work them. With the big equipment that cultivates eight and ten rows at a time, it does not take long to cover a field.

What a lovely fragrance the madonna lily has. With the window open near my desk, I am almost intoxicated with the scent. Nearby the delphinium blooms, a heavenly shade of blue. I put three stakes into the ground and tied the stalks to the stakes. The flower stems were so heavy they were touching the ground.

A black walnut tree sprouted this spring near the patio . . . in fact, too near the patio. Squirrels buried the nut last fall as a walnut tree is nearby but evidently forgot about this one. It is such a nice vigorous tree but we will have to move it next spring as it is too close to the house. If squirrels would carry rulers with them and measure the distance before burying nuts they would stand in my good graces.

I suppose the reason the little tree is such a fine specimen is because it has been safe from the rabbits, growing so close to the house.

It will have to be protected next winter with a wire guard. Nature always has some pest to undo the good another animal does.

In fact, I see the white butterflies, airy and delicate, flying over the cabbage plants. I dare not admire their graceful flight too much because I know they are looking for a likely spot to deposit their eggs. In a few weeks their worm offspring will be eating the cabbage leaves. Now they have small baseball-sized heads on them. I do not intend to share my bounty with the worms.

Jack Crimmins, strictly 'a corner guy'

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — Jack Crimmins, who died in Boston the other day at the age of 70, was what they call up there "a corner guy." For those who live in less civilized parts of the universe, it means somebody who hangs around the street corner, picking up the particular brand of intelligence so valuable in politics known as "street sense."

Officially, he was Ted Kennedy's personal driver in Massachusetts, and especially during his campaigns when Kennedy worked the state as if it were one immense ward and needed a wheelman who knew every turn. But more important, he was Kennedy's ears in the streets of his city and state in a way no well-scrubbed Harvard white-shoe kid could ever have been. He was one of those foot soldiers of politics upon whom all the good urban politicians of this country rely, far more typical of the game than those who make Page 1 every day.

Crimmins was as opinionated as a cab driver with the meter running. He was all heart, but he was also all Irish and all South Boston, which meant he was also unabashed about expressing the prejudices of the community in which he lived.

He took his pleasures and his hates straight, and didn't like them confused. When Father Robert Drinan first ran for Congress in 1970, a reporter who had been covering the Drinan campaign was riding with Kennedy and Crimmins. Kennedy asked how Drinan was doing, and the reporter said he thought he might win. Crimmins, looking straight ahead behind the wheel, muttered between clenched teeth: "A priest running for Congress! I wish he was running in my district so I could vote against him! He'll get murdered." (Drinan won.)

In the same campaign, a black candidate was running against a Democratic regular for Congress and had been endorsed by the Catholic Church, a circumstance that doubly offended Crimmins. He called blacks "stove covers" and the idea of Holy Mother the Church backing one was more than he could fathom.

He was, says an old friend, "Kennedy's ambassador to the blue-collar, three-decker world of South Boston. Jack always brought him the voice of what he was hearing in South Boston, and he brought it in unvarnished terms."

He was a veritable thesaurus of the street vernacular of Southie. He would talk disparagingly about the old Irish who were "two-boaters" who "came down from the ice" — whose families had settled briefly in Newfoundland before coming on to Boston. He would say of an unco-operative snob: "He wouldn't tell you if your coat was on fire." Of a shyster lawyer: "He couldn't get you out of jail if your time was up." Or: "He couldn't fix a library card." Of an inept public official: "He could screw up a two-car funeral." Of a cheap crook: "He'd steal a hot stove." And of a glib operator: "He could talk a dog off a meat wagon."

Kennedy met Crimmins in 1961, when Kennedy served as a $1-a-year assistant district attorney while waiting to run for the Senate. Crimmins was an investigator, but in a short time, he was doing nothing but driving Kennedy when he was in Massachusetts (he was with him at Chappaquiddick) and serving as his man during campaigns. But the relationship was more paternal than subservient. Crimmins called Kennedy "Senator" in his presence, "but after a few pops at night," a friend recalls, "he called him 'the kid.' "

Crimmins was transparently fond of Kennedy, but he never hesitated to disagree with him. When his beloved South Boston became ensnarled in the school busing controversy and Kennedy outspokenly came out on what Crimmins thought was the wrong side, he was unhappy, friends say, but mostly because he knew the grief his people would cause Kennedy.

And he didn't like Kennedy's support of welfare recipients, either. "What the hell are you meeting with all them welfare bums for?" he would ask Kennedy. "Aw, Jack," Kennedy would say. "What do you mean?" he would interrupt. "They ought to go get a job."

Kennedy, on hearing of Crimmins' death, said he had benefited greatly from his "Irish heritage and common sense." Jack Crimmins was not just a guy who held Ted Kennedy's coat. He told him when it was on fire.

Gay leaders brace for battles

Associated Press

As soon as Miami voters repealed a local law banning discrimination against homosexuals, the ripples started to spread.

With the victors trumpeting plans for new battles elsewhere, leaders of gay groups in the nation's capital, San Antonio, Tex., Minneapolis and California found themselves forced to consider their strategy against a potential offensive.

And gay leaders across the country were offering different predictions about what the new fights would mean.

Some feared a backlash in which they would lose newly won rights. Others said the national attention stirred by the fight would be good in the long run, even if at first there were setbacks.

The talk of new fights started in earnest in the first flush of victory Tuesday night for Anita Bryant, the singing orange-juice promoter, fundamentalist Christian and anti-gay leader in Miami.

"All America and all the world will hear what the people have said," she declared soon after learning her side was winning by a 2-to-1 margin. Then she singled out the four areas as places into which her group, Save Our Children, would soon move. An estimated 40 communities nationwide have gay rights laws.

By Wednesday, other spokesmen for the group were backing off Miss Bryant's prediction, saying no plans were definite. But the warning was enough to be taken seriously in the four communities.

Miss Bryant herself was off to a religious revival Wednesday night in Norfolk, Va. Gay rights leaders, meeting during the day there in response, said that despite the vote totals they had won a moral victory in Miami because more people were aware of the debate.

And in Miami, homosexual spokesman Bob Kunst declared that Miss Bryant had miscalculated.

"Bryant may have tasted blood at this time, but no way does she have a chance in those other places," Kunst said. "They are absolutely crazy to go into Minneapolis. That ordinance has been there for years . . . In California, the people won't be nearly as nice as they were here; the gay community is much more organized . . . The more Bryant does this number the more there will be a backlash against Miami."

In California Robert I. McQueen, editor of The Advocate, the nation's largest gay newspaper, said "the defeat there makes our life much more difficult . . . there has been a trend noticeable mostly in the state legislatures where almost any anti-gay legislation has won . . . In California the prospects of the anti-gay marriage bill are very good. Pro-gay legislation has been having a very difficult time."

If California becomes a battleground, it could be a hot one. It passed a so-called "Homosexual Bill of Rights" in 1975 that legalizes all sexual acts in private between consenting adults and is now considering a law to ban discrimination against homosexuals.

A number of cities in California also have ordinances similar to the one nullified in Miami — including San Francisco, where an estimated one in seven of the city's 680,000 residents is homosexual.

And in recent years, San Francisco's attitude toward gays has been notable for its tolerance.

The Castro Street area, one of two large homosexual neighborhoods, often resembles a street fair on sunny weekends with men in cutoffs strolling arm in arm and lounging about restaurants and bars.

It is a well-kept, middle-class area and gay community leaders say they revitalized it. Last year Chip Carter appeared at the annual gay tricycle race to win votes for his father's presidential race.

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone declared Wednesday that the Miami vote "says that some people have rights and others do not. I think that is terribly wrong."

In Minneapolis, lawyer and gay rights activist Jack Baker agreed with Kunst that a Bryant campaign would fail. "We have been at the process of education since 1969," he said.

Baker estimated about 5 per cent of Minnesotans — 20,000 persons — are "up front gay," and 2,000 are in the gay rights movement.

But State Sen. Howard Olson, a farmer who helped defeat a proposed gay rights bill in the Minnesota legislature last month, said the Florida vote is encouraging, and reflects public opinion in his state.

Olson said he expects new pressure for a law next year similar to ordinances in effect in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Marshall that prohibit discrimination based on "affectional preference."

There were 27 complaints filed under the Minneapolis ordinance in the first two years after it was passed in 1974, but because it is designed to encourage conciliation, few have reached the court stage.

In one case now under appeal, a hearing examiner ruled that Big Brothers, Inc., can distribute information about the affectional preference of would-be volunteers, as long as it does so for all applicants. The group provides male companions for fatherless boys.

That case reflects fears about such a law's effects on children — an argument similar to Miss Bryant's and to Olson's fear that a state law could require hiring of militant homosexual teachers.

In Washington, gay activists estimate the homosexual community numbers about 50,000, and they say the local law is so closely linked to black rights — it is part of an omnibus anti-discrimination bill — that it would be difficult to rescind.

It is difficult to find out how often the law has been invoked for gays, but Franklin Kameny, a gay rights activist and member of the Commission on Human Rights, said such numbers are "no real criterion either of the need for the law or of what the law is doing.

". . . A lot of people will just call me and complain," Kameny said. ". . . I tell them first to get a copy of the law and bring the copy to the landlord or whoever and say, 'See, this is the law.' Ninety-nine times out of 100, the case is solved that way . . . The ultimate effect . . . is that it has become known that you just don't discriminate against gays in the District."

Vicious hail sweeps through Chicago area

United Press International

A vicious hailstorm swept through the Chicago area Wednesday afternoon, forcing a brief evacuation of the O'Hare International airport control tower at the world's busiest airport.

The storm also "spooked" horses running at Arlington Park race track.

The O'Hare tower was evacuated for about four minutes when wind gusts hit 73 miles per hour. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Patrick O'Sullivan said the tower windows began to shake "and we were afraid if the windows came in, some people would get hurt."

The storm hit Arlington Park seconds after twelve 2-year-olds crossed the wire ending the first race. Several of the horses, including an outrider's horse, bolted. The jockeys, who huddled behind a light pole and trash barrel, sustained large welts from the hailstones.

"I couldn't pull my horse up and neither could anyone else pull them up because the hail hitting them in the rear just kept them running," Larry Snyder, who won the race on Roman Advocate, said. He said he had to wheel his mount around to face the oncoming hail before it stopped.

A late spring cold snap carried the mercury to record lows Wednesday from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi Valley and Texas.

A heat wave, dust storms and flash flooding plagued parts of the West.

A funnel-laden storm destroyed barns and machine sheds, severely damaged four filling stations and tore down trees and power lines at Pine City, Minn., Tuesday night.

"The streets look like a garbage pit," Ken Kern, news director of station KCMP, said. "Trees are down everywhere. Glass is all over."

'Gay Libbers' win privileges at Missouri U

St. Louis (UPI) — A federal appeals court Wednesday ruled the Gay Lib, a homosexual organization, is entitled to use meeting facilities of the University of Missouri at Columbia and to seek student activities funds.

"I have no doubt that the ancient halls of higher learning at Columbia will survive even the most offensive verbal assaults upon traditional moral values," wrote Judge William H. Webster of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"Solutions to tough problems are not found in repression of ideas."

The University's Board of Curators in 1972 denied official recognition to the group. The denial has prevented Gay Lib from using campus facilities for meetings and from applying for financial support from activities funds.

The appeals court ruled 2-1 that denial of recognition deprived the organization's members of constitutional rights to assembly and free speech.

Judge Donald P. Lay said university officials' contention that recognition would encourage violation of the Missouri law against sodomy was unsupported by the evidence.

"It is difficult to singularly ascribe evil connotations to the group simply because members are homosexuals," Lay said. "An interesting fact is that not all members of the group are homosexuals."

New museum named

Caracas, Venezuela (UPI) — Armando Reveron, one of Venezuela's most distinguished painters, has been honored by the establishment of a museum with his name. The museum is in the small town of Macuto on the central coast of Venezuela, where Reveron painted many of his famous seascapes.

Public's reaction may have stopped metric signs

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Highway Administration said Wednesday the public has been protesting its proposal to convert traffic signs to the metric system, and a congressman said the agency has decided to drop the plan.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said in a floor speech the FHA told him by telephone Wednesday that the project would be dropped "effective immediately."

A spokesman for FHA Administrator William Cox declined to confirm or deny Grassley's statement, but said the FHA has been getting "heavily negative" comments from the public on the metric proposal and will make an announcement on the issue next week.

The FHA published its proposal in the Federal Register April 27. It said the FHA would start changing the traffic signs on July 1, 1978, and, if the project proved feasible, complete the conversion project by Jan. 1, 1980.

"There has been a large response and it has been heavily negative," the spokesman said.

$2 million spent on training

New York (AP) — American businesses spend about $2 billion a year to educate employes, and the bulk of it goes to train the old rather than new workers, according to a report by the Conference Board.

In 1975, $1.6 billion went for company-run programs; $220 million was used to help employes pay tuition, and another $180 million was spent for other outside courses.

The study by the Conference Board, a private, nonprofit research organization, is based on a survey of 610 U.S. corporations with 500 or more employes.

The most popular program, offered by 89 per cent of the companies polled, was the one to help employes with tuition. About 75 per cent provide in-house courses and 74 per cent other types of outside courses.

Concerning the job that secondary schools and colleges do to train employes, senior personnel executives said, "Our education system should give greater emphasis to preparation for work."

In a related study, the average worker is at least a high school graduate, and one-sixth of them are college graduates, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Figures reported in a monthly newsletter published by finance companies indicate a continued trend toward more education among the labor force.

Bureau statistics show that in March 1976, nearly three out of four employed persons were high school graduates, and that one-third of those working had completed at least one year of college.

The newsletter also reported that the proportion of workers who are high school graduates has increased more among men than among women, a change from the trend reported in previous years.

Jobs increased in Chicago area hit by violence

Chicago (AP) — City officials have promised to make 310 more summer jobs available for youths in the predominantly Spanish-speaking Humboldt Park community that blazed with weekend violence.

The city's Human Services Department said Tuesday, a day after officials met with Latin leaders, that a total of 1,000 summer jobs will be offered.

The figure is the same as the job allotment for the area last year but an increase over what the city had planned to make available this summer, said First Deputy Commissioner Hugh S. Osborne.

The number of jobs had been cut because of the new $2.30 hourly minimum wage. Osborne said the agency reduced the number of jobs to correspond with the amount of money available. The jobs are open to economically-disadvantaged youths between the age of 14 and 21 years.

Utility company views on private windmills vary

Associated Press

Putting up a windmill on your rooftop or in your back yard may save you money on energy costs, but it doesn't always guarantee you a friendly reception from your local electric company.

A small, but growing number of homeowners are investing thousands of dollars to turn wind power into electricity through windmills. Some are trying to sell their surplus power back to utilities, but find the companies not always thrilled by the idea.

There's no uniform response to the windmill idea from America's utility companies. Some say windmills can be hooked into their system. Some say it is too dangerous. Some say they will buy excess power generated by a private citizen. Some want to charge the customers a monthly fee for the hookup. Some say the citizen won't be able to generate enough power even for his or her own use.

But an Associated Press spot check found people in Arkansas, Florida, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, New York, Rhode Island, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin who either recently have installed their own windmills (and other power sources such as hyrdro power) or who have applied for permission to install them.

Many want to plug into a utlility's electric system to back up their own. The idea of hooking in to a utility's system and getting paid for excess power fed back into the system is not a new one.

For many years, utilities have been buying excess power generated by big business. In Hawaii, 40% of the power is generated by sugar mills which burn cane waste. Northern States Power in Minneapolis buys some power from the Ford Motor Co., and Georgia Power buys small amounts from industrial firms.

So utilities which doubt the value or feasibility of private power raise the ire of people such as Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., who installed a windmill two years ago near his home at Chenaqua, Wis. It cost about $5,000 for the equipment and necessary permits; other installations have cost from $4,000 to $10,000.

Reuss says he gets about 75% of his power needs from his windmill — but exactly how much power a homeowner can count on depends mainly on how much wind there is.

Unlike many experimenters, Reuss had no trouble with his local utility. He agreed, however, that being a congressman might have helped.

But other utilities that oppose the use of windmills "are displaying a public-be-damned attitude at its worst," Reuss said. "The battle has been fought and won, and it's just a matter of telling the utilities that they better join the 20th Century — while there still is one."

Most people who win permission to use utility power as a backup for windmill power have a device called a synchronous inverter. The machine monitors power needs and draws electricity from windmills or the local utility, as needed.

Jim Wurth of Boynton Beach, Fla., was one of the first people to use the device. It finally helped him persuade Florida Power & Light Co. to join his experiment.

Wurth bought two windmills in 1975 and set them up in his back yard. After overcoming local ordinances, he waged a two-year battle with the power company. Finally, after heavy pressure from state officials, FP&L officials began cooperating.

They eventually liked what they saw so much that they bought Wurth's windmills for further experimentation and displayed his system prominently in their latest annual report.

Florida Power & Light's initial resistance wasn't unusual. But sometimes it takes state action to allow a homeowner to hook up a windmill.

S. Roland Morgan Jr. of Little Compton, R.I., owner of a windmill that provides all the electricity he needs — when the wind is blowing steadily — has received permission from the Narragansett Electric Co. to hook into its lines. But he still is trying to reach an agreement on credit for his excess power.

"When I first told them about my plan (two years ago) and that we would be running their meter backwards, they thought that was a good joke," said the 70-year-old retired teacher.

"Then the engineers came, and scratched their heads and said, 'Damn, we're losing money on you.' So they put a lock on the meter to prevent me getting credit.

"They thought it was a joke, but it's no joke and they're getting mighty interested now," he said.

Three generations take same university course

By Patty Beutler
Star Staff Writer

They say it's in the genes, their love of literature and the arts.

Whatever the motivation, mother, daughter and grandmother — the latter recoils at the word — are enrolled in the same University of Nebraska-Lincoln summer school course.

Prof. James McShane's short story class may never be the same.

Kit Voorhees, her mother Kate Morris, and her daughter Katie, are not your average-type undergraduates.

The three generations — all christened Katherine, but nicknamed Kate, Kit and Katie — Kafka, Stephen Vincent Benet and James Joyce in a daily two-hour class during the three-week summer pre-session. Each brings to the seminar analytical skills influenced by the prevailing mood of her growing up years.

Mrs. Voorhees tends to interpret her reading more in terms of morality which she says dominated her generation. On the other hand, it's social mores that reigned in her mother's time and a "tell it like it is, babe" attitude that guides her daughter's generation.

The different slants provide input that "invariably meshes," as Mrs. Voorhees says, and the three "end up with a composite that's just glorious." They hold most of their literary talks in the car on the way to class, after each has noted her opinions and analysis in a required journal. "It seems more non-cheating that way," Mrs. Voorhees adds, hoping not to dominate her daughter's ideas.

Sharing two texts among them, each has her own special reading place — Mrs. Voorhees in the music room, Katie on the living room couch and Mrs. Morris upstairs in her room. Four Voorhees teenage daughters keep the 2501 Lafayette St. house hopping. "You learn to read in confusion," Mrs. Morris confides.

A resident of Bucks County, Pa., Mrs. Morris — known as "Cakey" to her grandchildren and everyone in her hometown village — planned her family visit to coincide with the class.

Married and a mother before she could finish her college education, she's been gathering credits at several colleges ever since. Still without a degree, she finally told herself "phooey, I can live without it" and opted to audit the class. Although her daughter and granddaughter are taking the course for credit, she "thoroughly enjoys not turning in papers." That's the privilege, she figures, of someone who's "too damn near three-quarters of a century old."

In spite of her age, you'd be hard-pressed to call Mrs. Morris old. Her dangling blue earrings, just a shade darker than her clear blue eyes, bob about in conversation as she tosses out words faster than a reporter's pen can record them. "As you see, I like to talk," she's quick to say, attributing the propensity to the Irish in her.

Today's barefooted and shorts-clad students are still "shocking" to her when she thinks back on the formally dressed students of her early college days.

"In our day the professors were sacrosanct, almost saintly," she recalls. Modern teachers, like McShane, she finds refreshing in the way they give credence to any opinions at all, as long as the student qualifies and pursues his ideas. "He reaches into my mind," she says of McShane.

Mrs. Morris' mind has not been idle when not in class. She writes verse and vignettes for a local magazine back home and has had a play published. She's also done her fair share of talking to audiences from the stage.

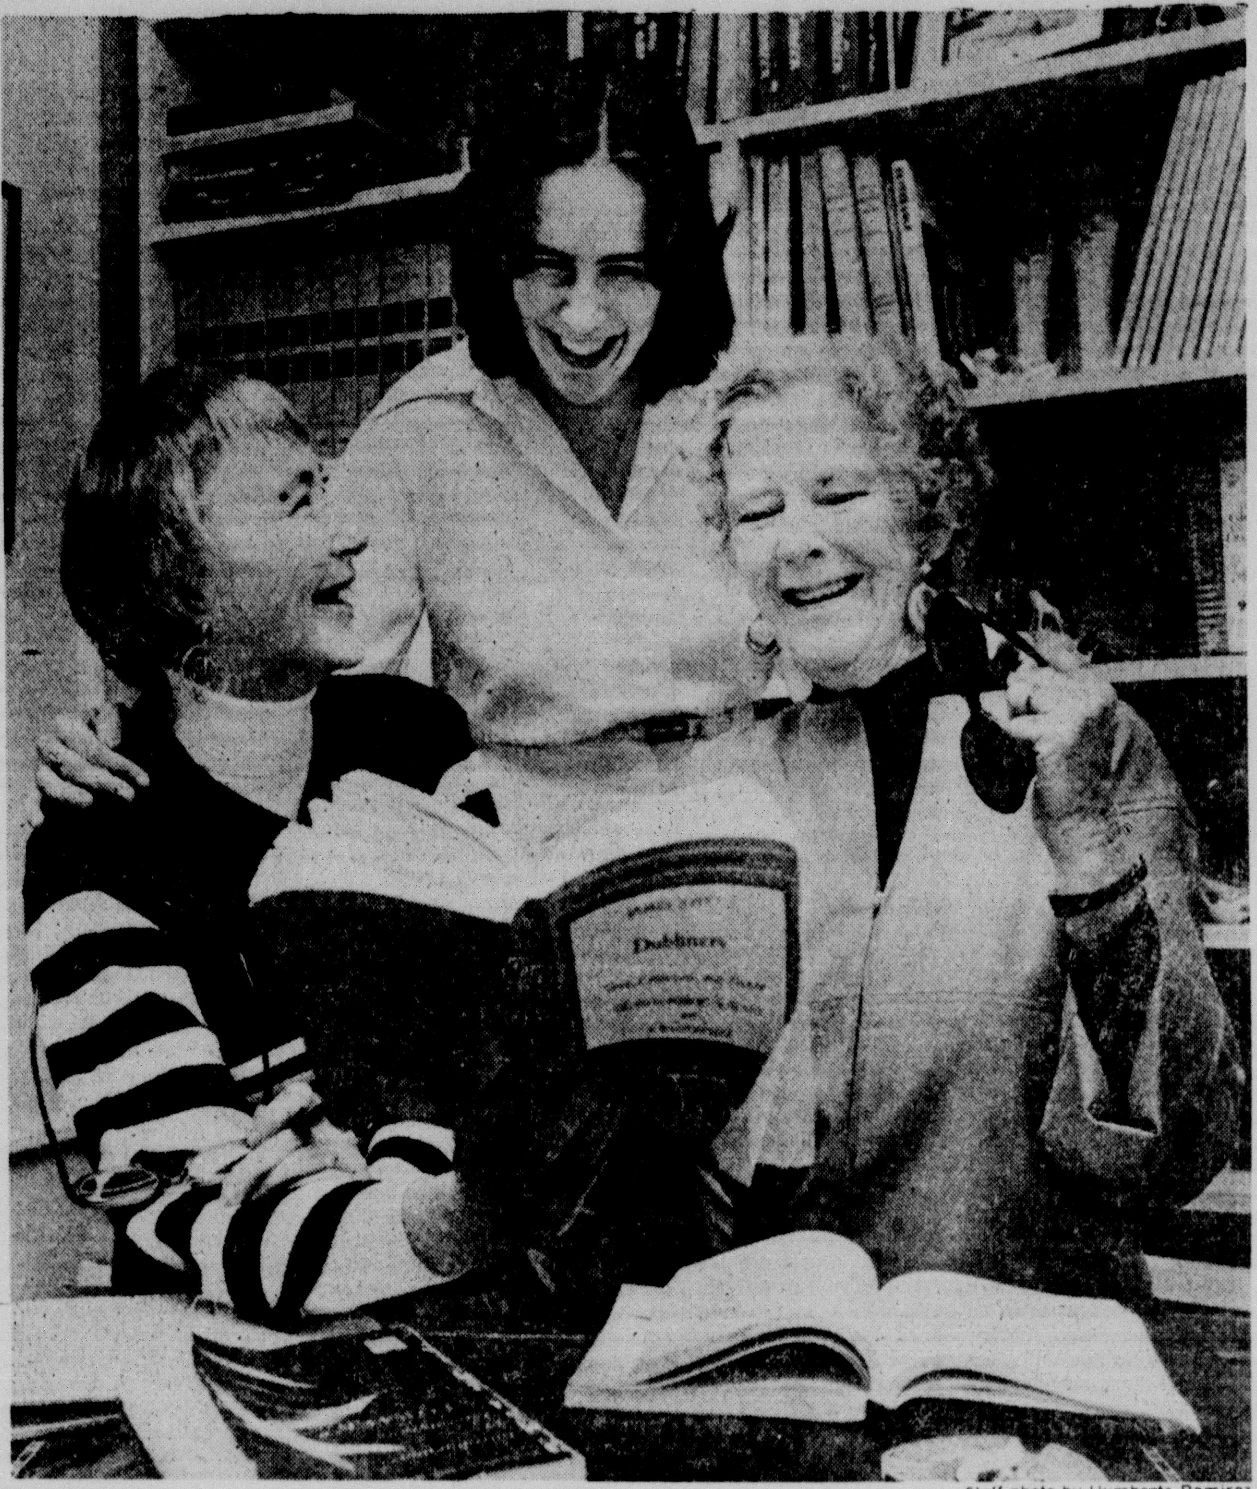
Early television fans might have caught her in CBS's first live western, "Action in the Afternoon" which made the tube in 1953. "All you had to do was be able to talk and ride a horse," she says, modestly, of her acting start in the western stock company. Just five years ago she was on the stage in an Equity production with Liza Minnelli.

"Father said Mother was born acting, and he didn't mean it complimentarily," Mrs. Voorhees intervened with a laugh. Her father, she remembers, called all actors long-haired men and short-haired women — and that was quite an indictment back then.

Reading was much more acceptible in the family. "Reading has always been a priority," Mrs. Voorhees said. "The vacuuming doesn't get done and the dishes don't get washed. Reading comes first."

Mrs. Voorhees too had an interrupted college career. She had always wanted to study music, but back then her dad gave his okay for college only if she studies nursing, home economics or medical technology. She chose the last, but married before she finished. Child-rearing came next. Now, at last, she's enrolled full-time at UNL with a major in music and a minor in English.

Just as her mother and grandmother tip the traditional student scale in one direction, Katie, on the other end, is younger than most students. She went through Pius X High School in three years and, at 17, will be a college freshman this fall. She's getting a head start on her credits and doesn't mind that her first college experience is a family affair.



Mrs. Voorhees (left), Katie and Mrs. Morris read Joyce together.

Slow down, America, you're missing something.

You're probably just watching the utility poles and billboards clip by a lot slower than before . . . and cussing about it.

I'll be the first to agree that the Interstate Highway System wasn't designed for 55 m.p.h., but 55 is probably a bit too fast for some of the state's more beautiful, and lesser known roads — like Highway 13, a short nine-mile stretch between Highways 59 and 84, in Knox County.

I ran across this road in the lush rolling hills of the northeast Nebraska county quite by accident during a recent trip. Curiosity took me to look at the tiny community of Winnetoon, west of Creighton, and also a dead end — no more paved road, or story.

So, I took 13 as an attractive alternative to retracing my tracks back to the major highway. Among other things I saw Bazile Mills, not whom, but what . . . a small town of 44 with a picture-perfect white church steeple poking out of the hills.

Suddenly I was 16 again as I saw a young farm boy, obviously freshly scrubbed and probably on his way to visit his girl in Bazile Mills. He was driving the family car, also freshly scrubbed, and we shared an equal anxiety about what the night might bring. He with his girl, and me with this whole stretch of fresh territory.

The quiet dusk was broken with the chug-pop-pop of an old one-lung John Deere tractor, driven by a farmer taking advantage of the waning daylight to finish his plowing.

Those one-cylinder tractors were a remarkable machine, and among the many sounds I grew up with in western Nebraska farm country. That tractor was as reliable as this farmer's land had been through the years.

On another hillside was a Hereford cow trying to moo some sense into her frisky calf who seemed more concerned about playing than grazing.

Too soon the weathered old barns with somewhat majestic cupolas; the white farmhouses with their lightening rod roofs; the battered old implements, all gave way to another speedway and I was sucked out of dreamland back to the pavement.

An occasional "Eat Gas Now" and a few "Gas Oil Beer" signs twinked on the roadside, beckoning the weary traveler to sit for a spell — but the 18-wheelers and the four-wheelers whizzed on by. . . and I joined them, aiming for another story deadline.

To my surprise, and pleasure, things were rather relaxed at the other end of that deadline. Crofton newspaper publisher John Kerr was busting his buttons like a proud father as he showed me his latest purchase, a shiny silver '67 Corvette, classic.

As we went for a ride in the sleek fastback, slicing the farmland between Crofton and the recently retired town of Niobrara, Kerr marveled over the size of a crow that flew up from the borrow pit.

"Do people notice things like that?" he asked.

Newspaper people do sometimes, country people for sure, and maybe a few city folk. But people are just too preoccupied with everything at eye level to take a look at a bird in flight, a flower growing, or a bug making his way through life.

"Maybe it's our job to make people slow down a bit," he said, gearing down his 'Vette and slowing up himself to take in the scenery.

Give it a try. Look down, or up, for a welcome change.

Pier manager hates to fish

Deerfield Beach, Fla. (AP) — Charley Thompson runs the Deerfield Beach fishing pier, but if pressed, he'll admit he hates to fish.

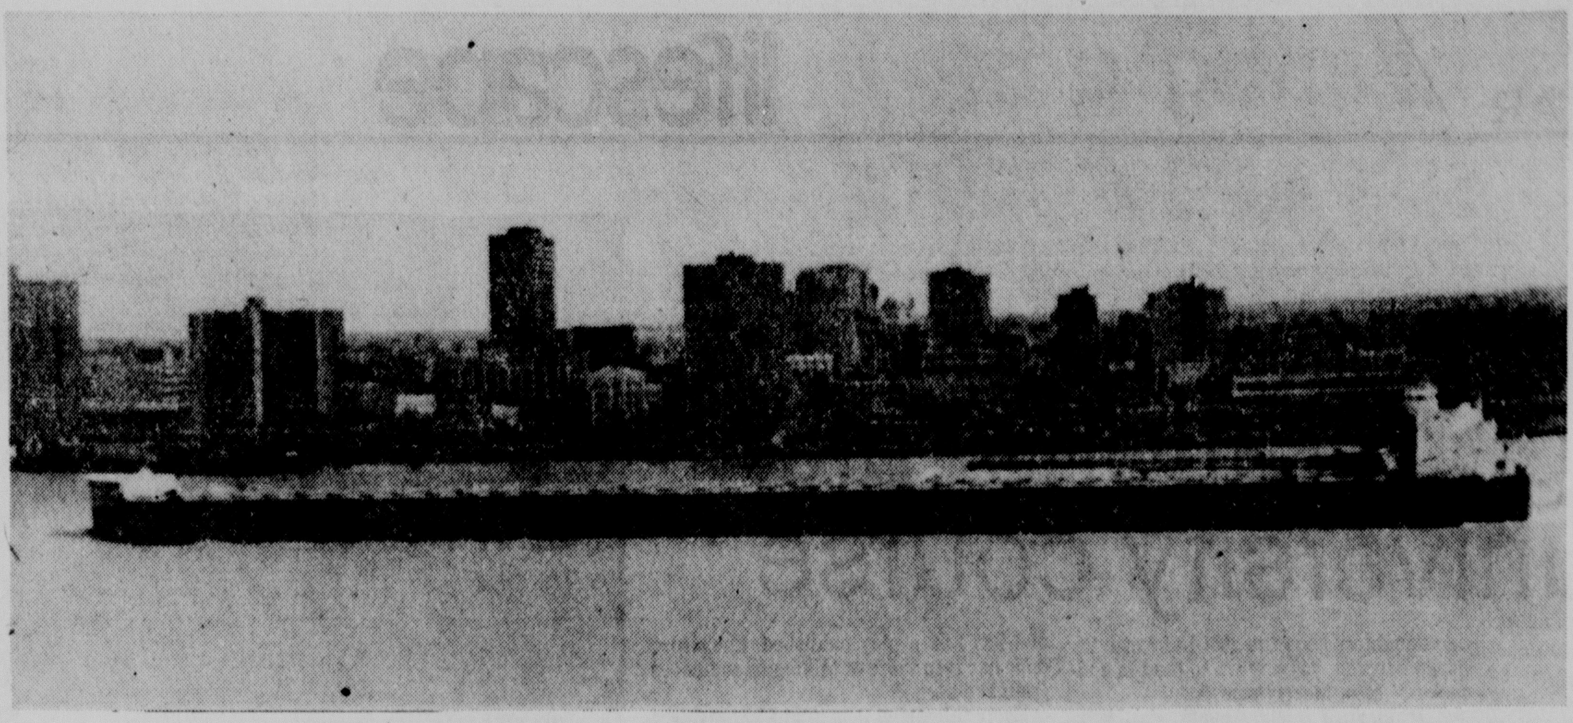
"I hate to tell people I don't like to fish, but it's true," says the former Cleveland resident who has run the pier since 1968. "I don't have the patience for it. I got better things to do than stand out in the hot sun."

Thompson does well, however, at getting people who do like to fish to do it at Deerfield Beach. Thie pier, open around the clock seven days a week, had an estimated 40,000 customers last year.

They included then-President Gerald Ford, campaigning in Florida for election.

"I heard he was coming to Fort Lauderdale, so I sat down and wrote him an invitation in longhand on a yellow legal pad," Thompson said.

"I told him my secretary ran off with a fish hook salesman. I guess that did it."



Longer ship

The Mesabi Miner, the fourth and newest 1,000-foot supership on the Great Lakes, seems to stretch the length of downtown Windsor, Ontario, in this shot from across the Detroit River. After being christened Saturday in Duluth, it will haul iron pellets from Minnesota to ports on lower Lake Michigan.

Dear Abby

By
Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl who many times has felt like going further than I should with a boy I really like. Abby, I'm going to ask you a question I wish I could ask my mother but can't because all I would get is a lecture.

Why should a girl be expected to wait until she's married to have sex? We all have normal passions that get stronger with adolescence. Married people have an outlet for their sex, but what about unmarried people?

Other countries like Samoa permit premarital sex. Why can't we? I can see logical reasons for not being promiscuous, such as danger of venereal disease and unwanted pregnancy, but when two people want sex and know how to prevent disease and pregnancy, why the big "No No"?

Our society is so advanced in other ways, but it insists that unmarried people either suppress their normal sex urges or pretend they don't exist.

If there is any good reason why kids who are in love should refrain from premarital sex, I' like to know what it is.

SPEAKING FOR TEENS

DEAR SPEAKING: The big "No No" is not the relationship between two normal, healthy, MATURE, responsbile people "in love"; it's the use of sex by the immature, irresponsible, confused adolescent who mistakes his first sexual stirrings for "love."

"Knowing" how to prevent unwanted pregnancies and venereal disease is not enough to prevent them; witness NO decline in illegitimacy even with the Pill. And in spite of all the education concerning venereal disease, it's still a major public health problem.

When you are ready to accept all the responsibilities and commitments of "love" and a family, you will not ask me what is wrong with premarital sex.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reference to a letter from DAZED, who ridiculed her friend for spending so much money on her dog's funeral. Thank you, Abby, for saying that to some people their pets are their "children."

My beautiful Chihuahua, Chichi, died last year at the age of 14, and if I had had the money to give her an elaborate funeral, I would have gladly spent it.

When Chichi got sick, the vet told me her kidneys were failing, so I offered one of mine, but he said he could get a dog's kidney if he thought it would help.

Yes, Chichi was my "child." Actually, she was more loving than a human child. She loved me and asked for nothing in return but my love.

I know many children who don't give their parents love, but expect their parents to give them everything in creation.

So, if a person really wants love, he should get a pet and love it like a child.

ANOTHER PET LOVER

DEAR PET LOVER: We are a nation of pet lovers. I will come as no surprise to you that Americans spend more money on pet food than on baby food.

Scientists nearing goal of sperm sex separation

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

Some Nebraska scientists don't want the big buck; they only want to help ease the world's hunger problems. And they may be close enough to their goal that any more progress would spell success.

They're involved in research to invent an apparatus that's able to separate the male and female sperm in bull semen.

The project is the 25-year-old pet of Dr. D. C. Bhattacharya, from India (who was unable to be contacted for this story because he had secluded himself in his Omaha-based laboratory). His friends call him "Dr. B."

"He's kind of a mad scientist. He'll work 24 hours a day if he thinks he's near something important," said Dr. Bert Evans, a consultant and stockholder for Cattle Reproduction, Inc., Dr. B's company.

"The company's had a lot of ups and downs," said Evans, an agricultural economist with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. "We're careful about what we say because we're still in the Model T stage. But we're close to what would be a basic scientific breakthrough."

The breakthrough would mean gaining the ability to determine the sex of a beef or dairy animal. This could be priceless to cattle concerns, from starving Third World countries to high-priced exotic breed merchants.

"Ket's say we could send a number of dairy cattle to an African country that has a drastic lack of protein," Egans hypothesized. "We could inseminate them with a 90% guarantee that they'll reproduce females, guaranteeing more milking animals for that country."

Currently, with the hit-or-miss method, dairy cattle reproduce about 55% male and 45% female cattle. Male cattle don't give milk.

In beef cattle, the process is a bit more complicated, but put simply, it would mean that the more desirable sex in a particular breed could be guaranteed about 90% of the time, Evans said.

The process could be coupled with existing biotechnology, he explained, making the process more efficient and prolific.

He gave as an example placing the embryo from one cow in the womb of another cow for development. If beef or dairy producers find an animal that produces excellent stock for its particular species, it could be impregnanted up to 10 times a year and the embryo transplanted with good chances of the offspring's sex being predetermined.

The new optimism is due to a two-year-old marriage between two experimental methods of sperm separation, Evans said, one developed for cattle by Dr. B and the other for people in Japan.

Dr. B's method involves using a specially designed vacuum tube that electronically warms its insides while cooling its outsides. Since male sperm is about 4% lighter than female sperm, the male components rise to the top while the female sinks to the bottom.

In earlier research, Dr. B learned to differentiate male and female sperm through a dying process, a breakthrough in itself. By finding where the male and female sperm divide, required insemination amounts can be syphoned away.

"That process was tried on about 500 cattle and we were able to produce results of 40% male and 60% female," Evans said. "That's a significant shift."

Later, Dr. B read a scientific journal article about Japanese scientists using an electronic method of separating male and female sperm in human semen, Evans said.

He adapted the process to his separation apparatus and got better, but not perfect, results.

"We had some tests coming back 50-50," Evans said. "But in certain breeds and individual bulls, we were getting results of 80 to 90%."

In the meantime, work goes on in Omaha and Lincoln with support from straight insemination services done by the company.

Other income hasn't worried the doctor or Evans, whose motives are more humanitarian than capitalistic.

"We're not out to make a killing," Evans said. "The doctor's real motives are finding a way to help feed the world. All we want is enough income to keep going."

"We've turned down a lot of fast buck artists because of that," Evans said.

Moore does really intricate work himself.

Glass blower likes creating new apparatus

Honorable though his calling may be, the skilled craftsman rarely gets in on the ground floor of history.

But research in Nebraska into separting male and female sperm in cattle semen has included a Lincoln artisan in the creation of parts for the final apparatus.

The artisan is Lloyd Moore, the scientific glass blower for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Moore's talents were sought by Cattle Research, Inc., a company founded by Dr. D. C. Bhattacharya, who's from India and making his home in Omaha, when the decision was made years ago to make the major components of the new apparatus out of glass.

In addition to his glassblowing tasks at the university, Moore opeates a private business on the side called Pear Labs, which commissions glassblowing assignments from private corporations.

"It's by far not the first scientific project I've worked on," Moore said, "but it is the first brand new scientific method I've been in on.

"The rest have been new designs of old methods," he said.

Moore has more than 20 years of glassblowing experience and is the only privately practicing glassblower in Nebraska.

Dealing with the tight tolerances on volume and glass thickness moved Moore to work on this project himself and not include any assistants.

"I'm the only one because it requires such precision," he said. "It all has to be done by hand and I'm more qualified to do the intricate work."

Although Moore works from a design, he has no qualms about calling the company and making suggestions about the apparatus' construction.

"Most of the time I'll just call the doctor and tell him that something may work better stabilized differently or I'd change a type of taper in the glass, but that's about all," he said.

So far, Moore has made one prototype of the complicated mechanism, three duplicates and is in the process of making three more for use by foreign scientists.

"It's a more difficult job than normal," Moore said, "because every part is new and they all have to be made by hand.

"And because the function is so intricate, each new unit must be exactly like the first," he said.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

Bridge is not like ticktacktoe, where you can't lose if you play the game correctly. There are situations where all you can do is exercise your best judgment and hope everything comes out all right.

Here is a typical case. Let's say you're West and lead the king of hearts. Dummy plays the seven, East the nine, and declarer the three. What would you do next?

It is clear that East's nine is a come-on signal requesting a heart continuation. But what is not clear is whether partner is signaling to show the doubleton nine and wants you to cash the ace and play a third heart so that he can overruff dummy — or whether he has the queen and wants to play a low heart at trick two so that he can win it and return a diamond.

In the actual deal, your decision is crucial. If you play the ace of hearts, South makes the contact; if you play a low heart, South goes down after East wins and shifts to a diamond.

As a defender, how do you solve such a problem? The answer is that you follow probabilities, that is, you decide whether East is more likely to have a doubleton heart or to have the queen. Expressed differently, you must decide which of these two types of hands declarer is more apt to hold:

1. ♠AKxxxx ♥Qxxxx ♦A ♣x
2. ♠AKQxxx ♥xx ♦Axxx ♣x

There is only a remote chance of finding South with precisely five hearts and East with a higher trump than dummy's jack, but a very good chance of finding East with the queen of hearts. Accordingly, you play a low heart at trick two and South goes down one.

Medical TV show made for doctors

Buenos Aires, Argentina (UPI) — A pharmaceutical company is sponsoring a monthly late night television show for doctors, a "medical program for the medical profession."

The sponsor, Merck Sharp and Dohme, Argentina, said the show, "Laboratory 77," would not interest the general public.

To prove it, they called their first program, aired at 11:30 p.m. April 19, "Glomerulonephritis." It has something to do with nerve trouble in the kidneys.

Beware of energy frauds

Life Begins At Forty

The Federal Trade Commission is warning consumers to beware of "energy-saving" home improvement frauds. Presideant Carter's energy program has zeroed in on such items as insulation and solar heaters, and potential purchasers need to realize that some of the old siding, roofing, insulation rip-off artists are using the new energy consciousness to gull new victims.

Solar heating is in its infancy and there is no cheap method for installing it. Even solar hot-water heaters are costly.

The best way to protect yourself from these, as from other schemes, is to deal only with persons whom you know either in person or by reputation or on whom you can run a check with a local bank, Chamber of Commerce, or Better Business Bureau.

If you need roofing, insulation, or siding, shop around for the best legitimate bargain. If possible, first go to the library and check out Consumer's Guide to see what the price and quality range is for the item you need, and which brands are recommended.

Keep an eye on the news from Washington. Not all of the President's energy package will become law, so some of the proposed benefits to homeowners may never materialize, despite what an over-zealous or unscrupulous salesperson may tell you.

San Francisco — To the chicks who live in our Wonderful Land of Oz, the Greatest Guru is Werner Erhard who rewinds their psychic clockwork with a thing called est.

Erhard doesn't operate directly in Oz. (Marvelous Marin, CA.) But we're all into astrology and laying on of hands so we contribute many students.

The course is a toughie: "Once you're inside the hall, you can't go out until it's over," a girl graduate told me. "Not even to go to the bathroom."

Erhard started modestly in a pigeon loft in North Beach. Now has branches (run by trained helpers) all around the country. A fast brain food chain.

I only get a few pickusp on est — not listening enough, I guess. I get it at lunch. We don't have many professional waitresses here. The girls who work the tables are also into reading palms. Studying the Lost Lemurians whose continent lies under the Pacific.

They think the world of their est experience. Lot of them go back once in awhile to get their psychic opticals refitted.

What doe it do? "It made me know myself. Who I really am."

You can't knock that.

☆ ☆ ☆

With no more splash than filling the dachshund's water bowl, the girl who keeps our scatter in order stopped smoking.

There's a resident guru who turns you off cigarettes.

It costs $150. "But I save more than that in a year."

She said: "You have to go twice a week. I can't explain it all. But he just talks to you. You see that you don't have to smoke."

She talked to the dude — (she was a two-pack-a-day person). And she just stopped. Like that. Period.

"Was it hard?" "No, it's easy."

I said: "Have you got a match on you?"

These voodoo things make me nervous. Makes me smoke more. She went right on vacuuming. (Living in a house demolished daily by a pair of moppets is enough to put me on early martinis. But she doesn't even reach for a filter tip.)

☆ ☆ ☆

The men in the Land of Oz are seekers, too. Most of them play a moody guitar. They wear sandals — "Because it makes you free, man."

Their sugar is unrefined, and they take their carrot juice freshly squeezed and straight.

We're all into vitamins. I pop a few multis now and then to keep up with the times. Though I'm no John Denver, the dachshund adores me when I play, "Lovin' Sam From Alabam'."

☆ ☆ ☆

Muffins who graduated from Erhard's est say it changed their lives.

I said: "You mean you feel better?"

She said: "Well, you can't put it that way. It's not like getting on some kind of high. It doesn't make you more energetic. I guess it makes you more thoughtful.

"Anyway, I feel like a different person."

Besides est, most of our seekers keep a finger on their astrological pulse. They twirl biorhythm wheels to get the daily forecast.

"This is one of my emotionally critical days."

(On days like that, break all dates. Stay home and read: "Your Erroneous Zones.")

Many are vegetarians. Some are in touch with the Masters on the Astral Plane. (The Concorde of psychic flying.)

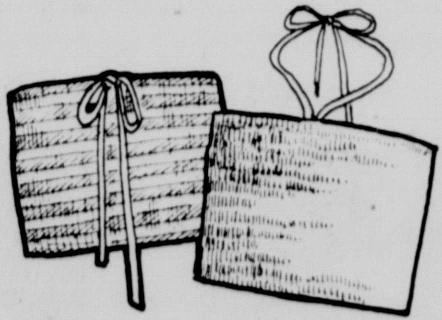
THE SIX MILLION DOLLAR MAN



Officials ponder upkeep funding

Associated Press

Officials from state agencies began Wednesday tackling the knotty job of figuring out how to establish priorities that would act as a sort of shoehorn in fitting deferred maintenance needs into available revenues.

In an informal meeting called by Stan Matzke, director of the Department of Administrative Services, the representatives of the various agencies were asked to establish a format showing their needs.

During the session, it was apparent the $4.4 million available in fiscal 1977-78 for the program outlined in the recent Unicameral's LB309 would only make a dent in the overall needs.

Bob Pazderka, representing the University of Nebraska, said the university alone has $20 million worth of deferred maintenance.

"Each agency is going to have certain class one projects that need to be done," he said. "We could come in with $20 million."

Roger Rutledge of the legislative fiscal staff said it was true the university had more buildings than other agencies and so more need, but he also offered some criticism.

"They (the university) haven't done such a good job of maintaining the buildings," he said.

"Is that because they haven't asked for the money?" Matzke asked.

"Yeah," replied Rutledge. "There's too many other things that the administrators would rather ask for."

Rutledge said the $4.4 million figure the first year could be much lower than the amounts sought the second and third years.

"Then you'll find out whether the legislators really meant what they said or not," he said.

Kearney Sen. Ron Cope, a member of the Appropriations Committee, told the agency heads and staffers that a good program the initial year would encourage more legislative funding in later years.

"It seems to me if we can make a good showing with this $4.4 million, the legislature will be more inclined to help out more," he said. "I think what we do this first year is vitally important."

Larceny plea made by Offutt surgeon

Omaha (UPI) — An Air Force surgeon has agreed to resign in exchange for the federal government dismissing felony narcotics charges filed against him after he allegedly gave amphetamines to a police undercover officer in exchange for acts of prostitution.

Lt. Col. Edward Paget, 47, pleaded guilty Wednesday to larceny of government property and was fined $1,000 by U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Thalken said in exchange for Paget's plea on the misdemeanor charge, the government dropped felony counts of distributing a controlled substance and falsifying a prescription.

The counts were dismissed without prejudice upon the condition that Paget, an Offutt Air Force Base physician, resign from the Air Force.

Thalken said the Air Force would initiate dismissal proceedings against Paget who agreed not to contest the dismissal action.

Paget was arrested Jan. 27 in the Crossroads Shopping Center parking lot after he delivered 18 dexedrine tablets to Omaha Police Officer Patricia Sweeney, who was working as an undercover agent at the time.

The government said Paget gave the policewoman the tablets as advance payment for acts of prostitution.

A subsequent investigation showed, the government said, Paget had prepared a false and fraudulent prescription for 30 dexedrine tablets at the Berquist Medical facility at Offutt earlier the day he was arrested.

Schoolhouse being remodeled into residence burns to ground

A country schoolhouse being remodeled into a residence burned to the ground early Wednesday two miles east of Waverly.

The Lancaster County Sheriff's office was holding a 20-year-old man, in connection with possible arson.

Filled with lumber and other building materials, the building was "totally engulfed in flames" when firemen arrived from Waverly, according to chief Harold Nansel. The building was unoccupied at the time.

The owner, Tony Jelen, had recently moved the schoolhouse from its original site to the acreage at 176th and Bluff Rd., Nansel said.

A neighbor reported the fire.

Nebraska girl has hopes TV pilot is her big break

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

When Bobbie Vrana was young and lived in Fremont, when bathtubs and bubbles were a time of dreaming, she thought of the day when she would be a Madison Avenue beauty: "I thought I'd be a great Dove girl."

Now Bobbie has grown up to age 29, and her dream hasn't changed.

She moved to Los Angeles and became known by the name of Bobbie Mitchell. She made about 50 television commercials: among them, ads for Pepsi, Coca-Cola, Shower Massage, Toyota and Metropolitan Life.

Now, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Ted Vrana of Lincoln hopes the big break will start Wednesday evening, when, along with Red Buttons ("a real pro") and Lionel Stander ("one of the greatest human beings"), she will star in the one-hour television version of "The Sunshine Boys."

The show will be aired on Channel 3, KMTVin Omaha, at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Neil Simon, who wrote the script for the original play, also wrote the script for the TV pilot. The story is about two vaudevillian partners, now old and full of bitterness for each other, who team up again 20 years after the act has ended.

NBC-TV has not agreed to buy a weekly half-hour series based on "The Sunshine Boys." TV executives are not sure how viewers will react to a show about two elderly men, Ms. Mitchell said.

A lot depends on how well the pilot rates with the Nielsens, she said.

Ms. Mitchell plays Myrna, a secretary for an acting agency. The role, which was not in the original play, adds a "youth interest" to the show, she said.

Ms. Mitchell describes Myrna as "very efficient and really into being a secretary."

Ms. Mitchell said about 200 persons auditioned for the Myrna role. But, she said, she wasn't surprised when she got the part.

After, all, she said she has been working toward the big break for eight years. She moved to New York City after she graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. She had been a home economics major.

"I was definitely an outcast," she said. "They (home economics professors) told me, 'This is not for you.' "

Ms. Mitchell has appeared in several television series. Among them, "M.A.S.H." (she was Alan Alda's girlfriend for three years), "Lotsa Luck," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "Charlie's Angels" and "Police Woman."

Ms. Mitchell said that even if "The Sunshine Boys" doesn't work out, she has hopes for a successful year.

She said she recently had two "good auditions" for movie roles: one starring Dustin Hoffman, the other Warren Beatty.

"At this time last year, I was getting coughs and sniffles," she said.

Democrats to discuss campaign resolution

Associated Press

The Nebraska Democratic Central Committee Sunday will debate a resolution saying party officials should lose their posts if they campaign for a Republican running for a nonpartisan office.

The proposal has the backing of Dianna Schimek of Lincoln, associate state chairman, and Jack Cary of Kearney, third district chairman.

But the proposal faces opposition. State Democratic Treasurer Loren Belker of Lincoln, for example, says the resolution is foolish.

Mrs. Schimek raised the issue at a recent state executive committee meeting. She and Cary voted for the proposal; six others, including Belker, were opposed.

It wasn't mentioned during the meeting, but Belker's open support of Republicans Joe Hampton and Leo Scherer in the nonpartisan Lincoln City Council elections this spring helped bring the issue to a head.

Rosemary Bauer of Lincoln, first district Democratic chairman, also campaigned for a registered Republican in the council race, T. R. Allan.

Mrs. Schimek says party officials who feel obligated to work for non-Democrats should resign their party positions.

Belker says it is "ridiculous to demand blind obedience where the party isn't even involved."

Mrs. Schimek says she understands there will be times when Democratic officials "can't give wholehearted support to Democrats, but their role should be to stay quiet and out of the race, not help the Republicans."

Grain co-op files suit to recover back taxes

United Press International

The Cooperative Grain and Supply Co. of Roseland has filed suit in U.S. District Court seeking recovery of $129,478 the co-op says the Internal Revenue Service improperly charged it for back taxes and interest.

The suit said the co-op paid $38,197 in taxes to the IRS for the yeasrs 1962 through 1972 but that the federal agency said nearly $130,000 in additional taxes and interest were owed.

The co-op paid the money, then filed claims to recover the funds. It argued it was an exempt farmers cooperative and that most of its capital stock is owned by producers who market their products and buy most of their supplies and equipment through the co-op.

The suit said the IRS would not recognize as an excludable item for tax purposes patronage refunds the co-op paid during the years involved.

Methodists name three priorities

The United Methodist Church General Conference has adopted three priorities for the 1977-80 quadrennium — evangelism, world hunger and ethnic minorities within the church.

A total of $124,000 per year was earmarked for evangelism from the Missional Priority Fund. Nebraska's yearly share of this is $1,562.

A goal of $5.5 million annually was set to fund the ethnic minority local church efforts. Of this amount, 1.5 million was included in the special missional priority fund for ethnic minority local churches; $500,000 for Hispanic, Asian and Native American scholarships; and $3.5 million is being sought annually in the ethnic minority local church advance special.

Nebraska's yearly share is $24,219, with a yearly goal for the advance special of $42,382.

Annual support being sought for the hunger missional priority is about $5 million. Nebraska's yearly share is $24,219. Its goal for the hunger advance special is $36,328.

York woman files $250,000 lawsuit

A York woman is suing the Far-Mar-Co Grain Elevator in Lincoln for $250,000 in damages over a 1973 accident in which her husband broke both feet, both legs and three back vertebrae.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, says Gary R. Morgan has been permanently disabled since he fell 36 ft. through a hole in the elevator's catwalk. Morgan was installing a dust filter when he fell.

His wife, Kathy, has asked for the damages because she contends she has lost his consortium and because she has suffered by seeing him in great pain and discomfort.

State investigators probe roadside use of herbicide

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

An investigator for the Department of Environmental Control (DEC) examined several stretches of road in Lancaster County Wednesday to determine whether a chemical being used by the Norris Public Power District is contaminating ponds and roadside ditches.

The herbicide, Tordon 10K, has been spread on trees growing under Norris electric transmission lines. About 80% of the area along the lines in a 3,000-square mile area of southeast Nebraska has been treated with Tordon pellets.

Norris officials have said the chemical is used only on trees which threaten to interfere with those lines.

Areas where the herbicide has been used near Lincoln include stretches of 56th and 68th Sts. south of Lincoln and along Saltillo Road.

DEC officials and the Game and Parks Commission were asked to investigate after property owners contended that Tordon also is killing grass, shrubs, flowers and vegetables.

DEC investigator Clark Smith, who works in the water pollution control division, said he is primarily concerned whether Tordon 10K has polluted ponds and water running along roadside ditches. DEC is investigating whether Norris has violated any laws should the herbicide be found to have contaminated ponds and water.

Smith said he met with Norris representatives Wednesday who took him to inspect several areas where they have used the chemical. He also visited a farmer who has complained about the use of the herbicide. Smith said he still is in the process of writing his report and may have to conduct several other tests before he can announce what he has found.

Game and Parks Commission officials are investigating whether the chemical is destroying wildlife habitat.

John Furrer, a herbicide specialist for the Lancaster County Extension Service, said that Tordon is not toxic to wildlife or people. Furrer noted, however, that Tordon is the same chemical which did extensive plant damage in Kimball County 10 years ago after it seeped into wells.

Furrer said the utility may have applied the chemical in too high a concentration because along some lines, not only have the trees died but grass around them seems to have died also.

Carl Wolfe, wildlife research supervisor for the Game and Park Commission, also suspects that the herbicide chemical has not been properly applied.

The use of Tordon "is not justifiable other than for killing trees," he asserted.

District court judges' recordkeeping rapped

A state auditor's check of the state's district court operations revealed that the judges haven't been keeping as close a track on their recordkeeping as the auditors would like.

The audit covered four years worth of recordkeeping from 1972-76 and included the state's 48 district court judges, the probation administration and the field probation service.

Although the audit found no major problems, the report did recommend changes in the following areas:

— Records were not adequate for maintaining accounting control over federal grants.

— Payroll procedures lacked formal review and approval.

— The sick leave policy records violated the agency's policy.

— Money received was not deposited with the state treasurer in all instances, in violation of state law.

In all cases, the recommendations suggested by the auditor's office will be followed, the report noted.

Approval of health grants recommended

By Carol Goodwin
Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency's project review committee recommended three grant applications to the SeNHSA board of directors for approval during a Wednesday night meeting.

Recommended for approval were:

— The Lincoln Medical Education Foundation's area health education consortium application for $163,569 in federal funds. The application is a continuation proposal for the planning, coordination and provision of health manpower education in the 17-county area of the SeNHSA.

— The state venereal disease control program's application for $162,159 in federal funds, a continuation proposal to help control veneral disease in the state.

— The Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs' employe assistance program application for $6,588 in federal funds from the State Division on Acoholism, a continuation proposal for identification and referral to treatment of individuals whose drinking is impairing job performance. The annual project cost is $55,253.

Two other grant applications were held over until next month for further clarification and information.

They were the state home health care program's expansion proposal for $163,569 in federal funds, and the state immunization program application for $127,370 in federal funds.

The project review committee also discussed the procedure for reviewing three new applications, two of which will be reviewed by the committee during a meeting next month.

The Lincoln Medical Education Foundation's Medical library application and Tabitha Home's application for satellite home health agencies, which would serve Cass and Otoe Counties, will be considered by the committee next month.

The committee will make a recommendation to the board of a project review task force to consider the addition to and remodeling of Annie Jeffrey Memorial County Hospital in Osceola.

The board also received a copy of a letter from the Health Planning Council of the Midlands concerning the state's decision to overturn one of the council's recommendations. The council suggests that two changes be made in the procedure for reviews: that there is citizen involvement in state level project reviews and that whenever a decision is overturned on the state level, a written statement be provided stating the basis for the state's contrary recommendation.

Stock prices advance in fairly active trade

Dow Ind. +4.32

New York (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad advance in fairly active trading Wednesday.

More than two issues gained for every loser on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 4.32 at 912.99, giving up some of a gain of more than 6 points it showed earlier in the day.

Big Board volume totaled 22.20 million shares, up slightly from 21.11 million the previous session.

The upward trend was seen largely as the continuation of a technical rally which started Tuesday after the Dow average dipped to around 900.

Buyers started moving in at that point and continued bargain hunting on Wednesday, analysts said.

Twentieth Century Fox, an active issue since the announcement of successful box office returns on its new film "Star Wars," topped the NYSE active list. It posted a one-point gain to close at 20⅞.

Other actively traded issues included American Telephone and Telegraph, unchanged at 62⅝, and Avis, down ½ to 20½.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index advances .42 to 113.76.

Third party complaint filed in Pathfinder Hotel lawsuit

Fremont (AP) — The manufacturer of a metal coupling involved in a natural gas explosion at the Fremont Pathfinder Hotel has been named in a third party complaint in lawsuits stemming from loss of life and property.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours, Inc., is seeking a third party complaint in Dodge County District Court against Norton McMurray Manufacturing Co. of Geneva, Ill.

Du Pont is named in at least 27 lawsuits seeking damages from losses suffered in the Jan. 10, 1976, hotel explosion and fire, which claimed 18 lives outright and damaged much of downtown Fremont.

Investigators determined the blast occurred when a two-inch piece of plastic pipe, made by du Pont and installed by Nebraska Natural Gas Co., pulled away from a metal coupling made by McMurray.

In its third party complaint, du Pont denies all claims of negligence and asks that if the court determines the blast resulted from negligence, Norton McMurray be held accountable.

The complaint contends the compression fitting "failed to adequately anchor the plastic pipe, was improper for intended use without adequate safeguards to prevent cold weather pullout and . . . failed to adequately hold the pipe."

Farm real estate value up

Associated Press

Nebraska farm real estate increased almost sixfold in value between 1950 and 1976, according to an article in "Business in Nebraska."

The publication, issued by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's college of business administration, listed the increase as from more than $2.7 billion in 1950 to $16.3 billion last year.

The article by Bruce B. Johnson, assistant professor of agricultural economics, and Larry Janssen, graduate research assistant in the same department, also outlined the accrued real appreciation of the farmland for farm owners.

"For the 26-year period," the article said, "accrued real appreciation amounted to 25% of net farm income. In other words, for every four dollars of conventional net farm income received by Nebraska farmers, this group accrued one dollar in the form of real wealth gain."

The range during the period analyzed, however, was great and was termed "sporadic," with 1975 pegged as a year when farmer-owner real wealth gain was 133% of annual net farm income.

Dataphone expansion is allowed

Washington (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted 6-to-0 Wednesday to allow expansion of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s dataphone digital service to 40 more cities.

The business service permits a customer to use all-digital facilities for transmission of data at specified speeds between two or more points.

The 40 cities are in addition to 24 approval in 1975.

An AT&T spokesman said it would be six-to-seven months before any of the 40 cities start using the service. The FCC action Tuesday approved construction of the equipment involved.

Among the 40 cities authorized to use the dataphone service was Omaha, Neb.

CWA contract negotiations begin

Omaha (UPI) — Representatives of Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. and District 7 of the Communications Workers of American (CWA) Wednesday began negotiations on a new contract.

The talks will cover items that affect local working conditions for 20,500 Northwestern Bell employes in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. Bargaining on national issues began May 19 in Washington.

Union officials said the local negotiations are expected to recess Friday until June 29 because of the CWA's national convention. The CWA's current three-year contract with the bell system expires Aug. 6.

76ers' Dr. J. injects NBA fans with 'Erving-itis'

By Sam Goldaper
(c) New York Times

New York — The recently concluded National Basketball Association season will be best remembered for two significant events — the emergence of Bill Walton as one of the game's dominant centers, and the proof that Julius Erving could play the game of basketball as well as anyone who had ever played before him.

It also was the season when the four surviving American Basketball Association teams were absorbed into the NBA. For the first time in the 1970's, all pro basketball was united in one league.

If the biggest winner was Walton, the biggest drawing card was Erving, the gravity-defying Dr. J. Although the Philadelphia 76ers failed to win the championship, Erving won the hearts and minds of the basketball public.

Erving is now in Las Vegas, where he is competing in the Dewar's Cup celebrity tennis tournament. In a telephone interview, he answered questions about himself, his teammates, the future of the 76ers and related basketball matters.

Q. Do you think there will be any changes in the 76ers?

A. The organization will probably look to improve itself as does every club at the end of the season. They try to do it from within or from the outside. Thre are some 50 free agents around.

Q. If you were the coach or the general manager of the 76ers, what would be your first priority to improve the team?

A. Unless they decide to use Terry Furlow as the big guard, I would think that is our greatest need. We are strong at the small guard with Henry Bibby, Lloyd Free and Mike Dunleavy, but when Doug Collins goes out, we have nobody to replace him.

Q. Should Gene Shue (the 76ers coach) have taken a more disciplined approach to the team?

A. Personally, I would have liked to have seen more discipline. But that has to start with training camp and I wasn't there last year. I will be there next season and if there are any suggestions, that's one I will make. But who is to say we would have been a better or worse team with more or less discipline?

Q. What type coach would you like to play for?

A. I would just like to play for a coach who works at his job. I have played for three different pro coaches and all were different individuals. They all worked hard conveying their philosophies. I can't worry about whether a coach is soft, tough or friendly. I just want him doing his job.

Q. Can a championship be bought?

A. I think it can if it is done with the proper discretion in mind. I do think it's the job of the general manager and the coach to put the team together and then advise the ownership.

Q. How did you feel when there were times that you did not get the ball after showoing a hot hand?

A. I don't have any criticism. Whatever the players did, it was to try and make us win. Everybody was shooting for a cause. We were not a team, like so many with a designated shooting forward or guard, we were a lot of outstanding and talented players.

Q. As you look back on the season, do you have any frustrations?

A. No, I learned a lot. I imporved my attitude and became more experienced. The other thing I'm sorry about was how I went from the Nets to Philadelphia. My contract was my first priority. When I had no choice as to where I was going, I decided to make the best of it and enjoy it.

Q. Now that you have played in the NBA for the entire season, who do you rate Kareem Abjul-Jabbar against Walton?

A. There is no doubt that Kareem is the outstanding center, but to play one against the other is not my bag. There are things Bill does, like pitching out the ball, that Kareem can't do. Bill is also better consistently as a defensive rebounder. But I approach the game the same way no matter who is playing center. My game is to challenge them offensively.

Q. In the ABA, playing for the Mets, you beat Denver without having a dominant center. Do you think it's possible to win a championship in the NBA without a dominant center?

A. Yes. I think we would have won the championship if Free and Steve Mix would have been healthy and George McGinnis had not gone into his unfortunate slump. At full strength I still think we were the better, deeper team. A healthy Lloyd Free just can't be stopped offensively.

Q. Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets and David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets were named as the first team NBA All-Star forwards. How do you feel being relegated to the second team.

A. Both had great years. I think I had only a mediocre season compared to what I can do. Besides, the All-Star team is selected by the sportswriters and that's something that is beyond my control. I might feel disappointed, but it only tells me I have to do better.

Q. After Darryl Dankins and Maurice Lucas were fined after their fight in the third game of the chamionship round, Dawkins played terribly and Lucas didn't. Do you think the fight had an effect on Dawkings?

A. I think the fight had nothing to do with it. Maybe Walton should be given more credit than he was given for taking Darryl out of his game. I'll tell you this, in the two games we lost in Portland that tied the series, Darryl was breaking his chops when a lot of our guys were not.

So, instead of signing with the Cleveland Indians when they drafted him last January, Ferroni enrolled at Central Arizona Junior College in Coolidge, Ariz.

Now, 100 innings later, Ferroni is faced with the choice again after being picked by the Minnesota Twins as the No. 1 selection Tuesday in the secondary phase of the draft. His college coach, Ken Richardson, thinks the young southpaw no longer needs to worry about being prepared for the pros.

"He's ready to go out and play," said Richardson. "He could come back, but one more year at this level really won't help him much."

Ferroni, 18, was 8-4 with a 2.79 earned run average in 16 games for Central Arizona. He struck out 95 batters and walked 54 in the 100 innings he pitched.

"He was our stopper," said Richardson, whose team finished first in its division and second in the state playoffs. "I think the best thing for him to do as far as baseball is concerned is to go ahead and sign."

The Twins hope Ferroni agrees with his coach's position.

"He's a strong, stocky-type kid," said Minnesota scout Jess Flores, Jr., who has been watching Ferroni. "His speed and curve ball are exceptional. He has good stuff with exceptional control."

Richardson confirmed that assessment. "He has a pretty good curve and average major league velocity," the coach said. "He's a hard worker."

All of the secondary round selections were players who were drafted previously but did not sign. After completing the secondary phase, the 26 clubs returned to the regular phase of the draft which had started on Tuesday when 338 players were selected in 13 rounds.

Montreal won the draft's persistence award. The Expos, picking 10th, selected outfielder-third baseman Kalvin Adams, a teammate of Ferroni's at Central Arizona. The ironic part of the choice is that Montreal also drafted Adams as the over-all No. 1 selection last January. Obviously, their failure to sign him the first time around did not dissuade the Expos in their pursuit of Adams.

Sports fans like Phyllis over brains

Chicago (AP) — Television and newspapers-friends or foes?

Who broke the U.S. boxing championships scandal?

Would you rather watch Phyllis George ask dumb questions or someone ask smart ones?

"The plain fact is more people would rather look at Phyllis George asking innocuous questions for a minute and a half than someone else asking probing questions," said Larry Merchant, NBC's sports commentator. "That's the way it is."

Merchant, CBS broadcaster Brent Musburger, ABC Vice President Jim Spence and Chicago Tribune TV critic Gary Deeb discussed Miss George and other TV related subjects Wednesday on a panel at the Associated Press Sports Editors Convention here.

"Phyllis does not like to ask tough questions, that's not her role," said Musburger of his celebrated colleague on CBS' NFL Today. "We tried to have a woman football expert and it didn't work out. So we tried Phyllis, who doesn't pretend to be an expert, and somehow the chemistry has worked."

In any discussion of TV sports, Ms. George's name comes up often, almost as often as the trouble-plagued U.S. boxing championships on ABC. ABC has suspended the event in the wake of charges of kickbacks and false ratings. Spence was kept busy fielding questions on the subject Wednesday.

"We believed in the concept at the time and we still believe in it," said Spence. "It gives young boxers a chance to earn an honest buck. It just hasn't worked out thus far."

Lack of money no barrier: Diablos make it to CWS

Los Angeles (UPI) — Cal State Los Angeles is a commuter college with 26,000 students and a picayune $5,500 budget for its baseball team.

Despite the lack of money, Jack Deutsch, 59, a grandfather of four who believes baseball should be fun, has the Diablos in the College World Series for the first time in the school's history.

The Diablos earned a trip to Omaha, Neb., by upsetting heavily favored University of Southern California in the NCAA District 8 playoffs in Hawaii. Just because they're underdogs doesn't mean they have to feel that way, says Deutsch.

He spent 34 years in professional baseball as a player, manager and scout before accepting the Diablo coaching job this season.

"Nobody," Deutsch declares, "gave us a shot at winning our league and we did. Then nobody gave us a chance at winning the district and we did. Well, it's down to eight teams now and we could win it.

"Why not? I'm sure not going to say we won't. Heck, we're not supposed to even be in Omaha and we're going to be as loose as anything. We have everything to win and nothing to lose.

"Our players aren't afraid of anybody. We haven't backed down all year and we don't plan on starting now. If we get down a run or two, we just try a little harder."

First round schedule

Friday: Southern Illinois v. Temple, 5:10; Arizona State v. Clemson, 8:10.

Saturday: Cal. State-LA v. Minnesota, 5:10; Baylor v. South Carolina, 8:10.

The Diablos, 40-20 and champions of the Southern California Baseball Association, will face three - time NCAA baseball champion Minnesota in a first round game at Omaha Saturday.

Also in the World Series that gets under way Friday are South Carolina, Baylor, Arizona State, Clemson, Southern Illinois and Temple.

According to Deutsch, the Diablos have one bona fide major league prospect in centerfielder Darrell Brown, a junior who was his league's MVP. He hit .396 this season with 11 homers and 46 RBIs, stealing 43 bases in 48 attempts.

"But when we get a kid out of high school or junior college," he continues, "he's a second-rate kid. I mean we get the kids that the big schools don't want.

"If we're recruiting a kid, for example, and USC steps into the picture, we just back out. We know we don't have any chance after that.

"But we think we offer good coaching and those second-rate players in high school sometimes turn out to be first-rate players."

Deutsch, who lives in San Gabriel, Calif., has been working with Cal State Los Angeles baseball players for the past 10 years. A year ago, he was employed by the Bureau of Scouting.

When Larry Cochell resigned to accept the Oral Roberts post, the Diablos asked Deutsch if he wanted the job.

"I'm 59 but that hasn't been any problem," he reflects. "I've never thought of it as a problem and neither have the kids. Maybe the answer is that I've never let age concern me.

"I've always believed you should have fun when you're playing, too, and I think the kids appreciate that approach."

A sprinkling of parents and girl friends were in the stands for the Diablos' home games when the season started. By the end of the season, the crowds had grown to 400.

For the first time this year, the Diablos can be heard on the radio from Omaha.

"I doubt very seriously," remarks Deutsch, "if most of our students even know we have a baseball team. You've got thousands of kids going in four different directions.

"But there's enough people around us who keep us up. It's not the greatest type of environment but it isn't bad. Believe me, if we win this thing, though, they'll know who we are."

Lincoln man spearheads AAU program

Stop Action

By Ken
Hambleton

While the current trend in diplomatic relations seems to revolve around basketball and baseball, the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) has been trying wrestling diplomacy around the world for the past eight years.

Lincolnite Newt Copple, chairman of the AAU's wrestling committee, started a cultural-wrestling exchange with South America seven years ago and the program has blossomed into an annual trip to Europe for many U.S. wrestlers.

This year's exchanges are with Europe and Iran. The European exchange, involving some 180 midwesterners, including 26 Nebraska high school wrestlers, will send teams to Austria, Germany, Norway, Finland, England and Denmark.

"We look at this trip as possibly the most rewarding experience a high school wrestler can experience," said Copple. "The kids are not only exposed to some of the best wrestling in the world and some of the best wrestlers, but they also learn about another culture.

"We try to get everybody housed in homes rather than motels so they can experience life as their hosts live it," said Copple. "And as most of the people on the trips in the past, especially to Iron Curtain countries, they learn to appreciate the United States more."

Two of the local wrestlers included in this year's European exchange are two-time Nebraska champion Sidney Richards of Omaha Tech and Lincoln East's Gerry Jones, a qualifier in this year's state meet.

Omaha Tech wrestling coach Harry Gaylor and Omaha Bryan wrestling coach Mike Denney will coach one of the teams in Europe. Other coaches include Ron Severson of Norris High School, and Al Turner of North Dakota.

Former Nebraska Wesleyan wrestler Willie Sapp, now a teacher at Lincoln East, and Doug Nielson of Harvard will coach the team that will travel to Iran later in the summer.

The wrestlers will attend an orientation camp Friday through Wednesday at Central Michigan State University, before leaving for Europe.

"We want to show them our training camp in Michigan and teach them some things like how to say 'thank you' and 'please' and 'where do I go because I'm lost'," said trip coordinator Guenther Kruse, a native of Germany.

Kruse will help establish the side trips through the host countries which will take half of the wrestlers' time. "They'll have about eight wrestling meets during the 16-day exchange, and then they'll have time for seeing museums, the country or whatever," said Kruse.

Although the European wrestlers don't have high school wrestling, per se, they do have clubs and practice about twice a week, according to Kruse. "But the advantage won't necessarily be to the Americans, because they emphasize Greco-Roman wrestling in Europe and the U.S. works on freestyle," he said.

"The fact the wrestlers will be exposed to a lot of good Greco-Roman wrestling will help our wrestlers," said Copple, a six-time AAU champion wrestler.

"The Russians seem to have the most imput on the style it takes to become an Olympic or world freestyle champion and they place a lot of emphasis on the Greco styles," said Copple.

"The sport of the trip is important, but the whole program will benefit wrestling in the U.S. and the countries we visit," Copple said. "We've seen a lot of development from these trips in the past."

Copple noted that through the exchange program there have been more wrestlers either visiting the U.S. from abroad or U.S. wrestlers traveling, than in any other Olympic sport.

Finley: Jackson, Holtzman won't give Yanks pennant

By Red Smith
(c) New York Times

Chicago — "I'll give you an exclusive," Charlie Finley said. "The Yankees won't win the pennant, not with Reggie Jackson and Ken Holtzman. Jackson is a disruptive influence. Holtzman is the most miserable man I have met in baseball. He was with the Cubs and he hated it there. We had him in Oakland and he hated it. He hated it in Baltimore and he hates it in New York. He hates himself. We won in spite of Jackson and Holtzman, not because of them."

Charlie ("I'm proud to be controversial") Finley was relaxing with a double Scotch after telling a gaggle of Associated Press sports editors that he was preparing another lawsuit against Bowie Kuhn, a commissioner whom he describes contemptuously as a "notary" rather than a lawyer. It was pointed out that Jackson and Holtzman had been prominent in the success of Charlie's A's when they were winning three world championships in a row. In those seasons, Jackson hit 25, 32 and 29 home runs and batted in 75, 117 and 93 runs; Holtzman now 19, 21 and 19 games.

Finley would have none of it. "We won in spite of them," he repeated. "The Yankees won't win, and you can quote me."

At the start of the 1976 season, the owner of the A's sold Vida Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Red Sox for $1 million each, then sued Kuhn when the commissioner vetoed the sales "in the best interet of baseball." He lost, a federal judge here ruling that Kuhn had not exceeded his authority.

"We are in the process of appealing that decision," Charlie told the sports editors, "and I am confident the Appellate Court will set the record straight. I am announcing here today that a second suit will be filed against Kuhn in the very near future and I'd like to see him wiggle out of that one like he wiggled out of the first one when he got up on the witness stand and lied, not once but several times." He declined to describe the basis of the forthcoming suit, saying he would "rather Kuhn read it in legal form first."

Rudi and Fingers were among those who played out the option year of their contracts last season and sold themselves to other teams. Blue, still pitching for the A's, is suing Finley, charging that he was tricked into signing a new contract just before the abortive sale to New York. The three-year agreement called for a salary of $140,000 last season, $140,000 this year and $205,000 next year and provided that if Blue elected to play out his option in the fourth year, his pay would not be cut.

Charlie was asked whether his impending suit had anything to do with Blue's diminished market value. (With most of his former playmates gone, Vida's won-lost record this year is 3-7.)

"His value hasn't diminished," Finley said. "I can get as much for him now as I could if he was 7-3. They know he can pitch. Just this morning I had calls about him from Texas and California."

An hour earlier, Charlie had been jeering about "the Cowboy and all those other suckers" who had invested millions in Rudi, Fingers, Gene Tenace, Sal Bando and other fugitives from Oakland. Now he implied that "the Cowboy," Gene Autry, chief owner of the Angels, and Brad Corbett of the Rangers were still bidding for Blue. Last April Corbett said he had sought Kuhn's permission to buy Blue and the commissioner had refused.

"And I chewed Corbett out then," Charlie said now, "for consulting Kuhn on a deal before I had agreed to it. If I sold Blue to anybody, the deal would include a guarantee that Vida would play for him."

Whether he is accusing Kuhn of perjury, touting an orange baseball or foretelling the financial collapse of teams because of "astronomical and unjustified" salaries to players, Finley is seldom dull. Among other things, he said: "In case of a tie, the commissioner has the deciding vote. The American League is 100 per cent in favor of interleague play. The National is against it. All Kuhn has to say is, 'Gentlemen, there is going to be interleague play.' He hasn't got the guts to do it."

"The one big problem with baseball is no leadership. I hope the next time we appoint a commissioner we'll appoint one who knows and understands baseball, someone with a baseball background, not a notary's background." "I have had no trouble with Dick Allen at all. I had him in for some homemade chili that I made myself, and after eating the chili, he signed."

Scammahorn wins point

Auburn (UPI) — The misdemeanor assault conviction of Peru State college wrestling coach Jack Scammahorn has been reversed by Nemaha County District Court Judge William Colwell.

Scammahorn was convicted in county court March 22 of a charge of assaulting Mark Yori, a member of his wrestling team, during a Feb. 6 practice session.

He appealed the decision to the district court.

Colwell said the record did not support the earlier ruling. He said there was no intent to injure or harm Yori, no proof of malice and absence of harm.

The actions were reasonable in a coach-student relationship, Colwell said.

The judge overturned a $100 fine against the coach and ordered the state pay Scammahorn's court costs.

Valentino's, Falstaff win

Rick Kahler slugged a three-run home run and Ross Stephenson belted a solo homer Wednesday night as Valentino's nipped Dean Brothers 4-3 in AAA fast pitch action at Ballard Field.

Losing pitcher Bill Crumb's two-run double cut the Valentino's lead to 4-3 in the fourth, but neither team could score the rest of the way.

Falstaff disposed of VIP Lounge 11-1 in five innings in the nightcap as Dan Cook's three-run homer and Ned Eckman's four runs batted in provided the spark.

Losing pitcher Bruce Weffer's second inning homer was the lone tally for VIP Lounge.

A key league game Thursday matches third place Stan's Lounge (7-3) against league-leading Misty Lounge (9-0) in the 7:15 p.m. opener.

Nonparticipants

Nonhunters and nonfishermen are also being labeled nonparticipants when it comes to efforts to preserve wildlife.

The states of Ohio, Colorado and Missouri have given the faction of our society opposed to hunting and fishing the chance to actually do something about their wildlife interests. The results have been pretty dismal.

Ohio's Department of Natural Resources started a special wildlife stamp program in 1972. The $5 stamp was sold with the idea proceeds would go to develop wildlife programs not related to hunting or fishing.

Colorado and Missouri have tried similar projects. All met with the same results. The hunters and fishermen were the ones buying the majority of stamps sold.

Since Ohio's program began in 1972, some $13,270 worth of stamps have been sold. That's five years worth and it didn't generate enough money to pay the annual salary of a top-flight wildlife biologist to monitor the program.

Colorado sold something like $5,000 worth. Missouri isn't bothering to total its sales up.

Since all three found out it was the hunter and fishermen doing most of the buying, the states reasoned it was because the hunters and fishermen actually care more about wildlife, all species, hunted or not, fished or not, than do the nonparticipants.

It would be nice if antihunting and antifishing groups would consider that the next time they mount a campaign.

Outdoor tidbits

Neighboring Kansas, hunting territory for a number of traveling Nebraskans, set its opening dates for quail and pheasant at Nov. 5 this fall. That portion of Kansas north of Interstate 70 and west of U.S. Hwy. 81 will not open until Nov. 12 for quail.

Ducks Unlimited will be celebrating 40 years of success this year. DU has raised over 60 million dollars, managing over 1,260 wetlands totaling 2.5 million habitat acres in the four decades of its existence. No other wildlife organization can come close to that claim. Hats off to DU.

The Department of Interior's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will review proposals for the 1977 migratory game bird hunting regulations at a public hearing set for June 21 in Washington, D.C. Persons wishing to participate should notify the Director (FWS/MBM), U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of Interior, Washington, D.C., 20240.

Nebraska's 1977 spring turkey hunting season was just about what was expected. Some 26 per cent of the 1,852 hunters bagged a wild turkey, taking 482 birds. Hunters in the Southwest and Verdigre units scored best with a 57 and 53 per cent rating, respectively. By units, the hunter number and birds taken broke down like this: Niobrara 600 hunters — 157 turkeys, Roundtop 1,041 – 220, Southwest 42 — 24, Verdigre 150 — 79, and Wildcat 19 — 2. Chief of wildlife Ken Johnson of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission indicated these are similar to last year's figures, indicating the turkey population is fairly stable.

Lincoln Judds top Fremont

The Lincoln Judds broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the third inning and two more in the fourth en route to a 5-2 win over Fremont in Junior Legion action Wednesday night at Sherman Field.

Atlas took advantage of two Fremont errors in the seventh inning to plate a single run in the bottom of the seventh and score a 3-2 win in the Midget game.

Jim Dietz had two hits in three at bats to lead Judds in the Junior contest. The Judds effect was also aided by a pair of double plays.

Tom Reinhart allowed Fremont four hits in pitching the win.

Brett Johnson led the Atlas Midgets at the plate with two hits and two runs batted in.

Oklahoma mat star to NU

Ray Payne of Putnam City West High School in Okahoma has signed a national letter of intent to wrestle at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, wrestling coach Orval Borgialli has announced.

Payne wrestled at 178 pounds in high school, finished second in the Oklahoma Grand State Wrestling Tournament and was a varsity starter for three years.

Borgialli said Payne "probably will be the No. 1 starter for us at the 177-pound spot next year."

Golfing fireworks wait for post-July 4 action?

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

When Steve Harris opted to transfer from Southeast Community College in Fairbury after his two years at the junior college, there were several alternatives open to the former Lincoln High athlete.

With his eye on golf and basketball, Harris chose Nebraska Wesleyan and subsequently earned district all-American honors in basketball and All-American at the NCAA division III golf tournament in Gambier, Ohio.

"I'm happy with my decision to go to Wesleyan," Harris says. "I really feel pretty good about it. I wanted to go somewhere where I didn't feel like somebody owned me on a scholarship.

"If I had a bad day, I didn't want to have to feel like I let somebody other than myself down," he adds.

There were few bad days for Harris, but there was one drawback to attending a school where no athletic financial aid is available . . . money.

Harris' golf game is probably suffering a little this summer with the hours he's putting in working at Duffy's Fireworks to earn the extra money.

He's been working between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. during the week plus another four nights a week to keep up with the Fourth of July rush.

"It bothers me a little bit that I haven't been able to play much," Harris says. "But I think after July 4th, there should be quite a bit of time for it all."

Even with his workweek that sometimes extends into the weekend, Harris has managed to play two tournaments this summer, the Great Plains two-man and the Fairbury Open last weekend.

"I didn't think I'd have a chance at Fairbury because I wasn't playing," Harris admits. "But I shot 72-71 for second place. I guess that wasn't too bad."

Harris is now looking forward to playing in his first Nebraska State Amateur Tournament at Hillcrest Country Club, after the fireworks rush.

But for the time being, he'll continue packing assortments and making trips to South Dakota for materials with hopes of making his big bang later on this summer.

In golfing action around Lincoln this past week, Mike Schuchart, son of Holmes Park pro Bob Schuchart, posted the best score of the week with a three-under-par 69 at Holmes.

The state's top golfers are looking towards the Grand Island Tournament of Champions Saturday and Sunday at Riverside Country Club with defending champion Gary Gruenemeier registered in the field.

For two-man teams, Falls City Country Club is hosting the Tri-State Best Ball tournament Sunday with entries accepted until 11 a.m. the day of the tournament for the 18-hole event.

Here are the top scores from the week at the city's five championship golf courses:

Court orders investors repaid

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Five Buffalo County residents were defrauded on investments connected with the now-defunct Elm Creek State Bank and deserve to get their money back, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The high court upheld the ruling of the Buffalo County District Court on some $100,000 in debentures issued by the Midstate Insurance Agency and Management, Inc., to five senior citizens. The court ordered the directors of Midstate to repay the debentures with interest.

The directors of Midstate were also directors of the Elm Creek State Bank, which was declared insolvent and closed by the State Banking Department in 1973. The money from the Midstate debentures had been put into the bank between 1970 and the time it was closed becase bank examiners continually ordered the bank to raise more capital to cover bad loans.

A debenture is a notice of indebtedness that commercial institutions issue. An investor lends money to an institution, is paid interest on his investment and can usually withdraw the principle after serving notice.

The high court said the debentures were issued to bolster the deficient financial condition of the bank and to satisfy the criticisms of bank examiners.

"Each of them (the directors) knew, or should have known, that facts would have to be concealed or misrepresented in order to sell the debentures, "said the decision, written by Justice Hale McCown.

In the lower court proceedings, the five directors contended they were merely stockholders in Midstate and not responsible for actions of the corporation. But that court held the action "was so flagrantly fraudulent" that they must be held responsible. The high court agreed with this finding.

The five persons who bought the debentures were Adolph Jahn, $35,000, Mayme Fowler, $5,000, Clyde Smyth, $20,000, Duane Frazier, $15,000, and William Riley, $25,000.

In another decision Wednesday, the supreme court ordered a new trial in the case of a North Platte man who was prevented from sueing the city after his impounded motorcycle was stolen from a police lot.

Robert Nash's motorcycle was impounded after police stopped a friend riding it and discovered the engine was reported stolen in Tulsa, Okla. The motorcycle was stored in a locked, fenced area.

Nash later went to police with proof that the engine was purchased from a dealer in North Platte, but police kept the motorcycle in the impoundment area. In January 1973, the storage area was broken into and the cycle was stolen.

Nash tried to sue the city to recover the cost of the motorcycle, but the county court ruled the city was protected by a state statute which prevents claims for damages on goods held by law enforcement officers.

But the high court quoted a federal ruling that said when one detains something, one has to keep possession of that object. The motorcycle would have ultimately been returned to Nash, the court ruled, and thus North Platte was not immune from a lawsuit when it was stolen.

The court ordered a trial on whether the city used proper care in impounding the cycle.

In another case, the supreme court ruled that Charles Casper, an inmate at the Penal Complex, did not have privileges to visit his five children after he and his wife were divorced.

Casper is serving a life sentence for murder committed during a robbery. He and his wife, now Nancy O'Toole, were divorced after his conviction, and she remarried.

In contesting Casper's visitation request, Mrs. O'Toole told the Douglas County District Court that the visits to the penitentiary upset the children and made them difficult to handle. The lower court held that the best interests of the children called for a stable home environment, and denied Casper's request.

The high court agreed, but noted that incarceration is not a sufficient reason to deny visitation rights, and added such orders are subject to change if circumstances change.

Red Cross tabs Bredow

Marjorie Bredow of Lincoln was elected chairman of the Lancaster County Chapter of the American Red Cross at a Wednesday night meeting.

Other officers elected at the annual meeting are Donald Stading, first vice chairman; Arthur Dobson, second vice chairman; David Wolcott, treasurer, and Harold Read, secretary.

Executive committee members are James Spangler, Dr. Dale Rathe, Richard Campbell, Stephen Anderson, William Roper and Frank Sidles.

Newly elected to three-year terms on the board of directors were Dennis Appleby, Elmer Christianson, James DeMars and Dr. Craig Nolte. Paul Amen was elected to a one-year term.

Retiring chapter chairman C. E. Paulson received special recognition, as did directors Jack Stewart, Alfred Adams, Arthella Anderson, John Burns, Max Roper and Mary Stewart.

Rae Gorman, chairman of volunteers, presented Irene Cullen an award for 53 years of service. Lucille Manke received an award for 50 years of service and Lloyd Jenkins for 45 years. Volunteers who had served at least five years were also recognized.

Cynthia Wedel, of Alexandria, Va., National Red Cross chairman of volunteers, addressed the meeting.

Veys retains most department heads

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Al Veys Wednesday ousted Public Safety Director Richard Roth and Human Relations Director A. B. Hogan, but said he would keep most other city department heads.

Hogan, a black who has headed the Human Relations Department since 1973, said he was dismissed because the department was "too effective" for Veys and said the new mayor's record on human rights has been "highly suspect."

Hogan, 34, said Veys voted against the city's open housing ordinance while serving on the city council and several years ago refused to allow black delivery drivers into his South Omaha grocery store.

Veys called the delivery driver allegation "an unmitigated lie," while Hogan termed his dismissal from city government a "personal triumph."

Roth, 49, a retired U.S. Secret Service agent, was appointed by Mayor Edward Zorinsky three years ago. He said he wasn't upset about receiving his termination notice, adding, "It's a political job. I knew that when I took it."

"The mayor certainly has the perogative to have people he knows and trusts," Roth said.

Roth has expressed interest in seeking the 1978 Democratic nomination for Douglas County sheriff, but said Wednesday he wouldn't run against incumbent Republican Ted Janing, who Roth described as a "close personal friend."

Veys replaced Hogan with Mrs. Ruth Jackson, who has served on occasion as acting director of the Human Relations Department, and Roth with Assistant Fire Chief William McDonnell.

Veys said his aide, S. B. Benson, would serve as acting public safety director until the city Personnel Board grants McDonnell a leave of absence from the Fire Department.

Veys also said he would replace Clarence Shafer, parks, recreation and public property director, because of Shafer's health. He has been under medication for blood clots.

Veys said Shafer would remain with the department as parks and recreation superintendent. Three persons were being considered as Shafer's replacement.

Veys said he planned to retain Planning Director Alden Aust, Personnel Director Larry Wewel, Finance Director George Richardson and Community Development Director James Kelly.

In addition, Veys said the functions of the Office of Management and Budget created by Zorinsky would be returned to the Finance Department.

OMB Director Robert Armstrong, considered one of the most powerful men in city government when Zorinsky was mayor, will become a mayoral assistant, Veys said, and work with another mayoral aide, James Cavanaugh.

Raymond Central FFA team first in hog judging contest

Beatrice — The Raymond Central Future Farmers of America team took top honors in the senior division of the hog judging contest here Tuesday during the eighth annual Nebraska Pork Producers Junior Field Day.

In so doing, the four-man squad won the right to represent Nebraska in the National Barrow Show judging contest at Austin, Minn., in September.

Raymond Central FFA, in topping the 15 other teams in the senior division, was paced by Vernon Benes, 15, of Agnew, who placed first in the individual competition with 315 points.

The winning team also saw one of its members, Kevin Matulka, 15, of Agnew, finish fourth individually with 310 points.

Raymond Central FFA, which also consisted of team members Tom Hermance of Ceresco and Darin Horn of Valparaiso, finished with 916 out of a possible 1,050 points. For its first place showing, the team will receive $150 from the Nebraska Pork Producers Association to offset traveling expenses to the national judging contest.

For the second consecutive year, the North Bend FFA team finished as runner-up in the contest with 914 points. The squad was led by Allen Hines, 15, of Morse Bluff, who was third among individuals in the senior division with 311 points.

Finishing second individually in the senior division was Jeanne Argo, 14, of Liberty a member of the Liberty Livestock 4-H Club.

The Fillmore County 4-H team was third with 903 points, and was followed by Centennial FFA No. 3 with 893 points and the Gage County 4-H squad with 886 points.

The top three teams received trophies from the pork producers, while the first four individuals in both the senior and junior divisions were given trophies by the eight Nebraska swine breed associations.

Junior division honors went to Kerri Musil, 13, of Western, who finished with 296 points.

Finishing second was Larry Miller, 13, of North Bend, with 295 points. Third place went to Tim Niemeyer, 13, of Clatonia, with 290 points. Cathy Zumpfe, 13, of Milligan was fourth, also with 290 points.

Rebuilding awaits flood plain study

Omaha (AP) — David Leonard's home in King Lake burned to the ground last fall. Now, he can't rebuilt it because it might be in a flood plain.

Leonard told the Douglas County Board the county refused him a building permit and told him to seek one from the state. The state told him he could rebuild if the property isn't within the 100-year flood plain.

But, the county can't tell him if the property is within the flood plain until an engineering study is completed, probably this fall, according to Donald Claussen, county permits and inspections chief.

County Board Chairman George Buglewicz told Leonard he'll have to wait until that data is available. "By that time, I'll be broke," Leonard said.

He said the county's refusal to issue him a building permit has caused him hardship in his roofing work, and his children have faced problems in a new school.

Claussen said if the foundation for the home had remained it might be possible to rebuild. But Leonard had the foundation removed by a group cleaning up the area.

Commissioners: 4 over and 3 lines down?

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Each of Lancaster County's three county commissioners reacted differently Wednesday morning during their first confrontation with next fiscal year's budget requests.

They each received a four-inch thick accordion-fold packet containing 45 manilla folders for keeping track of the various county budgets.

While administrative assistant Wayne Hart explained a new system, which displays all budget information on green-and-white striped computer printouts, Jan Gauer concentrated, Burce Hamilton fidgeted and Bob Colin scratched his head.

Computer printouts have the distressing characteristic of all looking alike. Hart started off by explaining how to tell the various budgets apart. About the fourth column over on the third line down, the departments' names appear.

Below this line, it gets a bit more complicated. There are eight columns of figures, comparing next year's budget requests to last year's expenses and the current year's expenses and budget.

"What do we have to do, go to IBM school to be able to read this thing?" Colin asked.

Hart explained the merits of the printout, which he said will serve as a budget form and an accounting document.

Monthly printouts will update the information so that the commissioners' packets can bulge with data as the year progresses.

Mrs. Gauger maintained a studious pose, puffing cigarettes while digesting the implications of the figures.

Not all budget requests are in yet, but Mrs. Gauger's rough estimate indicated that the commissioners need to cut approximately $600,000 from the requests, which look like they will exceed $8 million and be about $200,000 higher than the 1976-77 budget.

Hamilton said, "Maybe we should just add them all up, subtract a certain percentage, and apply that cut across the board."

The actual process will be much more complicated, and time-consuming. The commissioners will be meeting almost daily for the next few weeks paring the requests item-by-item.

"I propose that we pass a resolution next Tuesday making 8 days to a week," said Colin.

Hamilton seemed to have difficulty sitting still. He kept jumping up to check his calendar. There was reason to suspect he was thinking more about a noon-hour speech announcing his candidacy for Congress than about the meeting at hand.

Just as they were getting down to the fine points of how the 45 folders were alphabetized, Colin excused himself on the pretext of more pressing business.

"We'll let you know if we cut your budget," Hart told him as he walked out the door.

The serious business of hashing over the requests line-by-line with department and agency heads will start next Monday morning with the Civil Defense and Pre-Trail Deversion Program budgets.

Omaha attorney charged with misconduct by bar

Associated Press

An Omaha attorney with several driving violation convictions was charged by the Nebraska Bar Association Tuesday with misconduct.

The bar asked the State Supreme Court to take "just and reasonable" disciplinary action against John Stuart Barrett, 50.

Records show that Barrett has been convicted several times of drunken driving and driving on revoked or suspended driver's licenses.

Two suspensions under state law require suspension of the license of a driver with no liability insurance who is found to be at fault in an accident.

A bar association Committee on Inquiry has started an investigation of Barrett for allegedly using his knowledge and position to flout the law in connection with Barrett's conviction last fall of driving without a license.

Municipal Court Judge Elizabeth Pittman postponed sentencing until probation officer Floyd Hayes could complete an investigation.

Omahan faces second degree murder charge

Omaha (UPI) — A young Omahan was charged with second degree murder Wednesday in the shooting death of his brother-in-law on a north Omaha street during a family argument.

Municipal Court Judge Robert Vondrasek ordered Kass D. Robinson, 21, held in lieu of $40,000 bond in the Tuesday night death of Clifford J. Culliver, 24, Omaha.

Police said Culliver was the brother of Robinson's estranged wife, Gwendolyn Kay, and had been unhappy over the way Robinson had been treating her.

Escaped market bull injures two in Norfolk

Norfolk (AP) — An escaped bull injured a 3-year-old boy and one of its would-be captors and sent several persons in a Norfolk residential area running for cover Monday.

The bull, which belonged to the Norfolk Livestock Auction Market, was shot and killed by Norfolk police.

Three-year-old Charles James was playing in his grandparents' fenced-in yard when the bull jumped over the fence, charged at the boy and threw him in the air, police said.

Robert Mercer, an employe of the market, was charged while he was searching on horseback for the bull.

Penal inmate pleads innocent

Eugene Martens, 35, pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges stemming from an alleged March 25 escape from the Nebraska Penal Complex.

Martens, who was serving a one-to-three year sentence for passing bad checks, was captured in Newman Grove after he allegedly drove away from the penal complex in a state car being serviced at the penitentiary garage.

Douglas County Board sets reappraisal date

Omaha (AP) — Assessor Frank Bemis and George Buglewicz, chairman of the Douglas County Board, have reached accord on first steps for a countywide property reappraisal to be started by Jan. 1.

Bemis said valuations probably will be updated every year after the reappraisal is completed.

Bemis and Buglewicz agreed to have Chief Deputy Assessor Robert Rice and Richard Schoettger, administrative assistant to the County Board, meet with State Tax Commissioner William Peters.

They have been instructed to find out what steps Douglas County has to take to comply with LB131, a new state law governing property values.

Bemis and Buglewicz also agreed to hold a meeting, possibly next week, among the County Board, assessor, Schoettger and Rice to set up a timetable and methods for revaluing property.

Bemis and Buglewicz said it has not been determined whether the reappraisal will be done entirely by the assessor's staff, by an outside appraisal firm or by a combination of the two.

LB131, passed by the legislature last month, requires the county assessor to have a plan by July 1 for countywide reappraisal. It also requires that the reappraisal be done or at least started by Jan. 1.

Commissioners have said they think it would take about 18 months to reappraise the 140,000 pieces of property in the county.

The last countywide reappraisal was done in 1966-67.

Roskens compliments Exon, Legislature

University of Nebraska President Ronald Roskens complimented Gov. J. James Exon and the Legislature for their level of cooperation this year, describing it as "the best I've seen in my six years at the university."

In a speech to the Rotary Club, Roskens said the university did not get as large a budget as it wanted, "but I think we recognize the realities of tax money availability."

He added when he reads of states in which legislatures could not offer new money but also asked their universities to decrease their budgets, "I must say I feel we can live in reasonable comfort."

The university asked the Unicameral for an 18% increase but had to settle for 6.7%.

UNL receives grant

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Mechanical Engineering has received a $26,000 grant from the National Science Foundation.

The grant will support a project called "Total Absorptance Correlations for Semitransparent Solids" under the direction of Dr. Edward E. Anderson, associate professor of mechanical engineering.

Anderson said the project will study high temperature heat transfer properties of selected solids, such as glass.

Trustees of the Westinghouse Foundation awarded a $10,000 grant to a pair of Lincoln campus engineering professors for investigation of modularized instruction in engineering.

They are Dr. Don J. Nelson, professor of electrical engineering and computer science, and Dr. David W. Olive, professor of electrical engineering.

'Levelheaded' youth, 19, piloted crashed Cessna

From Press Reports

Gordon — The pilot of a single-engine Cessna 172, which crashed and burned Tuesday night after buzzing a farmstead and killing all four men aboard, was described Wednesday as "levelheaded" and "always took his flying seriously."

Don Brown, owner of Don Air Service of Alliance, said Samuel Foster, 19, of Hay Springs, rented the aircraft from him for a "personal flight" which was to last about an hour, United Press International said.

About two hours later, the four-passenger aircraft made a low pass over the Glenn Calkins farm about 10 miles northwest of Gordon, failed to regain altitude and slammed into a 75-foot deep gully about a quarter mile away.

In addition to Foster his passengers, Robert Grant, 19, of Alliance; and brothers, Darwin and Rodney Calkins, about 20, of Gordon also died in the crash.

Glenn Calkins, the first on the scene, pulled his son, Darwin, and Grant from the wreckage just before the plane burst into flames.

Rodney Calkins and the pilot were trapped in the wreckage. Heat from the flames prevented the elder Calkins from further rescue attempts.

Authorities said the plane stopped at the Gordon Airport just before the crash. Brown said the aircraft had about four hours of fuel when it left the Alliance Airport.

Brown said Foster was a "regular user" of his planes.

"He was always real levelheaded and a real sound pilot," Brown said.

Nebraska death toll rises

Associated Press

One person died Wednesday following a two-car collision west of Columbus and a fifth person is dead as a result of a three-car accident Sunday near Wood River, authorities said.

Platte County officers identified the victim of the Columbus accident as Jane IntVeld, 19, of Denver.

The victim's westbound car collided with an eastbound car driven by Robert Wheeler Jr., 20, of Grand Island, on U.S. 30, three miles west of Columbus.

Wheeler and two passengers in the IntVeld car, Jo IntVeld of Sioux Falls, S.D., and Cornelia E. VanGrouw, 50, of Inwood, Iowa, were held for observation at a Columbus hospital.

The fifth fatality in the Wood River accident was 4-year-old Starla Lemburg of Wood River, who died Tuesday in a Grand Island hospital, authorities said.

The child was riding in a pickup truck driven by her father, Gregory Lemburg, 22, when the truck collided with a car at the intersection of a county road and Nebraska 11 near Wood River. Four elderly Wood River women traveling in the car were killed.

The latest deaths raised the 1977 Nebraska highway fatality toll to 150, compared with 131 on the same date last year.

Two sought in Omaha bank heist

Omaha (UPI) — Authorities were searching for two men who held up the Cornhusker Bank of Omaha at gunpoint Wednesday, tied up a teller and stole her car after relieving her of slightly less than $5,000.

The FBI said both bandits were wearing ski masks and one carried a short barreled revolver and the other a pistol with a long barrel.

The bandits tied the teller's wrists and locked her in a bathroom before taking her car which was recovered in the Nebraska Methodist Hospital parking lot several blocks from the bank.

The FBI said two passersby in a car saw the suspects leave the bank. The passersby went into the facility and freed the teller.

Mini-bike training expands

Grand Island (AP) — The Hall County Board Tuesday agreed to take over and expand a program that fights juvenile delinquency by training youths in the handling and maintaining of mini-bikes.

At the request of the Grand Island YMCA, sponsor of the program, the board put $13,800 for the program into the sheriff's office budget. The program will be expanded to include other towns in the county.

Papers, poetry sought

Wayne (AP) — The John G. Neihardt Center in Bancroft and Wayne State College are seeking papers and poetry to be presented at the John G. Neihardt conference on midwestern culture Aug. 6 at the college. The material also will be used during the annual Neihardt Day celebration at Bancroft Aug. 7.

The written work is to deal with the theme, "Crazy Horse, the Myth and the Reality" and may relate to such disciplines as literature, sociology, anthropology, economics, political science, military science, or theology, the college said.

Youths arrested

Grand Island (UPI) — Two teenagers have been arrested in the theft of a car which struck a power pole in northwest Grand Island Monday, leaving some 400 Southern Nebraska Rural Public Power Co. customers short on electricity.

Hall County Sheriff Charles Headley said Wednesday the two 14-year-olds told him they took a car belonging to Art Bogner and were traveling about 95 miles per hour when they hit the pole. Both escaped injury.

Ground broken for plant

Sutherland (UPI) — Ground has been broken for the construction of a second generating unit at the Gerald Gentleman Station near Sutherland. The Nebraska Public Power District will build the unit adjacent to unit No. 1

In April, the Nebraska Power Review Board authorized construction of the second facility which carries an estimated price tag of $313 million.

Vacant building 'broke'

Omaha (AP) — The vacant Doctors Hospital building is out of money and will lose its insurance and private security guards, officials said. The building is owned by the insolvent Midlands Community Hospital, which has been placed in receivership.

The Omaha City Council Tuesday failed to approve rezoning that would have allowed the structure to be sold for $200,000 to the U-Haul Co.

Additional insurance likely

Omaha (AP) — A new insurance requirement from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission could cost the Omaha Public Power District $10 million for additional coverage at the district's Fort Calhoun plant.

OPPD directors will be asked Thursday to approve the borrowing of $10 million on the district's $40 million line of credit with the Continental Bank of Chicago.

Peters resigns post

Grand Island (AP) — Dr. Robert Peters, personnel director for the City of Grand Island for the past 2½ years, has resigned effective Aug. 5 to accept a post as an associate professor at Kearney State College.

Hamilton announces bid for House seat

In a moment charged with drama but little suspense, Bruce Hamilton announced Wednesday that he is running for Congress.

To a crowd of well-wishers outside the County-City Building, the 35-year-old county board chairman said, "I will not be a candidate for reelection as a Lancaster County Commissioner. I am a candidate for the Democratic Party's nomination for Congress from the First Congressional District."

In a 20-minute speech, Hamilton talked about his political philosophy and values" rather than practical issues. In the "11 long months" before the primary election, he promised to be more specific.

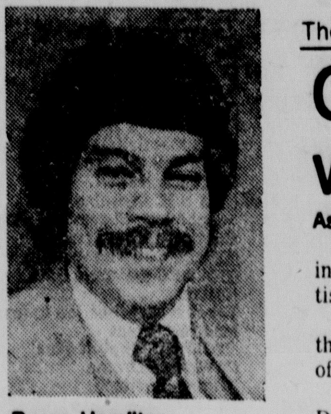
"I reject labels," Hamilton said. "I strive to blend the compassion and concern of liberalism with the caution and efficiency of conservatism."

Admitting "an instinctive kinship with the poor and disadvantaged," he was qucik to add, "I am not anti-business and in fact believe we should give free enterprise some breathing room" by abolishing governmental regulations "that stifle competition."

"The chief challenge of our times is coping with scarcity," he said. "We must evolve a new liftstyle with new methods of production and new patterns of consumption."

"The good leaders I would strive to emulate make heroes out of the people," he said.

Hamilton admits it will take time for him to gain support outside Lancaster County. Hamilton first ran for Congress in 1968 as a third-party anti-war candidate.



Bruce Hamilton
. . . county commissioner

He has been a county commissioner since 1974. Before that, he was in private law practice.

He is the first to announce for the House seat presently held by Republican Charles Thone.

Thone is expected to seek a Senate seat or the governorship in 1978.

Curtis says Exon won't go to Senate

Associated Press

Sen. Carl Curtis said he believes Gov. J. James Exon "is in for the surprise of his life if he runs for the Senate seat Curtis is vacating next year."

In a broadcast interview Tuesday, Curtis produced one of the strongest partisan statements since he announced the end of a 40-year career in Congress last January.

"The people of Nebraska are not going to elect two Democratic senators," Curtis said.

"No man is invincible and the Exon myth is going to explode."

Curtis said Nebraskans are not going to vote to make the Congress "more lopsided. Nebraskans haven't changed that much."

Curtis said those dissatisfied with Washington are going to turn to the Republican alternative in 1978. He said "only twice in my long period here have I served in a Republican Congress."

Curtis, 71, has served longer than any other Nebraskan in Congress. He said it is possible he will have preferences in the primary. He refuses, however, to dictate to the Nebraska Republicans.

"It will be a situation where Nebraska Republicans have had ample opportunity to see who they want," he said.

Commission names officers and duties

Mimi Waldbaum of Omaha was elected chairman of the Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission at its organizational meeting Wednesday.

Wallace Peterson of Lincoln was named vice chairman, and Ralph Slocum of Lincoln will be secretary.

The eight-member commission, created by the so-called 1976 "sunshine law" which takes full effect July 1, met in Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan's Statehouse office to launch its operations.

The commission's major duties will begin next year when it gathers campaign finance reports for the 1978 elections and receives financial disclosure statements from candidates and officeholders.

Disclosure statements for current officeholders are not due until April 1.

Lobbying disclosure provisions of the new law will take effect prior to that time.

Whelan, Secretary of State Allen Beermann and JoAnn Kimball of Lincoln were named to a subcommittee that will concentrate on lobbying provisions in the new law.

Ms. Waldbaum, Slocum and Mickey Staley of Omaha will concentrate on campaign reporting, while Peterson, Slocum and James Davis of Omaha will serve on a financial disclosure subcommittee.

Beermann serves on the commission by virtue of his elective office. Gov. J. James Exon named Whelan to serve as a member in his stead.

The other six members were appointed by Exon or Beermann and confirmed by the Legislature.

Whelan said he and Beermann believe the law should be changed so that elected officials, whose activities will be monitored by the commission, do not serve as commission members.

That, in itself, is a direct conflict of interest, Whelan suggested.

"We're not very happy about this, but we will do our duty because the law requires it," Whelan said.

Whelan said he hopes the commission can serve as a model for other bureaucratic agencies in record keeping and reporting activities.

The commission asked State Personnel Director Roy Gardner to help draw job specifications and prepare advertising for the hiring of an executive director, an attorney, an auditor, a secretary and a clerk.

Legal insurance new fringe benefit

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — In California, you can pay $25 a year for the right to telephone a lawyer anytime you want and get fast advice.

In Washington, D. C., laborers in the construction industry get free advice and consultation on personal legal problems, as well as free courtroom representation. Everything's paid out of union dues.

In western Pennsylvania, Blue Cross is preparing to offer individual legal insurance contracts, at prices ranging from $60 to $140 per family. The lower-cost contract would cover up to 17 hours of legal consultation, which might run around $450 if paid for privately.

In your own city, plans like this may soon be available if they aren't already. According to the American Bar Association, some 150 full-scale pre-paid legal insurance plans are now operating in the United States, covering about 2 million people. And perhaps as many as 10,000 unions, credit unions, employers and other groups offer some form of group legal benefits.

The 1976 tax reform law made it advantageous for companies to offer these plans as a fringe benefit, which doubtlessly will expand their number tremendously. Millions of people would buy individual coverage if it were offered at a reasonable price.

Low-cost legal advice is, in fact, the chief attraction of pre-paid insurance plans. Typically, an employer, credit union or other group will contract with a specific panel of lawyers, offering them a large volume of legal business if they'll promise to charge each group member a low fee. The cost may be 20 to 40% below standard fees.

Other plans (including those sponsored by bar associations) allow you to choose any lawyer you want. The coverage pays for a certain number of hours of legal work, so if the problem can be cleared up the cost is low. However, once the work exceeds the time covered by the insurance contract, the lawyer can charge his usual fee.

If you know your case is complicated, you should take the precaution of negotiating a reasonable fee in advance. But your insurance at least guarantees that the case will cost less than it would have without the coverage.

Some plans even cover "major legal" expenses just the way health plans cover "major medical." You have to pay a deductible (perhaps $1,000) and the plan picks up the rest of the cost.

Legal insurance plans provide another benefit, worth even more than you'll save on legal fees. Having the coverage encourages you to use a lawyer for legal muddles, when otherwise you might try to do without.

Middle and lower income people generally avoid lawyers if at all possible. Mainly, they don't want to pay the fee. And a lot of people have personal grievances against the legal profession, and take pride in handling all their problems themselves.

That's fine, if it works. But it often doesn't. Stuart Brown of the National Legal Service Plan in Westwood, Calif., told my associate Anne Colamosca that a good part of his business comes from untangling do-it-yourself legal projects — especially do-it-yourself divorces. Many an heir has lost money because of the do-it-yourself will; or a seller, because of a do-it-yourself contract.

Legal insurance programs encourage "preventive law" — people asking what to do about their problems before they get bad enough to need expensive help. The legal services most commonly needed involve landlord-tenant disputes; traffic cases; accidents; making or probating a will; consumer debt; family problems, like divorces and child support; criminal charges; and, a new area, upgrading military discharges and applying for G. I. benefits.

Plans like that of the Laborers Union District Council in Washington, D. C., don't stop at small disputes, as some plans do, but stay with the worker right into the courtroom if that's necessary.

One footnote: Most group legal plans will stand with you in court only if you're sued, not if you're doing the suing. This discourages litigation-happy people from getting their kicks at their plan's expense.

Tax Court rules crumbling cliff not a disaster

Washington — Discovery that your house is on a cliff that is crumbling into the ocean is not a disaster — at least not for purposes of federal income taxes.

The U.S. Tax Court has ruled that your house must suffer actual damage before you can take a casualty deduction on your tax return.

The ruling came in the case of Edward R. Benner, whose wife agreed to pay $45,000 for a two-story redwood house on a 100-foot cliff overlooking the Pacific Ocean at Moss Beach, San Mateo County, Calif.

In 1971, a county study found that the cliff was highly susceptible to earthquakes, and was crumbling into the ocean at the rate of three feet a year. The country suspended further building in the area, and marked down the fair market value of the Benner home to $19,752.

Benner claimed a casualty deduction, the Internal Revenue Service denied it, and now the U.S. Tax Court has agreed with Internal Revenue.

The Tax Court decision noted that taxpayers are entitled to deductions for losses arising from "fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty."

"An individual," the Tax Court said, "may properly claim a casualty loss deduction only when there has been actual physical damage or destruction of the property . . .

"We reject petitioner's contention that the qualifying event was the publication of the report. The publication of this report is simply not the type of sudden and unexpected invasion by a hostile agency contemplated by the statute."

Court referral program may come to end soon

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The recently troubled Lancaster County Court referral program is apparently "winding down."

That's the word from Pam Fry, director of the three-year-old program which gives people charged with minor crimes the option of doing volunteer work instead of spending time in jail or paying fines.

Ms. Fry told the Region II Crime Commission Wednesday that she expects to close the program by July 31, unless a reasonable alternative to administering it can be found. She said there are currently 33 court-referred volunteers in the program, but no new ones have entered for several months following a change in judges' duties in county court.

That change in duties, which saw Judge Jeffre Cheuvront switch from criminal to civil matters with Judge Robert Camp, prompted Ms. Fry's resignation last month and sparked a debate about the merits of the program among commission members. Cheuvront was an advocate of the program, but Camp declined to use it because of questions about the liability of the courts if volunteers created additional problems.

The debate ended when crime commission Executive Director Curt Snoberger directed the group's courts committee to poll the judges about the program. Ms. Fry withdrew her resignation about a week later and decided to work on a "week-to-week basis" awaiting a final decision on the fate of the program.

The courts committee released a summary of responses from the judges at the Wednesday meeting. That summary was further summed up by commission member Rudy Friedstrom who said, "It's obvious the judges have varied opinions on the matter."

Public Defender Clem Gaughan, a commission member, noted that responses from district judges "should carry little weight" since they "rarely handle misdemeanor cases and have little opportunity to use the program."

Commission Chairman Maurice Russell suggested that fellow members study the responses and make some definite decision on the referral program next month.

Responses from seven judges were printed in the summary. On the question, "Do you feel that community service is an appropriate condition or as an alternative sentence?" four said "yes," one said "no," one said "not for juveniles" and one said it should be "out of a sense of duty and responsibility, not because a judge orders one to do so.

County Judges Camp and Cheuvront, the municipal judges answering as a group and District Judge Samuel Van Pelt all said "yes." District Judge William Blue spoke of the sense of duty and District Judge William Hastings said "no."

Juvenile Judge Bill Nuernberger said the system probably wouldn't work for juveniles, even though he "firmly believes that a child should compensate the victim wherever possible."

Permissive legislation to implement such a system has been suggested as an alternative. The judges were asked if such legislation would change the circumstances and enable them to utilize the program. Judges Camp, Cheuvront, the municipal judges and Van Pelt said they would.

Judge Hastings, who said he wouldn't use the program, noted: "We have been trying for years to develop a meaningful and efficient statewide probation system and have always been short of funds. I am opposed to constant applications for and grants of funds for programs outside the system."

Crime commission urges mayor to reconsider cut

A recommendation by Mayor Helen Boosalis that the city cut from the budget its share of administrative funds for the Region II Crime Commission angered commission members Wednesday.

Commission Chairman Maurice Russell said that several members and Executive Director Curt Snoberger met with the mayor and her budget consultants Tuesday night to discuss the cut, which would remove $7,245 from the $42,000 the commission uses for administration.

The mayor's administrative assistant, Mike Merwick, who is also a member of the crime commission, said he felt the administration could best be handled "in house," utilizing various city employes, among them Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers, to handle the chores that Snoberger has had for the past 2½ years.

But commission members disagreed. Member Marie Arnot noted that the commission is a regional body, involving the municipal governments of about 13 different cities, and that Lincoln shouldn't have the majority opinion in the matter.

Merwick agreed and said that funds to the city from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration have been greatly cut and that has dictated the recommendation. "There's nothing to say that your funding (for administration) couldn't come from another source, or be totally funded from the State Crime Commission," Merwick added.

"But, any way you slice it, they're tax dollars," Mrs. Arnot countered.

County Judge Jeffre Ceuvront said he was disappointed. 'Unless you've got city employes sitting around with time on their hands, you're going to have a mess," he said.

He noted that input from competing agencies into the administration of the commission would result in a "loss of objectivity for the overall program." The competing agencies would be the representatives of the various law enforcement agencies who serve on, and are served by, the commission.

Member Rudy Friedstrom, on the commission since its inception, said that a "lot of legwork would remain undone without an executive director." The commission, with the help of its executive director, has "attracted six or seven million dollars which otherwise wouldn't have been available for law enforcement work," he added.

Mrs. Boosalis said later she intended not to eliminate the position of exeuctive director, just the city funding of that position.

The commission voted 16 to 1 to urge the mayor to reconsider her decision, with Merwick casting the dissenting vote.

Regional crime commission approves 3 grant applications

Three grant applications totaling nearly $30,000 were approved by the Region II Crime Commission during its regular meeting Wednesday.

The largest of the grants, $14,111, will go for "project juvenile concern," through the City Corrections Division. City-County Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers said the money will buy a closed circuit TV for monitoring the soon-to-be-completed juvenile cells, as well as a 300-volume "character building" library.

"There's a definite need for this (the library) in Lincoln," Rackers said, noting that adult prisoners are offered continuing education but nothing exists for juveniles.

Another grant for juvenile use, totaling $4,576, was awarded to the Juvenile Attention Center for education equipment, but only after County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton spoke in favor of the item.

The crime commission's juvenile committee had declined to recommend the project for approval, but both Hamilton and attention center Director Jon Hill argued for it.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront also endorsed the grant, noting the money would come from unused 1975 funds which would otherwise go to waste on the state level if not used.

Hamilton said the Lncoln Public Schools had made no commitment to assign a teacher to the center and any educational programs carried on would have to be done by the attention center staff.

Commission member Rudy Friedstrom, a former public school administrator, urged the attention center staff to work closely with the schools because "you can't set up your own little system down there."

The commission approved the grant and recommended that Friedstrom work directly with the schools and the center staff to establish an education program.

The third grant, for $10,692, will be used to update "the various court records all over the county that are in various forms of arrangement," according to Kandra Hahn, district court clerk.

In other action, the commission decided to discuss adding another member to the 21-member body next month to accommodate representation from the City Council. Member Sue Bailey, a former council member, was appointed to the commission before she was elected to the council, and, thus was not really a council representative.

But, the new City Council recently announced that Leo Scherer would be its representative on the commission, a situation which posed a a problem since the commission had no vacancies.

Rackers suggested that the commission voted to amend the by-laws to permit a 22nd member, since council representation is seen as "an important part of our on-going operations."

Guardsmen in training

Nebraska Army National Guard personnel were training this week at Fort Carson, Colo., in preparation for an Army testing procedure, according to Guard spokesmen.

The training during the initial week of summer camp was designed to prepare the guardsmen for tests to evaluate military readiness in use of the 155mm howitzer, the M-60 tank and crew-served weaponry.

The tests were slated for the second and final week of the summer camp duty attended by 1,700 Nebraska Army Guard personnel.

Meanwhile, the 43rd Army Band of the Nebraska Army National Guard was slated to perform in a dozen eastern Nebraska communities during two weeks of annual training beginning June 18.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, June 9, 1977

On being visited by an Aquarius (secret thoughts): Will she be Uranus or 11th House? Will there be verbal blasts? Will the temperature be Arctic or sweet Spring? Declaration: No person, not even a skilled astrologer, should expect to accurately predict exactly what an Aquarian will think, say or do. The male Aquarian can be stubborn, ingratiating, charming, extravagant. The Aquarian woman can be electric, impulsive, affectionate and argumentative. Best counsel: When being visited by an Aquarian — male or female — toss out all wagers. Take bets off the board. No one can predict what will occur, especially not the Aquarian!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on independence, originality, confidence. Take lead. Be aware of cycle, which is high — you can be a self-starter. Timing, intuition are on target. You can get rid of past, wasteful procedures. You can rebuild, imprint your own personality. Get to it!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What seems "secluded" could actually be obvious. Know it and take a second look. Element of gossip, deception could exist. Gemini, Virgo and the number "5" figure prominently. An inquisitive associate could let cat out of bag. You'll see!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on friendship, desire, romance, ability to effect reconciliation between dissenting family members. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio individuals could play major roles. Diplomacy, affection win more than force and rejection. Know it and act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on achievement, standing, prestige, ability to make way for yourself at top. Don't rush into action. Long-distance call or verification is required. You have better offer upcoming. Know it and maintain self-esteem.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with language, publications, written material. You are rewarded for efforts. You receive notification that you are to be given more recognition, responsibility — and money. Yes, love could be in picture, too!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through on "intuitive flash." Yes, you are perceiving truth. Key is to know it and to be confident. Specifically, cash reserves affecting partner or mate come into focus. Let go of burden which really is not your responsibility. Aries, Libra are in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New start could be featured. Study Virgo message. Permit creative "juices" to flow. Imprint style. Be independent, original, a self-starter. Accent on partnership, publicity, opposition from some legal quarters — and marriage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You actually learn now through process of teaching. Cancer, Aquarius persons are in picture. Basic material requires review. You are being pulled in two directions simultaneously. Yes, it is time to form policy, to draw the line. You'll comprehend!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remember diet, health resolutions. Say "No" to junk foods. Your appearance now is very important — those in positions to aid are being watchful. Popularity soars — young persons and romantic situations command attention. Yes, a change will occur. Number "3" figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stress attention to fine points, details, to reading between the lines. Your position is strong, even though you have doubts. Cornerstone of progress has been laid — know it and get firm footing. Yes, this will be clarified.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Short trip, reunion with close neighbor or relative — this could be on agenda. Be ready for change of scenery. Member of opposite sex does care and plays significant role. The number "5" turns up more times than by mere coincidence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on personal possessions, assessing value of special collection, including coins, antiques, art objects. You will be "excited" by home decorating possibilities. Yes, it is all right to move furniture!

IF JUNE 9th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, people seek you out with their problems. You are dramatic, active, dynamic, filled with nervous energy. A new start is indicated for you in July. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You'll travel more in 1977 than in many previous years. Law, medicine and theater are triple interests where you are concerned.

MGM is interested

New York — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc., operator in Las Vegas of the world's largest casino hotel, expressed strong interest Wednesday in the possibility of opening a casino hotel in Atlantic City.

Frank E. Rosenfelt, president and chief executive officer, said in an interview here that MGM previously had ruled out such an investment in Atlantic City because it appeared that New Jersey legislation governing casino operations would be too restrictive.

Soviets hit Carter

Moscow (UPI) — The Soviet Union unleashed its most vitriolic personal attack yet on President Carter Wednesday, charging his "hullabaloo" about human rights is an attempt to force a confrontation at the Belgrade East-West meeting this month.

The official Soviet news agency Tass and the Communist daily Pravda said Carter has "encouraged and kindled" anti-Soviet campaigns, threatened detente and tried to undermine the Helsinki accords.

Fender, happy to have his suit back, said he won't press charges — if and when the thief is arrested.

Third hostage let go

Assen, The Netherlands (AP) — South Moluccan terrorists released a third hostage from their hijacked train Wednesday and mediators prepared for another try to free 55 others held 17 days in the train and a nearby school.

The released hostage, Theo van Hattem, 46, may have suffered a slight heart attack aboard the train, medical officials said.

One top Dutch specialist who examined Van Hattem warned that many of the 51 hostages still aboard the train may not be able to stand the "intolerable" strain much longer.

IRS audits Carter, Mondale

Washington (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is auditing recent tax returns of President Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, administration spokesmen said Wednesday.

The tax agency is auditing Carter's returns for 1975, when he used income averaging and claimed a $41,702 tax credit to cut his tax bill, the President's spokesman said.

Carter said he did not seek the audit.

"They've inventoried, they've checked my income taxes I think almost every year for the last 10 years," the President told reporters on his way to Budget Director Bert Lance's home in Washington's fashionable Georgetown section for dinner.

"But I think that it's a good thing to do," Carter added. "We're suggesting they do it every year I'm in office."

The President's spokesman said there has been no allegation of any impropriety or illegality in Carter's return. Carter "feels he has no problems," said White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum.

Mondale's return for 1976, filed earlier this year, is being audited although, his spokesman said, "it is a fairly simple return.

Al Eisele, the vice president's press secretary, said Mondale was informed of the audit a week or two ago and was asked by the IRS to supply additional information in support of his return.

"The best we can tell, it's a routine audit," Eisele said.

The IRS has not told Carter what prompted its audit of his return, said Press Secretary Jody Powell. He said IRS agents have gone over Carter's records in Georgia as part of the review.

Powell said one reason for the audit might be that the tax agency wants to avoid any criticism like the flood which followed revelations that then-President Richard M. Nixon had been granted tax deductions for his gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

Mondale's vice presidential counsel, Michael Berman, and an accountant he employed to prepare his return will meet with an IRS agent within the week, Eisele said.

The spokesman, replying to queries from reporters, said Mondale's 1976 income consisted largely of his salary as a Democratic senator from Minnesota, three days of transition salary as vice-president elect and some speaking fees.

Eisele said Mondale filed a joint return with wife Joan, who reported a small income of her own.

The Mondales' salary figures were not immediately available nor was any other information about their tax returns.

Mondale was audited on his 1972 return, Eisele said, and was found to owe no additional taxes.

"He thought it (the 1972 audit) was politically motivated," said the spokesman. Mondale was on one of the "enemies lists" prepared by Nixon aides.

Information about Carter's audit emerged from a tangle of what Powell conceded were "mistakes and unwarranted assumptions" made by Carter spokesmen during a 2¼-hour news briefing devoted almost exclusively to questions about the IRS audit of the President's 1975 tax return.

At one point, the briefing was interrupted by an unusual recess so Powell and Granum could check their facts.

Granum noted that Carter's 1975 return, which was made public by the President during his campaign for the White House, includes a "big portion" of income from Carter's partnership in the warehouse with his mother and his brother.

The tax return shows Carter paid $17,484.14 in tax that year on an income of $136,138. The return shows he took a $41,702 credit related to purchases of farm machinery. A credit is subtracted directly from taxes owed.

Carter's tax return for 1975 shows the bulk of his income, $119,244, came from his peanut-seed business, Carter's Warehouse. He also reported $3,293 in income from his autobiography, "Why Not The Best?"

Carter's investment tax credit of $41,702 was equal to about 10 per cent of the $410,646 he spent for equipment for his peanut business.

During the campaign, Carter pledged to eliminate many tax shelters, but said he would retain the investment tax credit as an incentive for business to invest.

Carter also reduced his tax obligation by averaging his income over a five-year period. Since his taxable income fluctuated from a low of $50,195 in 1972 to the 1975 high, it was to his advantage to do so.

Without the income averaging and investment tax credit, Carter had a potential tax of $58,981.

House members requested to list S. Korean favors

(c) New York Times

Washington — The House Ethics Committee voted Wednesday to require every member of the House to disclose details of his association with South Korea in an effort to ascertain the scope of the allegedly illegal Korean attempt to influence Congress.

In a separate action, another House committee investigating the Korean connection obtained the agreement of the former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Hyung Wook, to testify in open session on Korean actions aimed at affecting American policy toward Korea.

In the ethics committee, a dispute broke out over a proposed agreement with the Central Intelligence Agency under which CIA documents pertaining to the Korean operation would be disclosed to the committee. Several Republican members objected that the CIA would retain too much control over designating which information was to be released and what use could be made of it.

But the committee voted to require all of its own members to acknowledge to the committee all gifts from Koreans valued at more than $100. Last month, a similar motion offered by a first-term Republican, Bruce F. Caputo of New York, was rejected when senior members protested that it impugned their integrity.

The ethics committee further confirmed, in a status report and during discussion in a meeting Wednesday morning, that vast amounts of information about the Korean trail of alleged bribes, gifts, favors and travel was scattered in files over nearly a dozen agencies.

The ethics committee, whose proper title is the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, will send out a questionnaire to each House member to determine whether there was "a concerted pattern of efforts by the Korean government or its alleged agents to influence the House."

"We are asking each person who is or was a member of Congress during the past seven years to fill out" the confidential questionnaire, a covering letter reported. The Korean operation is believed to have begun in 1970, when the government in Seoul feared a lessening of the American commitment to Korea's defense.

While couched in polite terms, the request is backed by the threat of a subpoena in the event any member declines to respond in the alloted 14 days.

The questionnaire asks whether the member or his staff have visited Korea, whether the member or his family or staff or business partners have been offered gifts by a Korean official or "any person now suspected" of representing the Korean government.

The form specifically asks whether members of his family or staff have accepted or been offered anything worth more than $100, or had social or business dealings with five people — Tongsun Park, the businessman charged with being a secret agent; Kim Dong Jo, a former Korean ambassador here; Sue Park Thomson, a Korean-born former member of former Speaker Carl Albert's staff; Mancho Kim, another businessman here who was reportedly being groomed as Tongsun Park's successor, and Kim Sang Keun, a KCIA officer who defected from the Korean embassy.

City could get up to $1 million

Rep. John Cavanaugh announced Wednesday that Lincoln will be eligible to receive up to $1 million under a "pocket of poverty" designation authorized in the new public works law passed recently by Congress.

The money will be split among various political subdivisions, such as the city, school board and Airport Authority, according to Reid Charles, administrative director for Lincoln Mayor Helen Boosalis. How that money will be divided hasn't yet been determined.

Under the public works law, Nebraska was eligible for $30 million. Cities of more than 50,000 people could be eligible for some of that money if they could prove there is a need to hire unemployed workers for public projects, Charles said. The money can only be used to help finance construction of new projects.

Unemployed people are hired to work on those projects, which will be paid for by federal funds.

Cavanaugh said Omaha will receive a maximum of $17.8 million, while Douglas County will receive $2.9 million and the State of Nebraska will receive $3.2 million. Bellevue will receive up to $1.3 million. Fremont will receive $673,000, Falls City $407,000 and Sarpy County $401,000.

Other amounts include Walthill $384,000; Auburn $362,000; Rosalie $216,000; Thurston County $114,000; Cass County $84,000; Plattsmouth $83,000 and Richardson County $77,000.

State, county and city officials now must indicate priorities in applications for the money to the Economic Development Administration, Cavanaugh said.

Girls home panel supportive amid faults

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Suggestions for improvements at the WICS (Women in Community Service) group home in a recently-publicized report should not be interpreted as criticisms, the authors of the report said Wednesday.

A six-member professional advisory committee appointed by the County Board to study the WICS program issued a public statement stressing their full support of the home.

"It was our intent to preserve and strengthen the program, not to devalue it," the statement said.

The committee's report neglected to mention many of the positive aspects of WICS because its intention was to outline areas for improvement, explained Dr. Herbert Howe, a committee member.

The committee's primary recommendation was that the county should contract with WICS at the same per diem rate ($500 per month) as other counties, rather than $250 per month currently being paid.

Other recommendations suggested ways to improve the home's "image" among teenagers and improve the staff.

Meeting with the advisory committee and the WICS board Wednesday night, County Board members indicated a willingness to follow the new funding arrnagement, since next fiscal year WICS will lose its state grant.

On the other recommendations, "it is for the WICS board to decide how to act," said County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton.

"If we contract on a per diem basis, WICS can divest itself of any responsibility to the County Board," said Commissioner Jan Gauger.

"We're in no way trying to influence, direct or in any way interfere with policy, programs or procedures of WICS," she added.

The committee's report suggested that one of the home's rules, mandatory delousing for runaways, be abolished.

WICS director Lucy Nevels explained that the rule was instituted because more than once a runaway returned and infested every girl in the home with lice.

Several parents and WICS board members defended the structured environment of the home. Marilyn Biggs of the juvenile court said she has sent many girls to WICS who could be helped by no other facility, because they needed strict rules.

WICS board member Eleanore Enersen said that the very girls who think WICS is too strict often look back on their experience there with gratitude.

Yet the home is unpopular among delinquent girls, who often go elsewhere when given a choice, Mrs. Nevels said.

"How do we make it more attractive to young ladies who need the kind of help we can provide?" asked WICS board chairman Ed Schwartzkopf.

Man takes cycle, car, pickup after escaping from jail chapel

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Michigan man who escaped from the County-City Jail Wednesday afternoon left a trail of stolen vehicles behind him before being captured south of Panama.

Police identified the escapee as Martin Caudill of Detroit, arrested in Lincoln in March when authorities found he was wanted for escaping from a federal prison in Michigan.

Shortly before 3:30 p.m., police said, Caudill climbed through some ceiling panels while washing walls in the jail chapel. He then took a metal drain cap, broke through some ceramic tile and made his way into a storage area and out the garage, police said.

In the north parking lot of the County-City Building, he persuaded a 27-year-old Lincoln woman to let him try out her motorcycle. He hopped on the cycle and fled. He later abandoned the motorcycle at 19th and H and took a car at 1253 S. 21st, which had been left in the driveway with its engine running, police said.

From there, he went to the Major Oil station south of Lincoln on Highway 77, where he allegedly commandeered a pickup-camper at knifepoint.

State patrolmen spotted the camper traveling south on Highway 43 at about 5:30 p.m., and chased it, having heard broadcasts on the stolen vehicle.

The escapee tried to turn the camper onto a field road about 3½ miles south of Panama, but flipped the truck over. Patrolmen apprehended him at the scene of the accident, and he was returned to the jail in Lincoln.

Wheat crop looks like best since '58

Nebraska's 1977 wheat crop Wednesday was forecast at 106.8 million bushels, 13% more than last year's, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Based on June 1 conditions, the latest prediction is 3.1 million bushels higher than last month's estimate, apparently reflecting timely rains received throughout most of the state in May.

The yield-per-acre is expected to be 35 bushels, three bushels above last year, up one bushel from last month, but seven bushels below the 1971 record yield and one bushel below the five-year average (1971-75), the service said.

If realized, this year's production would be the highest since Nebraska's 1958 record output of 113.4 million bushels, the service pointed out.

The acreage harvested for grain is expected to reach 3,050,000 acres, or 3% more than in 1976, according to the service.

Britons can't leave Uganda

Associated Press

Uganda radio announced Wednesday that British residents would be barred from leaving that East African nation, in apparent retaliation for Britain's efforts to keep President Idi Amin from attending the Commonwealth conference in London.

British Prime Minister James Callaghan said he was "keeping his cool" concerning the safety of an estimated 300 Britons living in Uganda. Most are teachers, missionaries or medical volunteers who remained after Britain broke relations with Uganda on July 28, 1976.

"I do not take these reports very seriously and I wish you would not either," Callaghan told reporters as he left the afternoon session of the Commonwealth meeting in London.

"Why don't we all keep cool about this and not give President Amin the chance to think he is putting the wind up us (worrying us)?" he said. "He may have put the wind up you but he hasn't put the wind up me."

British Foreign Secretary David Owen said he has always been anxious about the safety of Britons in Uganda but said those who remained "will know houw to cope."

A Ugandan spokesman in London said the estimated 300 Britons living in Uganda "are in no physical danger," and he denied any link between their restriction and the Commonwealth summit.

The meeting opened with the Ugandan seat conspicuously empty and with the exact whereabouts of Amin, reportedly on his way to London, still a mystery.

The Ugandan spokesman, Idi Osman, said Amin had made it "absolutely clear" he was coming and would probably arrive later this week on his presidential jet.

"The president has been described as a murderer," Osman said. "Up until now he has not had the chance to refute these allegations. The conference could give him this chance."

The embargo against the Britons was the latest in a bizarre series of claims, threats and rumors surrounding the brash dictator's pledge to crash the summit despite the opposition of other Commonwealth leaders reacting to his alleged reign of terror in Uganda.

The latest move recalled a similar ban imposed on about 240 American nationals in Uganda five months ago after President Carter declared that reports of mass arrests and killings in Uganda had "disgusted the entire civilized world." The ban was lifted after four days.

The official Uganda radio, quoting a spokesman for Uganda's vice president, Gen. Mustafa Adrisi, who was reported to be in charge while Amin headed for London, said a decision on the "plight" of the British would have to await the president's return.

Adrisi was quoted as saying that Ugandan security forces had been directed to ensure that no British nationals leave the country. The report, monitored in Kenya, said the troops were told to watch for "such likely movements to defy the directive such as slipping through minor outlets like Mbale and Lake Idi Amin."

Mbale is near the Kenyan border, and Lake Idi Amin is near Zaire.

Adrisi ruled out the possibility of an Entebbe-style raid to rescue the Britons "since most British nationals are scattered over the country."

Rebate for gas misers dead, Rep. Ullman says

Washington (AP) — President Carter's proposed rebates for buyers of energy-efficient cars are dead, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee said Wednesday.

And one of several Ways and Means members who oppose the proposed stiff tax on gas-guzzling cars said there is a least a 50-50 chance of killing that provision as well.

The pessimistic estimates of key portions of the energy plan were offered as the General Accounting Office released a report saying the President knowingly set over-optimistic conservation goals that cannot be met by his proposals.

Only if Americans voluntarily save more energy or if stringent mandatory measures are enacted can Carter's goals be reached, GAO said.

As the Ways and Means Committee adjourned for the day, its chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, told reporters, "the rebate (for purchasers of fuel-efficient cars) doesn't have any support at all."

However, Ullman said a majority of the panel wants a gas-guzzler tax, but he predicted it would not go into effect before the 1979 model year. Some opponents are pressing for a delay until 1980. Carter wants it to take effect on 1978 models as soon as it becomes law.

Rep. Joe Waggoner, D-La., told reporters that 20 of the 37 members of the Ways and Means Committee were ready to vote against the rebate on Wednesday. He said he is advising against delaying the tax because that would weaken the case for removing it from the energy tax bill altogether.

In an effort to cut national gasoline consumption 10 per cent by 1985, Carter proposed a tax of up to $2,500 on inefficient cars and a rebate of up to $500 for purchasers of efficient models.

The rebate ran into trouble immediately when congressmen realized that much of the money would come from buyers of American cars and be paid to buyers of imported cars.

Earlier, the Ways and Means committee approved a maximum $2,000 tax credit for windmills or solar devices installed by homeowners between April 1977 and the end of 1982.

Those tax credits are among the voluntary portions of Carter's energy plan that the GAO said will do little to solve the energy crisis.

The GAO delivered its critical assessment of Carter's energy package in a report to Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee.

Urging the administration to redesign its plan to bring goals for 1985 in line with specific proposals, the congressional auditors said:

"Based on the administration's own estimates, with few exceptions, the plan will fall short of the goals — even if the plan is fully implemented.

"We believe that it is somewhat incongruous to ask the Congress to establish a set of national energy goals, and then propose a national energy plan that is not expected to achieve them," said the GAO.

"Based on the administration's estimates, it does not appear that the conservation provisions of the plan will cause much reduction in energy demand," the GAO said.

Instead, the agency said, "The major impact of the plan . . . seems to be reducing oil imports by shifting to coal rather than by conserving energy."

Missionaries tell Mrs. Carter of treatment in Brazilian jail

Recife, Brazil (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter, confident she has narrowed some of the human rights differences between Brazil and the United States, listened quietly Wednesday as two American missionaraies discribed the horror of their confinement in a Brazilian jail.

Mrs. Carter met for 25 minutes with the Americans, who painted her a picture of half-starved prisoners kept naked in overcrowded cells.

Afterwards, she told reporters that "I sympathize with them," adding that she would take "their personal message" back to President Carter.

The two Americans — Thomas Capuano, 24, a Menonite lay worker from upstate New York, and the Rev. Lawrence Rosebaugh, 42, a Catholic priest from St. Louis, Mo. — were jailed naked for three days last week after their arrest in Recife's central market area while gathering leftovers to feed the poor.

The United States has filed a "note of concern" with Brazilian authorities over the incident.

Capuano said he told Mrs. Carter that he and Rosebaugh were stripped naked and placed in a 9-by-25-foot cell filled with 35 other men, all naked. At night, they said they heard the screams of prisoners being beaten and whipped.

"There was a terrible stench of human excrement and something the prisoners call mold that just sort of grows on you," Capuano said.

For food, the prisoners received a handful of flour, a piece of meat "the size of a nickel or a quarter," and sometimes but not always a small piece of bread, the Americans said.

They said prisoners were so hungry that they lay down and "licked crumbs of bread up" off the floor.

The missionaries said they asked Mrs. Carter to use her influence to bring about an independent investigation of their arrest, saying that the investigation promised by Brazil is being conducted by the same police who arrested them.

"She listened very closely. We don't know what will happen but she knows," Rosebaugh said.

Mrs. Carter's meeting with the two missionaries was the most dramatic example so far of the concern she has placed on human rights during 10 days of travel through Latin America.

Pleased at the results of her talks in Brasilia with President Ernesto Geisel and other officials in this largest South American nation, the First Lady came to Recife to relax and pay a social call on friends here, Mr. and Mrs. Camillo Steiner.

Mrs. Carter said Geisel wanted to talk about relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, while she kept trying to bring the discussions back to human rights.

A U.S. official traveling with the First Lady said Brazil believed the State Department report earlier this year criticizing the human rights situation here was written at the Carter administration's initiative rather than ordered by an act of Congress.

The report so angered Brazil that it canceled a $50 million arms purchase credit and dropped out of a military assistance deal.

Daddy's little boy tells the whole truth

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — A policeman checking on a 3-year-old while his partner was giving the child's father a traffic ticket found the youngster happily playing with a .38 caliber revolver and four bags of marijuana.

Police stopped Leno McGarity Jr., 23, on a traffic violation Tuesday and asked him to step out of the car. While one officer talked to McGarity the other went to tell the little boy not to cry.

Upon stepping up to the car he found the child, the gun and the marijuana.

"My daddy has one just like you," the child said as the officer took the pistol. "And he keeps his dope right there."

The young boy pointed to a paper sack in the front seat and the four plastic bags of marijuana.

McGarity was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and marijuana possession. He was released on $800 personal bond.

Nebraska's check to be slimmer

Washington (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced Wednesday it will cut $142 million in Medicaid payments to 20 states because they have failed to meet requirements for reviewing the quality and efficiency of nursing-home care for the poor.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said he was taking the action because the law requires it but that he would urge Congress to change the law to restore the funds being withheld and to set new requirements for the states.

New York will be hardest hit by the decision to withhold a portion of the Medicaid payments due to go to the states July 1. It will lose $53.8 million, more than one-third the total being withheld from all 20 states.

HEW said it has notified the 20 states involved and is also advising some of those states and several other states that they may have to pay back $377 million in 1975 Medicaid funds they have already received from the federal government.

The states that will get reduced checks on July 1 and the amount of reductions are: Alabama $274,083; Indiana $ 1,214,955; Kansas $1,898,586; Montana $737,379; Nebraska $1,386,147; Tennessee $4,355,809; California $15,359,223; Colorado $2,295,397; Iowa $3,124,071; Maryland $2,236,487; Massachusetts $9,794,808; Michigan $9,196,973: Missouri $1,473,751; New Jersey $4,684,016; New York $53,806,152; North Carolina $2,687,131; North Dakota $503,327; Ohio $6,943,149; Pennsylvania $13,593,459; and Wisconsin $6,616,883.

Delaware, Nevada and Louisiana already had been penalized by HEW for failing to meet the review requirements for mental hospitals. But HEW did not actually reduce the payment to them because they have asked for reconsideration of their cases.

During the previous administration, HEW fought a running battle with Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the House investigations subcommittee, who insisted that the department invoke the penalty clause against states that failed to perform so-called utilization reviews to insure that institutions caring for Medicaid patients are providing quality care at fair prices.

Califano said Wednesday, "The law must be enforced, but it urgently needs to be changed to be reasonable, equitable and effective."

He said he would ask Congress to continue its requirement for quality and efficiency reviews but to simplify the administration of the program and reduce the penalties.

The law requires that each state participating in the federally supported Medicaid program must conduct annual reviews of the care provided by all long-term care facilities that take Medicaid patients.

If the required reviews are not performed in every facility covered by the law, then the state is held in noncompliance and HEW must penalize that state by reducing the amount of federal matching funds for Medicaid.

The GAO examined HEW's records of enforcement and found that the required penalties were not being levied and directed Mathews to invoke the penalty provisions.

The department said it was advising 27 states that they may be forced to pay back $377.6 million in Medicaid funds they received last year.

The department said it was still reviewing the status of those cases, which also involve the states' failure to meet the monitoring requirements.

Califano gave no clue about when a final decision will be made in these cases but he said the legislative changes he will propose "would restore any funds withheld."

Those 27 states are: California $44,993,000; Colorado $3,320,000; Iowa $45,000; Maryland $3,136,000; Massachusetts $19,540,000; Michigan $23,749,000; Missouri $1,539,000; New Jersey $4,981,000; New York $142,252,000; North Carolina $3,954,000; North Dakota $1,753,000; Ohio $9,442,000; Pennsylvania $45,751,000; Wisconsin $13,600,000; Connecticut $11,318,000; Florida $10,836,000; Kentucky $3,897,000; Hawaii $1,218,000; Illinois $5,780,000; Minnesota, $7,561,000; Mississippi $5,577,000; New Hampshire $259,000; Texas $4,137,000; Virginia $679,000; Washington $7,771,000; Oregon $165,000; Vermont $354,000.

Exon aide says HEW working to change law

Associated Press

Norman Otto, an aide to Gov. J. James Exon, said Wednesday he has been assured that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will work immediately to change retroactively laws that have forced the suspension of $1,386,147 in Medicaid payments to Nebraska.

The money was to be paid to the state beginning July 1.

Otto said he had no details on the suspension, caused by the state's inadequate compliance with HEW requirements for review of patient care standards in nursing homes.

But Otto said an HEW deputy director told him by telephone that congressional bills now being considered by the House of Representatives could be amended to prevent a permanent suspension.

He said the Exon administration was told that HEW "is immediately moving to change the law and make it retroactive so the money would be returned to us at a later date."

"It was their desire that would be done before cash flow problems develop," Otto said.

Nebraska is one of 20 states penalized a total of $142 million because of noncompliance with the federal dictates.

The state directors of the Public Welfare and Health Departments could not be reached for comment.

Nebraska was not among another group of states that may be required to pay money back to HEW because of noncompliance with the nursing home regulations.

Robbyn visits Carter

Robbyn Foxx, 8, the cystic fibrosis child for this year, and her brother Travis, 6, met President Carter in the White House Wednesday but mostly were interested in Amy Carter's treehouse.

"You're just beautiful," the President told Robbyn when he met the two youngsters and their parents from Emporia, Kan.

"Where's Amy's tree house?" asked Travis.

Carter led the children out the door, down the path to the tree house. Amy, 9, was in school at the time.

Maddox and Bobby Lee Fears, whom Maddox pardoned while he was governor, bill their act "The Governor and the Dishwasher."

Consumer agency bill nearly dead

Washington (UPI) — President Carter got the word from Capitol Hill Wednesday that the Consumer Protection Agency Bill — battered by years of veto threats, filibusters and lobbyists — is virtually dead for this session of Congress.

Despite strong support this year from Carter, organized labor, consumer advocate Ralph Nader and consumer groups everywhere, the bill fell victim to an intense lobbying campaign by business, a crowded legislative agenda in the Senate and dwindling support in the House.

At a White House briefing with Democratic congressional leaders, Carter was told by Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd that the bill would not be brought up for action in this session unless the House first acted favorably on the measure.

However, House sponsors said the bill was still 20-25 votes shy of a majority and urged that the Senate — which in the past has approved the bill by hefty margins — act first to give the measure some momentum.

Standing quietly behind the entire impasse was James Allen, D-Ala., the Senate's master filibusterer and a chief opponent of the bill. Allen has once again promised to debate the bill at considerable length.

Reporters covering Congress share in $1 million worth of freebies

By Bill Keller
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington – Joe Reporter pushes back his chair from the private press table in the Senate Dining Room and folds up his hometown newspaper He brushes his chin with a linen napkin and strides to the cashier to pay his check slab of rare top round of roast beef broccoli spears spinach salad fresh french rolls and iced tea — $2 75 no tax

Pushing through the throngs of waiting tourists he boards the special elevator reserved for staff and reporters which whisks him to the third floor

Joe enters the Senate Press Gallery and checks with one of the employes for messages Then he plops down in front of his free typewriter grabs a fistful of the free stationery with the impressive letterhead U S Senate Press Gallery ' and begins rapping out a letter to his editor

Dear Chief Just read the piece we ran Sunday on how congressmen live like kings Great story I wish I d written it myself

The perquisites our pampered elected representatives enjoy include plush offices free parking free medical care free plants and picture-framing discount hairstyling massages — you remember the list from perennial damning news accounts

What you probably don t remember because it doesn t get reported nearly as often or as enthusiastically is that reporters who cover Congress share in many of these "perks at taxpayer expense — more than $1 million worth of taxpayer expense each year Rep David Obey, D Wis made the estimate in a recent speech to the Western Wisconsin Press Association

What s more, it can be argued that in the case of the press these perks are an ever-present potential conflict of interest For the relative comfort of the Capitol Hill press corps is controlled by members of Congress the very people the reporters are supposed to be watching with sturdy objectivity

In his speech, Obey listed some of the taxpayer-supported goods and services supplied to reporters who cover Congress with estimates of what they cost each year A few he left out have been added Here s the list

— Twenty four employes of the House and Senate press galleries keep track of legislative activities and field phone messages for reporters There are also special doorkeepers and messengers Cost $592,517

— One hundred eighty-one free, reserved parking spaces in choice locations on the Capitol grounds Comparable cost in a paid lot $130,000

— About 180 free telephones, adding up to about $23 000 a year in phone bills

— Desks, chairs, typewriters and other equipment to furnish two main press galleries overlooking the House and Senate, and comfortable work stations in the congressional office buildings Also, separate offices, with soundproof studios, for radio and TV reporters Cost to maintain about $40 000

— Semi-private elevators shared with members of Congress or staff

— Exclusive press tables in the House and Senate dining rooms, with waiters and menus separate from the tourists Not as fancy as the dining rooms for congressmen and senators, but a big improvement over the long lines and clatter in the public sections of the dining rooms

— Free stationery with congressional letterhead Free typing paper photocopying, and loaner copies of many newspapers from around the country

— Access to the same discount office supplies and barbers, underground subways and convenient check-cashing facilities as members of Congress

— Access to the well-stocked Senate library, document rooms, and a bill status service, which will provide a free computer printout of all the legislation introduced by any member of Congress and its history

"Next thing you know," observed Rep Robert Duncan, D-Ore , "they'll be letting you guys into our gym

Congress hasn t gone that far Some things — the swimming pool, sauna and handball courts, the free plants and picture-framing, the free car-washing — congressmen keep to themselves Nor do many reporters make $57,000, Barbara Walters notwithstanding

But if congressmen live as kings, reporters on Capitol Hill can live as courtiers — and some do

Obey, who heads a commission looking into House operations, won t say whether he thinks some of the press perks should be taken away His commission may venture some recommendations on the subject late this year (Obey has, however, advocated that reporters be required to disclose their financial holdings, the way congressmen must do under a new law)

Obey s point is that there is at least a tinge of hypocrisy in reporters' berating congressmen for the comfort of Capitol Hill without acknowledging that the press considers many of those niceties indispensible to their own work

And to the extent that these frills can seduce congressmen into thinking they are better than the people who sent them here, the same may be true of the press

Obey conceded in his speech that "a million dollars is a small price to pay to enable the press to do its constitutionally protected job of reporting to the American public of the activities of their elected public servants They have an important job to do and we ought to make it as easy as possible for them to do it well

But the same is true of Congress

I don t mind serious stories about congressional waste I welcome them because with a $60-billion deficit we cannot afford waste anywhere

' What I do mind is the national TV reporter who does a three-minute network clip on congressional perks such as free parking without ever getting around to telling his viewers that he himself has a free space on that same Capitol Hill

Trains run slower since Amtrak begun

(c) Washington Star

Washington — Several months ago Amtrak, the government financed railroad passenger corporation quietly put up for sale its three Turbotrains -- something of an odd situation since the $2 3 million Turbos were the fastest trains ever to carry passengers in the United States

What is stranger still — at least on the surface — is that Amtrak should stop service by trains capable of reaching 170-mile an hour speeds at a time when many of its trains are running slower than they were six years ago when the corporation started

Not only that but in some instances Amtrak s trains are even slower than passenger trains were when the railroads were running them nearly three decades ago

In fact an examination of Amtrak s current schedules Amtrak s first schedule on May 1 1971 and a variety of railroad timetables from the late 1940s and early 50s shows

— In 1949 a traveler could leave Washington aboard the Pennsylvania Railroad s Liberty Limited at 5 30 p m and arrive in Chicago at 8 30 the next morning — 16 hours later — an excellent schedule for businessmen The Baltimore & Ohio s Capital Limited made the trip in 15 hours 35 minutes By the time Amtrak took over in 1971 the trip took 17 hours Today it s 19 hours and 50 minutes — when it s on time which turned out to be never in March and only 6 7 of the time in April

— In 1949 a Pennsylvania train required 20¼ hours to travel from Washington to St Louis The current travel time is 24½ hours -- but that s scheduled time The actual time could be far longer since the National Limited was on time only 11 1 in March and 7 7 in April

— The Chicago Milwaukee St Paul & Pacific Railroad whisked passengers from Chicago to Minneapolis in 7 hours and 45 minutes in 1949 a trip that takes Amtrak — on the Milwaukee s rundown tracks — 10 hours and 19 minutes

Precisely why trains in many instances are slower today — or in a few instances only marginally faster — than they were 30 or more years ago is difficult to determine

One major reason it appears is the deterioration of track on the financially sick railroads in the Northeast and Midwest which operate Amtrak s trains

Paul F Cruikshank vice president for operations and maintenance at the financially troubled Milwaukee Road points out that the track between Chicago and Minneapolis over which Amtrak trains travel — and which is also the railroad s principal freight route — has deteriorated sharply Speeds on the line which were generally 70 miles an hour in 1971 are now down to an average of 40 and in some places only 20 m p h

As a result the railroad has asked the federal government for $91million worth of aid to repair the track Pending a decision on that the Milwaukee has asked for $8 million for what apparently is a quick patch up job to bring the speeds back to 60 miles an hour

Wallace W Abbey the Milwaukee s publicist, reminded a reporter that when the railroad was in its heyday its famed Hiawatha passenger trains reached speeds of 100 miles an hour

Other reasons for today s slower speeds include a 1947 order of the Interstate Commerce Commission concerning speed and train safety equipment and the fact that fewer trains are running with more local stops according to Amtrak President Paul H Reistrup

Birmingham Ala (AP) — There s a group of sparrows here that keep going around in circles Their home is in the bottom of a revolving sign

There s a small hole in the hollow sign and the sparrows must time their entry when the revolutions of the sign They do this by perching atop a nearby street light post eyeballing the turning sign and taking off just as it starts its turn toward the service station

That s when the small hole lines up at an angle with the light pole The birds fly over quickly squeezing themselves in before the sign has a chance to turn completely around [illegible]

The birds fly out of the sign on the backside of its turn while facing away from the station

The only problem according to Paul Contorno the station owner is that when the baby birds come out they fly in circles because that s all they ve been doing inside the sign

What would Texas be without Rangers?

By John M. Crewdson
(c) New York Times

Waco, Tex — A decade after their controversial involvement in a bloody farm workers strike produced official suggestions that they ought to be done away with, the Texas Rangers are still around

And it is beginning to look as though, in the words of one of their favorite aphorisms, "As long as there is a Texas there will be a Texas Ranger "

The trouble started 10 years ago this month when A Y Allee, a Ranger captain, and his men were sent into the Rio Grande Valley in a divisive and unsuccessful attempt by the fledgling United Farm Workers Union to strike melon growers at the height of the harvet season

The Rangers escorted workers brought from Mexico across the picket lines to work in the fields and carried out mass arrests of the pickets, something that union supporters charged was instrumental in breaking the strike

After hearing complaints that the Rangers had intimidated some union members and subjected others to verbal and physical abuse, the Texas arm of the U S Civil Rights Commission recommended that the Rangers, then only three years away from their 150th anniversary, be abolished

The idea of Texas without Rangers was as horrifying to most Texans as an announcement that some East Coast concern was planning to turn the Alamo into a taco stand Here on the banks of the slow-moving Brazos, a deep green river that seems to flow with a drawl, such feelings are not hard to comprehend For it was here that, in 1837, men with names like Anson Darnell, Sterrett Smith and Jacob Gross set up the encampment that has become the unofficial home of the Texas Rangers

Fort Fisher, as it is known, has been fully restored in recent years and it is now the site of one of the most unusual monuments ever dedicated to a law-enforcement agency, the Texas Rangers Hall of Fame The history reflected inside the hall is not just that of the Rangers but of an entire state where, for many years they were the only real law

The 20 Ranger heroes enshrined here are perhaps larger in death than in life, though probably not by much

There is Captain Jack Hays, the renowned Indian fighter who frequently left the ground ' littered with the victims of his fearless spirit "

There is John B Armstrong who captured John Wesley Harden, the notorious outlaw, by clubbing him over the head with the massive barrel of his Colt 44

There is Frank Hamer, the Ranger captain who led the posse that did in the bank robbers Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker And there is William J McDonald who, the story goes was sent to quell a riot in an East Texas town early in this century

As the Ranger stepped from the train, the mayor asked him why only one man had been dispatched ' Well, McDonald is reputed to have answered, "You ain t got but one mob have you?

He probably never said it, but to Ranger history, legend is nearly as important as fact The mythical Lone Ranger a Texas Ranger to be sure, is accorded a special place in the Hall of Fame

The calls for the abolition of the Rangers have faded in part because, as an official of the American Civil Liberties Union put it, They've kept a pretty low profile since all that stuff in the late 1960s "

Jim Harrington, a 31-year-old lawyer who runs an ACLU project in San Juan, near the Mexican border, said there had been no recurrence of the troubles a decade ago

For more than 40 years the Texas Rangers have been a sub-unit of the State Department of Public Safety which has a much larger uniformed force that carries out most criminal police functions There are some who now question the need for a hand-picked force of Rangers

Compared to their fierce looking, moustachioed 19th Century predecessors whose photographs adorn the Hall of Fame, the present-day Rangers, many of them bespectacled men of middle age and spreading paunch, seem an unprepossessing lot

But they are still possibly the most elite law enforcement agency in the country, if only because their ranks are so small There are only 94 of the distinctive star in a-circle Ranger badges to go around (the number is fixed by law), and such bard-won prizes are generally surrendered only upon retirement or death

There are no black Rangers, and no women The first Mexican-American, Arturo Rodriguez was admitted in 1969 and one or two others are said to have joined since then

Although the modern Rangers have for the most part remained aloof from Texas politics, the organization was mildly embarrassed in 1972 when it was disclosed that commissions had been handed out to some 300 "Special Rangers" who were given, without the benefit of any training, badges and a license to carry handguns and make forcible arrests

Many of the Special Rangers turned out to be private investigators or security officials for companies like Southwestern Bell Telephone

Apart from riot control and the apprehension of fugitives the Rangers, who are scattered in big cities and little towns throughout the state are primarily criminal investigators And even though they are no longer chasing fence cutters and cattle rustlers or repelling Mexican revolutionaries who stray across the border the spirit of independence acquired in more rought-and ready days seems not to have faded much

Space plans afoot

Washington (UPI) — The space agency is developing a planetary exploration plan that proposes a 1984 launch of two roving Mars vehicles a possible robot landing on Mercury, and flights to Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Halley s Comet and four asteroids

The plan also envisions a 1990 launch of automated ships to land on Mars collect samples of rocks and soil and return them to Earth

These are possible candidates for the future — high priority mission opportunities said A Thomas Young head of planetary and lunar programs in an interview following a series of presentations to a meeting of the American Geophysical Union

— A spacecraft for launch in 1986 at the earliest to orbit Mercury and possibly land a simple exploratory robot on the surface of the planet nearest the sun

— A satellite to set out in 1983 to orbit Venus and map its cloud-shrouded surface with advanced imaging radar

— A spacecraft to be launched in early 1982 to orbit Jupiter and send an instrumented probe deep into its dense hot atmosphere

— A spacecraft for launch in 1985 to orbit Saturn and launch two probes one to study the planet s atmosphere and one to examine the atmosphere of the Saturn moon Titan

— A spacecraft to set out to 1982 to rendezvous with and examine Halley s Comet

— A probe for launch in 1985 to survey the 240-mile-thick asteroid Vesta and three smaller asteroids

Young emphasized that only one of those missions is currently approved by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration management and the White House It is the $285 million Jupiter orbiter probe mission and it has-run into budgetary trouble in Congress

As it now stands, NASA has two planetary exploration projects in the works One is the launch of two voyager spacecraft this summer from Cape Canaveral Fla , to explore Jupiter Saturn and possibly Uranus The other is a flight of a Pioneer spacecraft and an atmospheric probe to Venus next year

In addition two Viking Mars landing craft continue to operate on the red planet although their life detection experiments have been completed without conclusive results and other investigations have been reduced for the long cold Martian winter

The 1984 Mars expedition would cost about the same as the Viking project — $1 billion — and expand the search for life and conduct much more detailed and extensive investigations of the planet s surface and environment

Karen Kuehn 'the bird lady'

Milwaukee (UPI) — Her friends call Karen Kuehn the bird lady

They have good reason Last year Mrs Kuehn and five others took care of more than 1 500 birds

The 37-year-old mother of two is director of bird rehabilitation for the Izaak Walton League of America

The general attitude of most people when they find a baby bird is give it a worm

Mrs Kuehn said at a recent talk on birds and bird care at the Wisconsin Humane Society in Milwaukee

Well sparrows barnswallows and hawks for example don t feed their babies worms

The first thing you should do when you find a baby is keep it warm Their normal body temperature is about 110 degrees So get a light on it for Pete s sake and bring it inside

If you find an adolescent leave it alone If you re not sure whether the bird has been abandoned wait until sunset If it s still there bring it in Remember the mother could have three others that she s off getting food for — and daddy well he could be down at the corner bar

She got interested in bird care about five years ago when she found an injured bird in her yard The fascination grew even though she discoverd she is allergic to birds and her husband dislikes them

Gasohol on brink of progress but could go down drain

Seemingly on the threshold of a breakthrough, is gasohol now about to go down the drain? Not the drain from the gasoline tank in your car to the carburetor but the proverbial drain of lost dreams.

Gasohol is a mix of one part grain alcohol, called ethanol, and nine parts standard gasoline. The enthanol comes from various grains grown on the farms of the nation.

The idea has been around a long time but never taken very seriously by most people. Now, the federal government appears on the verge of providing grants whereby gasohol plants could be set up and run for a profit on an experimental basis.

Thus, the idea that has been around so long suddenly appears to have taken on real possibilities. As you might suspect, the critics are now coming out of the woodwork.

The big pitch is that gasohol is economically unfeasible, that it costs too much to make the product by the time you extract the alcohol from the grain and mix it with the petroleum. Additionally, it is claimed that public acceptance of the product is unproven.

All of those things may be right but it seems to us that the whole idea of the federal program is to determine whether the critics or advocates are right. So do we stop the experimental program now or let it continue and provide us the answers?

The government intends to pump some $85 million into this project, with four plants throughout the nation. It is believed that one of the plants would be located here in Nebraska and a group is formed and waiting for just such an opportunity.

It is claimed by critics that the $85 million is a boondoggle, as is the state gasoline tax subsidy that would enter into the program. But not every experimental effort is a boondoggle and this one seems to have enough going for it to give it a try.

What concerns us is that the entire program be judged on its merits rather than a strictly political basis. Very obviously, there would be forces in the economy that would prefer to leave ethanol the sleeping dog it has been.

There are legitimate objections to the program and plenty of room for questioning of its validity but it is to provide some answers that the program is now proceeding. If the proposition now gets bogged down in an endlesss controversy, it will be unfortunate.

Such controversy does not always produce the best decisions and we hope this is not the case with the gasohol proposal.

Country living no picnic

Things aren't all peaches and cream when you move to the country. If you think otherwise, ask the people living in Wagon Train Heights on the edge of Hickman.

That is not really country living but it is living in a more rural area than Lincoln. Wagon Train Heights is a product of a Farmer's Home Administration low-income housing project.

But two things have happened there. One, the housing has turned out to cost a lot more than expected in terms of payments for utilities and taxes. Secondly, the development has created water supply problems for Hickman that the town is finding difficulty in solving.

No doubt Hickman felt kindly in the beginning about the development, as it does represent growth and, therefore, opportunity for the area. The people getting the homes undoubtedly felt good because that is what home-ownership does to people — makes them feel good.

But having a place of your own and growth in a community have inherent problems and it behooves people and governments to figure out the problems in advance, to whatever extent possible. Some small towns other than Hickman have had the same experience — the housing developments bringing unexpected supporting difficulties.

No doubt these problems will eventually be solved but the business of people lured to the countryside for low-cost living is not the best kind of business. Certainly, the Farmer's Home Administration should do a better job in the process than it has done.

Citizens in general ought to look at such developments with skepticism. Wherever you live, you must pay one way or another for the conveniences of modern living and a lot in what used to be a cow pasture can't change that.

We suspect that the smaller towns around Lincoln have learned something in all this and will look for a lot more answers the next time opportunity comes knocking at the door.

We goofed

In a Tuesday morning editorial here, we mistakenly reported that State Game and Parks Commission Director Eugene T. Mahoney had been appointed by Gov. J. J. Exon.

Governor Exon had nothing to do with the appointment, its being made by the seven-member commission itself.

The un-vacationers

Jim Bishop

New York — Our chief executives will not acknowledge that a true vacation is impossible. When a president of the United States leaves Washington, the trappings of apprehension go with him.

The military aides are in attendance. So is the White House physician. There is a daily briefing on the situation of the world. The hot line to Moscow sits on an end table. State Department and congressional liaison teams phone daily reports.

Herbert Hoover was the last president to take a true holiday. He used to sit on a houseboat in the Florida keys casting for bone fish. No officials were allowed aboard unless invited. He cooked his own breakfast.

Franklin D. Roosevelt enjoyed the waters at Warm Springs, Georgia. The world was tense, so he brought his team and his switchboard with him. He spent each morning signing White House letters.

His secretary, Bill Hassett, insisted that presidential missives should be signed with pen and ink. FDR complied. The secretary dropped each letter on the carpet to dry. The president called it "Hassett's laundry."

Harry Truman enjoyed Key West. He wore a flamboyant sports shirt, but he conducted White House business as usual and conducted press briefings. The president is "on stage" all the time.

Dwight D. Eisenhower visited his farm at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. He also liked long weekends golfing in California. For John F. Kennedy, it was the family compound at Hyannisport, Massachusetts. One of the joys of the family was to toss a political question in air, and allow every one to analyze it, tear it to shreds, and solve it.

Lyndon Johnson was the hardest worker of all. He spent more time in and out of the White House, laboring at affairs of state than the job called for. His cherished fun was to fly to Texas and sit in the kitchen with two black cooks and listen to the local gossip.

Richard Nixon was sold on Key Biscayne, Florida, by his friend Bebe Rebozo. He had three houses rigged up for any emergency, complete with guard gates and heliport. He played poor golf, didn't care for fishing. His greatest pleasure was discussing politics.

Gerald Ford made Vail, Colorado, famous. He was more athletic than the others. Ski slopes became a challenge. He won a few, lost a few. He also enjoyed golf and is building a mansion at Palm Springs, California.

President Carter uses a cottage at St. Simon's Island, Georgia. It is called Grove House, an old wooden building crept over by azalea. His friend, Smith Bagley, heir to the Reynolds Tobacco corporation, owns 1,800 acres there.

Between Brunswick and Savannah, there is a group of barrier islands off the edge of Georgia. In a snobbish sense, St. Simon's could be called the wrong island. Jekyll Island — next door — used to be so laden with millionaires that President Roosevelt said that one-eighth of the world's wealth was at Jekyll in 80 families.

The so-called "Golden Isles" are gifted with deep granulated beaches, thunderous green breakers and the chirp of cicadas. On St. Simon's, John and Charles Wesley, founders of the Methodist Church, built Christ Church in 1736.

Major Pierce Butler, a signer of the U.S. Constitution, ran a big slave plantation there. When Aaron Burr shot and killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel at Weehawken, N.J., he hid on St. Simon's in 1804. The Confederate Army destroyed the old lighthouse during the Civil War; it was rebuilt by the U.S. in 1871.

Today, neither Jekyll nor St. Simon's is expensive. Both have motels and museums and horse trails and golf courses. Reasonable families on reasonable budgets vacation there. Mr. Carter enjoyed the fishing and the salt air at St. Simon's long before he became president.

There's a difference. He just found out that the old, relaxed vacations are gone. A year ago it was Jimmy, Rosalynn and Amy. And a couple of suitcases.

This time it was a cavalcade of automobiles preceded by troopers on motorcycles with sirens. It was reporters, commentators and cameraman. It was aides, secretaries and specialists. It was hot lines and the U.S. Signal Corps setting up long-range radios. It was Secret Service agents and press secretaries.

Navy frogmen examined the bottom of his fishing boat before the engines were started. It was a mockery of a vacation for a man who works hard. His dear friend, Jim Bishop, was his fishing guide. The wrong one, of course.

Italy's Andreotti, 30-years durable

James Reston

Rome — In this city of heroic monuments and feeble governments, Giulio Andreotti stands out as the most durable politician in Europe, with the lone exception of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. For over 30 years, he has survived in the service of his country — six times as under-secretary to the president of the council of ministers, 14 times as minister of internal affairs, finance, treasury, defense or industry, and now, for the third time, as premier at the age of 58.

He looks and talks in his dim office in the Palazzo Chigi like a professor of philosophy, and to hear him tell it in a private talk, the outlook for the future is no worse than the past and maybe a little better. He made the following points:

—The development of Europe over these last 30 years has been disappointing in some ways but remarkable in others. At the beginning, a united Europe was just a dream of De Gasperi. Everyone thought it would be difficult to bring Britain into the Common Market, but now Britain is in and some progress obviously has been made.

—Even in Italy, though over a million young people are unemployed and inflation is running at 20%, the standard of living today would have been unthinkable 30 years ago. Some of Italy's problems are the result of its success in spreading education without providing enough work for the new college graduates.

—It would be inaccurate to say that the rising generation in Italy all share the dream of a united Europe, but there is a great awareness that the European Economic Community has been instrumental in avoiding a third world war for 30 years — what he called "the longest period of peace we've had in Europe."

—There was political unrest, uneasiness in Italy today, even a revolutionary spirit. "It comes from two factors: first, great wealth in one section of Italian society and great poverty in another, which we are trying to correct through tax reform, and second, a vast migration of people from the land into the cities." But he insisted, "For the moment there are no threats of a popular front government including the communists."

—Still there were, he said "great difficulties," particularly because of what had happened in the field of international economics. "The oil crisis greatly slowed down the work on economic and monetary union. It was originally scheduled for 1980 and is now much further off in the future."

Incidentally, the theme at Communist Party headquarters is not all that different from Andreotti's observations. Sergio Segre, head of the foreign section of the Partito Communista Italian, sounds infinitely patient and even co-operative. He does not see the Soviet Union as an "imperialist" power. His party is concentrating, he says, on building a consensus for order and a better standard of living in Italy. It sees no conflict between detente with the Soviet Union and President Carter's campaign for human rights.

He does not agree that Italy is in a "revolutionary" mood or even that it is in the "pre-revolution" phase of its history.

Andreotti, who is going to Washington later this summer, had some amiable observations about Carter's presence at the recent summit meeting in London.

"What impressed me," he said, "was Carter's sense of perspective. He sees and places great emphasis on a few lines of world policy, for example, energy policy and raw materials. He has a very wide view of things, I would say almost a religious view. This comes out in the way he approaches problems. I believe it reflects a great moral conviction. He doesn't get bogged down in procedures. We were very favorably impressed."

On the larger question of Italy's present attitude toward the United States, the premier said that the anti-American campaign of a few years ago, provoked by communist propaganda, had declined. "As an example, there were great polemics against the La Maddalena base (American tactical nuclear submarine base in northern Sardinia) years ago.

Today we have much less difficulty on measures regarding NATO. In the parliament the other day, the vote to strengthen our NATO forces went through with an easy majority."

The premier acknowledged that there seemed to be a rise of terrorism in this country, and that he didn't quite know the cause of it. Partly it was the result of the crowded cities, partly the result of using "permissive" anti-fascist legislation to weaken the authority of the state, and partly the result of a general moral decline in Western societies.

Perhaps, he said, Italy had emphasized economic development too much and ignored moral and cultural development, but he believed the influence of the family and to a lesser degree of the Roman Catholic Church was still strong. For example, he said, after a more liberal divorce law was passed in Italy, there was a remarkably small number of requests. Shortly after he spoke, the Italian senate defeated a bill to legalize abortion, after a strong anti-abortion campaign by the church.

Asked about the rise of so-called independent national Communist Parties or Eurocommunism, he said this was a problem for both the democracies of Western Europe and for Moscow. Eurocommunism, he said, was born out of the atmosphere of detente which former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger worked so hard to create.

The West must be cautious, he said, not to write off the possibility of independent national Communist Parties, and he implied that it would be wrong to criticize such a development too casually. "Naturally," he said, "it seemed to us a bit strange that you (specifically Kissinger) should take such a rigid attitude toward this problem (Eurocommunism) while you were cultivating good relations with Peking and Moscow."

In general, however, looking at the perspective of his 30 years in Italian politics, Andreotti took a cautiously optimistic view of the last quarter of the century. Having survived so much over so long a time, he was not prepared to believe, he said, in the collapse of Western democracy.

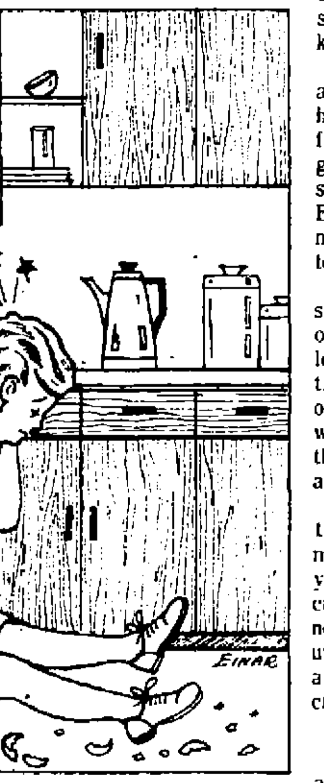
A shelf only as strong as smallest peg

Patchwork Prairie Country

By LaVerna Hassler
Star Staff Writer

How many years has it been since grocery stores gave free dishes with a purchase of groceries? I don't mean a dish plus a fee at a reduced rate paid by the customer but an honest-to-goodness dish free of any strings.



A number of years ago I collected custard cups, oven-ware cups, that made so many trips into the oven I might well have stored them there. But I didn't. I put them on the top shelf of a small cupboard in the kitchen. There they were safe.

Last week I opened the door and was bopped soundly on the head. Two cups tumbled out followed by the entire row. I gasped as I viewed the shattered glass on the floor. Eleven custard cups were safe no longer. One was left tottering on the shelf.

What happened? I found the small peg that holds the shelf on the underside had become loose and allowed the shelf to tilt outward. Thus when I opened the door, the support was taken from the dishes and they tumbled out only to crash at my feet.

I began to think back, counting the years, and decided it must have been at least fifteen years ago that I added the cups to my cupboard. I had never broken or chipped one until that day when it sounded as if the whole world had crashed down.

Yesterday I visited the city and made another purchase of similar baking dishes. These, too, are oven-ware but larger than the conventional custard cups. They are not the pottery type which are quite expensive but brown glass, bright and shiny with a new shape. Whether they will be as serviceable will remain to be seen but I have found a new storage place for them.

How the corn and milo grow these hot and humid days. With the adequate rainfall we have had, it makes everything grow rapidly. Today The Farmer is attaching the cultivator to the tractor and plans to begin cultivating milo this afternoon. The rains that make the field crops grow also make the weeds grow. In fact some of the fields are so green with weeds that it is difficult to see the rows. At the moment farmers are hoping for a few days of sunshine to allow the fields to dry so they can work them. With the big equipment that cultivates eight and ten rows at a time, it does not take long to cover a field.

What a lovely fragrance the madonna lily has. With the window open near my desk, I am almost intoxicated with the scent. Nearby the delphinium blooms, a heavenly shade of blue. I put three stakes into the ground and tied the stalks to the stakes. The flower stems were so heavy they were touching the ground.

A black walnut tree sprouted this spring near the patio . . . in fact, too near the patio. Squirrels buried the nut last fall as a walnut tree is nearby but evidently forgot about this one. It is such a nice vigorous tree but we will have to move it next spring as it is too close to the house. If squirrels would carry rulers with them and measure the distance before burying nuts they would stand in my good graces.

I suppose the reason the little tree is such a fine specimen is because it has been safe from the rabbits, growing so close to the house.

It will have to be protected next winter with a wire guard. Nature always has some pest to undo the good another animal does.

In fact, I see the white butterflies, airy and delicate, flying over the cabbage plants. I dare not admire their graceful flight too much because I know they are looking for a likely spot to deposit their eggs. In a few weeks their worm offspring will be eating the cabbage leaves. Now they have small baseball-sized heads on them. I do not intend to share my bounty with the worms.

Jack Crimmins, strictly 'a corner guy'

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — Jack Crimmins, who died in Boston the other day at the age of 70, was what they call up there "a corner guy." For those who live in less civilized parts of the universe, it means somebody who hangs around the street corner, picking up the particular brand of intelligence so valuable in politics known as "street sense."

Officially, he was Ted Kennedy's personal driver in Massachusetts, and especially during his campaigns when Kennedy worked the state as if it were one immense ward and needed a wheelman who knew every turn. But more important, he was Kennedy's ears in the streets of his city and state in a way no well-scrubbed Harvard white-shoe kid could ever have been. He was one of those foot soldiers of politics upon whom all the good urban politicians of this country rely, far more typical of the game than those who make Page 1 every day.

Crimmins was as opinionated as a cab driver with the meter running. He was all heart, but he was also all Irish and all South Boston, which meant he was also unabashed about expressing the prejudices of the community in which he lived.

He took his pleasures and his hates straight, and didn't like them confused. When Father Robert Drinan first ran for Congress in 1970, a reporter who had been covering the Drinan campaign was riding with Kennedy and Crimmins. Kennedy asked how Drinan was doing, and the reporter said he thought he might win. Crimmins, looking straight ahead behind the wheel, muttered between clenched teeth: "A priest running for Congress! I wish he was running in my district so I could vote against him! He'll get murdered." (Drinan won.)

In the same campaign, a black candidate was running against a Democratic regular for Congress and had been endorsed by the Catholic Church, a circumstance that doubly offended Crimmins. He called blacks "stove covers" and the idea of Holy Mother the Church backing one was more than he could fathom.

He was, says an old friend, "Kennedy's ambassador to the blue-collar, three-decker world of South Boston. Jack always brought him the voice of what he was hearing in South Boston, and he brought it in unvarnished terms."

He was a veritable thesaurus of the street vernacular of Southie. He would talk disparagingly about the old Irish who were "two-boaters" who "came down from the ice" — whose families had settled briefly in Newfoundland before coming on to Boston. He would say of an unco-operative snob: "He wouldn't tell you if your coat was on fire." Of a shyster lawyer: "He couldn't get you out of jail if your time was up." Or: "He couldn't fix a library card." Of an inept public official: "He could screw up a two-car funeral." Of a cheap crook: "He'd steal a hot stove." And of a glib operator: "He could talk a dog off a meat wagon."

Kennedy met Crimmins in 1961, when Kennedy served as a $1-a-year assistant district attorney while waiting to run for the Senate. Crimmins was an investigator, but in a short time, he was doing nothing but driving Kennedy when he was in Massachusetts (he was with him at Chappaquiddick) and serving as his man during campaigns. But the relationship was more paternal than subservient. Crimmins called Kennedy "Senator" in his presence, "but after a few pops at night," a friend recalls, "he called him 'the kid.'"

Crimmins was transparently fond of Kennedy, but he never hesitated to disagree with him. When his beloved South Boston became ensnarled in the school busing controversy and Kennedy outspokenly came out on what Crimmins thought was the wrong side, he was unhappy, friends say, but mostly because he knew the grief his people would cause Kennedy.

And he didn't like Kennedy's support of welfare recipients, either. "What the hell are you meeting with all them welfare bums for?" he would ask Kennedy. "Aw, Jack," Kennedy would say. "What do you mean?" he would interrupt. "They ought to go get a job."

Kennedy, on hearing of Crimmins' death, said he had benefited greatly from his "Irish heritage and common sense." Jack Crimmins was not just a guy who held Ted Kennedy's coat. He told him when it was on fire.

Gay leaders brace for battles

Associated Press

As soon as Miami voters repealed a local law banning discrimination against homosexuals, the ripples started to spread.

With the victors trumpeting plans for new battles elsewhere, leaders of gay groups in the nation's capital, San Antonio, Tex., Minneapolis and California found themselves forced to consider their strategy against a potential offensive.

And gay leaders across the country were offering different predictions about what the new fights would mean.

Some feared a backlash in which they would lose newly won rights. Others said the national attention stirred by the fight would be good in the long run, even if at first there were setbacks.

The talk of new fights started in earnest in the first flush of victory Tuesday night for Anita Bryant, the singing orange-juice promoter, fundamentalist Christian and anti-gay leader in Miami.

"All America and all the world will hear what the people have said," she declared soon after learning her side was winning by a 2-to-1 margin. Then she singled out the four areas as places into which her group, Save Our Children, would soon move. An estimated 40 communities nationwide have gay rights laws.

By Wednesday, other spokesmen for the group were backing off Miss Bryant's prediction, saying no plans were definite. But the warning was enough to be taken seriously in the four communities.

Miss Bryant herself was off to a religious revival Wednesday night in Norfolk, Va. Gay rights leaders, meeting during the day there in response, said that despite the vote totals they had won a moral victory in Miami because more people were aware of the debate.

And in Miami, homosexual spokesman Bob Kunst declared that Miss Bryant had miscalculated.

"Bryant may have tasted blood at this time, but no way does she have a chance in those other places," Kunst said. "They are absolutely crazy to go into Minneapolis. That ordinance has been there for years . . . In California, the people won't be nearly as nice as they were here; the gay community is much more organized . . . The more Bryant does this number the more there will be a backlash against Miami."

In California Robert I. McQueen, editor of The Advocate, the nation's largest gay newspaper, said "the defeat there makes our life much more difficult . . . there has been a trend noticeable mostly in the state legislatures where almost any anti-gay legislation has won . . . In California the prospects of the anti-gay marriage bill are very good. Pro-gay legislation has been having a very difficult time."

If California becomes a battleground, it could be a hot one. It passed a so-called "Homosexual Bill of Rights" in 1975 that legalizes all sexual acts in private between consenting adults and is now considering a law to ban discrimination against homosexuals.

A number of cities in California also have ordinances similar to the one nullified in Miami — including San Francisco, where an estimated one in seven of the city's 680,000 residents is homosexual.

And in recent years, San Francisco's attitude toward gays has been notable for its tolerance.

The Castro Street area, one of two large homosexual neighborhoods, often resembles a street fair on sunny weekends with men in cutoffs strolling arm in arm and lounging about restaurants and bars.

It is a well-kept, middle-class area and gay community leaders say they revitalized it. Last year Chip Carter appeared at the annual gay tricycle race to win votes for his father's presidential race.

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone declared Wednesday that the Miami vote "says that some people have rights and others do not. I think that is terribly wrong."

In Minneapolis, lawyer and gay rights activist Jack Baker agreed with Kunst that a Bryant campaign would fail. "We have been at the process of education since 1969," he said.

Baker estimated about 5 per cent of Minnesotans — 20,000 persons — are "up front gay," and 2,000 are in the gay rights movement.

But State Sen. Howard Olson, a farmer who helped defeat a proposed gay rights bill in the Minnesota legislature last month, said the Florida vote is encouraging, and reflects public opinion in his state.

Olson said he expects new pressure for a law next year similar to ordinances in effect in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Marshall that prohibit discrimination based on "affectional preference."

There were 27 complaints filed under the Minneapolis ordinance in the first two years after it was passed in 1974, but because it is designed to encourage conciliation, few have reached the court stage.

In one case now under appeal, a hearing examiner ruled that Big Brothers, Inc., can distribute information about the affectional preference of would-be volunteers, as long as it does so for all applicants. The group provides male companions for fatherless boys.

That case reflects fears about such a law's effects on children — an argument similar to Miss Bryant's and to Olson's fear that a state law could require hiring of militant homosexual teachers.

In Washington, gay activists estimate the homosexual community numbers about 50,000, and they say the local law is so closely linked to black rights — it is part of an omnibus anti-discrimination bill — that it would be difficult to rescind.

It is difficult to find out how often the law has been invoked for gays, but Franklin Kameny, a gay rights activist and member of the Commission on Human Rights, said such numbers are "no real criterion either of the need for the law or of what the law is doing.

". . . A lot of people will just call me and complain." Kameny said. ". . . I tell them first to get a copy of the law and bring the copy to the landlord or whoever and say, 'See, this is the law.' Ninety-nine times out of 100, the case is solved that way . . . The ultimate effect . . . is that it has become known that you just don't discriminate against gays in the District."

Vicious hail sweeps through Chicago area

United Press International

A vicious hailstorm swept through the Chicago area Wednesday afternoon, forcing a brief evacuation of the O'Hare International airport control tower at the world's busiest airport.

The storm also "spooked" horses running at Arlington Park race track.

The O'Hare tower was evacuated for about four minutes when wind gusts hit 73 miles per hour. Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Patrick O'Sullivan said the tower windows began to shake "and we were afraid if the windows came in, some people would get hurt."

The storm hit Arlington Park seconds after twelve 2-year-olds crossed the wire ending the first race. Several of the horses, including an outrider's horse, bolted. The jockeys, who huddled behind a light pole and trash barrel, sustained large welts from the hailstones.

"I couldn't pull my horse up and neither could anyone else pull them up because the hail hitting them in the rear just kept them running," Larry Snyder, who won the race on Roman Advocate, said. He said he had to wheel his mount around to face the oncoming hail before it stopped.

A late spring cold snap carried the mercury to record lows Wednesday from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and from the Atlantic to the Mississippi Valley and Texas.

A heat wave, dust storms and flash flooding plagued parts of the West.

A funnel-laden storm destroyed barns and machine sheds, severely damaged four filling stations and tore down trees and power lines at Pine City, Minn., Tuesday night.

"The streets look like a garbage pit," Ken Kern, news director of station KCMP, said. "Trees are down everywhere. Glass is all over."

'Gay Libbers' win privileges at Missouri U

St. Louis (UPI) — A federal appeals court Wednesday ruled the Gay Lib, a homosexual organization, is entitled to use meeting facilities of the University of Missouri at Columbia and to seek student activities funds.

"I have no doubt that the ancient halls of higher learning at Columbia will survive even the most offensive verbal assaults upon traditional moral values," wrote Judge William H. Webster of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"Solutions to tough problems are not found in repression of ideas."

The University's Board of Curators in 1972 denied official recognition to the group. The denial has prevented Gay Lib from using campus facilities for meetings and from applying for financial support from activities funds.

The appeals court ruled 2-1 that denial of recognition deprived the organization's members of constitutional rights to assembly and free speech.

Judge Donald P. Lay said university officials' contention that recognition would encourage violation of the Missouri law against sodomy was unsupported by the evidence.

"It is difficult to singularly ascribe evil connotations to the group simply because members are homosexuals," Lay said. "An interesting fact is that not all members of the group are homosexuals."

New museum named

Caracas, Venezuela (UPI) — Armando Reveron, one of Venezuela's most distinguished painters, has been honored by the establishment of a museum with his name. The museum is in the small town of Macuto on the central coast of Venezuela, where Reveron painted many of his famous seascapes.

Public's reaction may have stopped metric signs

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Highway Administration said Wednesday the public has been protesting its proposal to convert traffic signs to the metric system, and a congressman said the agency has decided to drop the plan.

Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said in a floor speech the FHA told him by telephone Wednesday that the project would be dropped "effective immediately."

A spokesman for FHA Administrator William Cox declined to confirm or deny Grassley's statement, but said the FHA has been getting "heavily negative" comments from the public on the metric proposal and will make an announcement on the issue next week.

The FHA published its proposal in the Federal Register April 27. It said the FHA would start changing the traffic signs on July 1, 1978, and, if the project proved feasible, complete the conversion project by Jan. 1, 1980.

"There has been a large response and it has been heavily negative," the spokesman said.

$2 million spent on training

New York (AP) — American businesses spend about $2 billion a year to educate employes, and the bulk of it goes to train the old rather than new workers, according to a report by the Conference Board

In 1975, $1 6 billion went for company-run programs, $220 million was used to help employes pay tuition, and another $180 million was spent for other outside courses

The study by the Conference Board, a private, nonprofit research organization, is based on a survey of 610 U S corporations with 500 or more employes

The most popular program, offered by 89 per cent of the companies polled, was the one to help employes with tuition. About 75 per cent provide in-house courses and 74 per cent other types of outside courses

Concerning the job that secondary schools and colleges do to train employes, senior personnel executives said, "Our education system should give greater emphasis to preparation for work "

In a related study, the average worker is at least a high school graduate, and one-sixth of them are college graduates, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics

Figures reported in a monthly newsletter published by finance companies indicate a continued trend toward more education among the labor force

Bureau statistics show that in March 1976, nearly three out of four employed persons were high school graduates, and that one-third of those working had completed at least one year of college

The newsletter also reported that the proportion of workers who are high school graduates has increased more among men than among women, a change from the trend reported in previous years

Jobs increased in Chicago area hit by violence

Chicago (AP) — City officials have promised to make 310 more summer jobs available for youths in the predominantly Spanish-speaking Humboldt Park community that blazed with weekend violence

The city s Human Services Department said Tuesday a day after officials met with Latin leaders that a total of 1 000 summer jobs will be offered

The figure is the same as the job allotment for the area last year but an increase over what the city had planned to make available this summer, said First Deputy Commissioner Hugh S Osborne

The number of jobs had been cut because of the new $2 30 hourly minimum wage Osborne said the agency reduced the number of jobs to correspond with the amount of money available The jobs are open to economically disadvantaged youths between the age of 14 and 21 years

Associated Press

Putting up a windmill on your rooftop or in your back yard may save you money on energy costs, but it doesn't always guarantee you a friendly reception from your local electric company.

A small, but growing number of homeowners are investing thousands of dollars to turn wind power into electricity through windmills. Some are trying to sell their surplus power back to utilities, but find the companies not always thrilled by the idea.

There's no uniform response to the windmill idea from America's utility companies. Some say windmills can be hooked into their system. Some say it is too dangerous. Some say they will buy excess power generated by a private citizen. Some want to charge the customers a monthly fee for the hookup. Some say the citizen won't be able to generate enough power even for his or her own use.

But an Associated Press spot check found people in Arkansas, Florida, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, New York, Rhode Island, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin who either recently have installed their own windmills (and other power sources such as hyrdro power) or who have applied for permission to install them.

Many want to plug into a utlility's electric system to back up their own. The idea of hooking in to a utility's system and getting paid for excess power fed back into the system is not a new one.

For many years, utilities have been buying excess power generated by big business. In Hawaii, 40% of the power is generated by sugar mills which burn cane waste. Northern States Power in Minneapolis buys some power from the Ford Motor Co., and Georgia Power buys small amounts from industrial firms.

So utilities which doubt the value or feasibility of private power raise the ire of people such as Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., who installed a windmill two years ago near his home at Chenaqua, Wis. It cost about $5,000 for the equipment and necessary permits; other installations have cost from $4,000 to $10,000.

Reuss says he gets about 75% of his power needs from his windmill — but exactly how much power a homeowner can count on depends mainly on how much wind there is.

Unlike many experimenters, Reuss had no trouble with his local utility. He agreed, however, that being a congressman might have helped.

But other utilities that oppose the use of windmills "are displaying a public-be-damned attitude at its worst," Reuss said. "The battle has been fought and won, and it's just a matter of telling the utilities that they better join the 20th Century — while there still is one."

Most people who win permission to use utility power as a backup for windmill power have a device called a synchronous inverter. The machine monitors power needs and draws electricity from windmills or the local utility, as needed.

Jim Wurth of Boynton Beach, Fla., was one of the first people to use the device. It finally helped him persuade Florida Power & Light Co. to join his experiment.

Wurth bought two windmills in 1975 and set them up in his back yard. After overcoming local ordinances, he waged a two-year battle with the power company. Finally, after heavy pressure from state officials, FP&L officials began cooperating.

They eventually liked what they saw so much that they bought Wurth's windmills for further experimentation and displayed his system prominently in their latest annual report.

Florida Power & Light's initial resistance wasn't unusual. But sometimes it takes state action to allow a homeowner to hook up a windmill.

S. Roland Morgan Jr. of Little Compton, R.I., owner of a windmill that provides all the electricity he needs — when the wind is blowing steadily — has received permission from the Narragansett Electric Co. to hook into its lines. But he still is trying to reach an agreement on credit for his excess power.

"When I first told them about my plan (two years ago) and that we would be running their meter backwards, they thought that was a good joke," said the 70-year-old retired teacher.

"Then the engineers came, and scratched their heads and said, 'Damn, we're losing money on you.' So they put a lock on the meter to prevent me getting credit.

"They thought it was a joke, but it's no joke and they're getting mighty interested now," he said.

Three generations take same university course

By Patty Beutler
Star Staff Writer

They say it's in the genes, their love of literature and the arts.

Whatever the motivation, mother, daughter and grandmother — the latter recoils at the word — are enrolled in the same University of Nebraska-Lincoln summer school course.

Prof. James McShane's short story class may never be the same.

Kit Voorhees, her mother Kate Morris, and her daughter Katie, are not your average-type undergraduates.

The three generations — all christened Katherine, but nicknamed Kate, Kit and Katie — Kafka, Stephen Vincent Benet and James Joyce in a daily two-hour class during the three-week summer presession. Each brings to the seminar analytical skills influenced by the prevailing mood of her growing up years.

Mrs. Voorhees tends to interpret her reading more in terms of morality which she says dominated her generation. On the other hand, it's social mores that reigned in her mother's time and a "tell it like it is, babe" attitude that guides her daughter's generation.

The different slants provide input that "invariably meshes," as Mrs. Voorhees says, and the three "end up with a composite that's just glorious." They hold most of their literary talks in the car on the way to class, after each has noted her opinions and analysis in a required journal. "It seems more non-cheating that way," Mrs. Voorhees adds, hoping not to dominate her daughter's ideas.

Sharing two texts among them, each has her own special reading place — Mrs. Voorhees in the music room, Katie on the living room couch and Mrs. Morris upstairs in her room. Four Voorhees teenage daughters keep the 2501 Lafayette St. house hopping. "You learn to read in confusion," Mrs. Morris confides.

A resident of Bucks County, Pa., Mrs. Morris — known as "Cakey" to her grandchildren and everyone in her hometown village — planned her family visit to coincide with the class.

Married and a mother before she could finish her college education, she's been gathering credits at several colleges ever since. Still without a degree, she finally told herself "phooey, I can live without it" and opted to audit the class. Although her daughter and granddaughter are taking the course for credit, she "thoroughly enjoys not turning in papers." That's the privilege, she figures, of someone who's "too damn near three-quarters of a century old."

In spite of her age, you'd be hard-pressed to call Mrs. Morris old. Her dangling blue earrings, just a shade darker than her clear blue eyes, bob about in conversation as she tosses out words faster than a reporter's pen can record them. "As you see, I like to talk," she's quick to say, attributing the propensity to the Irish in her.

Today's barefooted and shorts-clad students are still "shocking" to her when she thinks back on the formally dressed students of her early college days.

"In our day the professors were sacrosanct, almost saintly," she recalls. Modern teachers, like McShane, she finds refreshing in the way they give credence to any opinions at all, as long as the student qualifies and pursues his ideas. "He reaches into my mind," she says of McShane.

Mrs. Morris' mind has not been idle when not in class. She writes verse and vignettes for a local magazine back home and has had a play published. She's also done her fair share of talking to audiences from the stage.

Early television fans might have caught her in CBS's first live western, "Action in the Afternoon" which made the tube in 1953. "All you had to do was be able to talk and ride a horse," she says, modestly, of her acting start in the western stock company. Just five years ago she was on the stage in an Equity production with Liza Minnelli.

"Father said Mother was born acting, and he didn't mean it complimentarily," Mrs. Voorhees intervened with a laugh. Her father, she remembers, called all actors long-haired men and short-haired women — and that was quite an indictment back then.

Reading was much more acceptible in the family. "Reading has always been a priority," Mrs. Voorhees said. "The vacuuming doesn't get done and the dishes don't get washed. Reading comes first."

Mrs. Voorhees too had an interrupted college career. She had always wanted to study music, but back then her dad gave his okay for college only if she studies nursing, home economics or medical technology. She chose the last, but married before she finished. Child-rearing came next. Now, at last, she's enrolled full-time at UNL with a major in music and a minor in English.

Just as her mother and grandmother tip the traditional student scale in one direction, Katie, on the other end, is younger than most students. She went through Pius X High School in three years and, at 17, will be a college freshman this fall. She's getting a head start on her credits and doesn't mind that her first college experience is a family affair.

The Staffer

Slow down, America, you re missing something

You re probably just watching the utility poles and billboards clip by a lot slower than before and cussing about it

I'll be the first to agree that the Interstate Highwav System wasn t designed for 55 m p h , but 55 is probably a bit too fast for some of the state s more beautiful, and lesser known roads — like Highway 13, a short nine-mile stretch between Highways 59 and 84, in Knox County

I ran across this road in the lush rolling hills of the northeast Nebraska county quite by accident during a recent trip Curiosity took me to look at the tiny community of Winnetoon, west of Creighton, and also a dead end — no more paved road, or story

So, I took 13 as an attractive alternative to retracing my tracks back to the major highway Among other things I saw Bazile Mills, not whom, but what a small town of 44 with a picture-perfect white church steeple poking out of the hills

Suddenly I was 16 again as I saw a young farm boy, obviously freshly scrubbed and probably on his way to visit his girl in Bazile Mills He was driving the family car, also freshly scrubbed, and we shared an equal anxiety about what the night might bring He with his girl, and me with this whole stretch of fresh territory

The quiet dusk was broken with the chug-pop-pop of an old one lung John Deere tractor, driven by a farmer taking advantage of the waning daylight to finish his plowing

Those one-cylinder tractors were a remarkable machine, and among the many sounds I grew up with in western Nebraska farm country. That tractor was as reliable as this farmer s land had been through the years

On another hillside was a Hereford cow trying to moo some sense into her frisky calf who seemed more concerned about playing than grazing.

Too soon the weathered old barns with somewhat majestic cupolas, the white farmhouses with their lightening rod roofs, the battered old implements, all gave way to another speedway and I was sucked out of dreamland back to the pavement

An occasional "Eat Gas Now and a few "Gas Oil Beer" signs twinked on the roadside, beckoning the weary traveler to sit for a spell — but the 18-wheelers and the four-wheelers whizzed on by and I joined them, aiming for another story deadline

To my surprise, and pleasure, things were rather relaxed at the other end of that deadline Crofton newspaper publisher John Kerr was busting his buttons like a proud father as he showed me his latest purchase, a shiny silver 67 Corvette, classic

As we went for a ride in the sleek fastback, slicing the farmland between Crofton and the recently retired town of Niobrara, Kerr marveled over the size of a crow that flew up from the borrow pit

Do people notice things like that?" he asked

Newspaper people do sometimes, country people for sure and maybe a few city folk But people are just too preoccupied with everything at eye level to take a look at a bird in flight, a flower growing, or a bug making his way through life

Maybe it s our job to make people slow down a bit he said gearing down his Vette and slowing up himself to take in the scenery

Give it a try Look down, or up for a welcome change

Pier manager hates to fish

Deerfield Beach, Fla (AP) — Charley Thompson runs the Deerfield Beach fishing pier but if pressed, he ll admit he hates to fish

I hate to tell people I don t like to fish but it s true says the former Cleveland resident who has run the pier since 1968

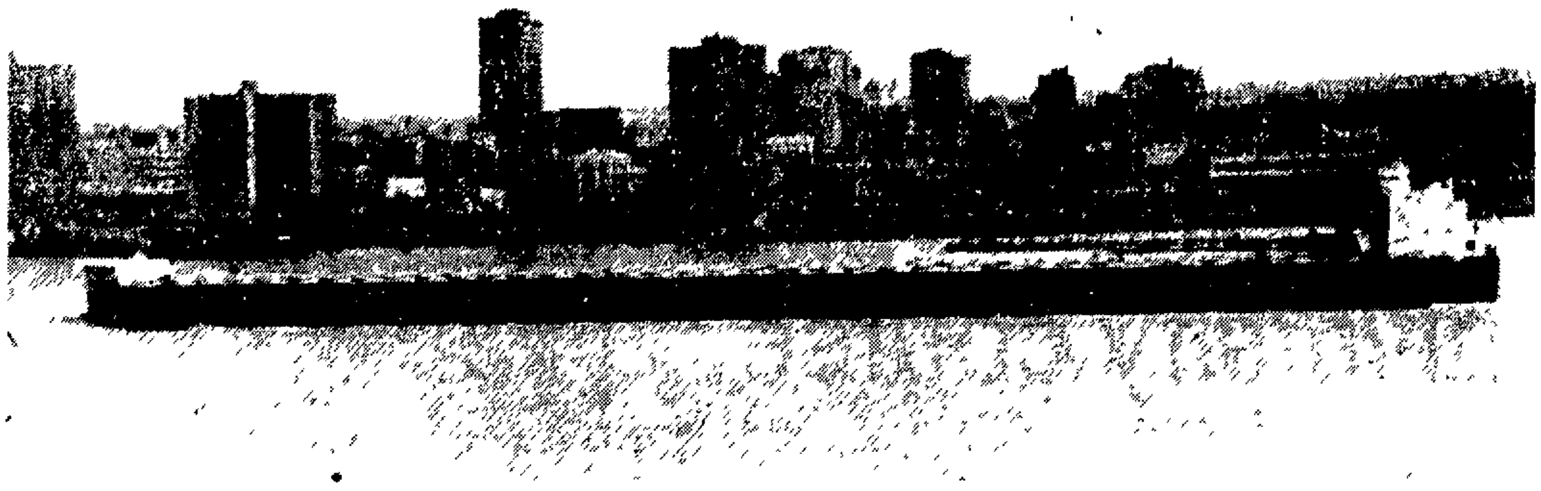
I don t have the patience for it I got better things to do than stand out in the hot sun

Thompson does well, however at getting people who do like to fish to do it at Deerfield Beach The pier, open around the clock seven days a week had an estimated 40,000 customers last year

They included then-President Gerald Ford, campaigning in Florida for election

' I heard he was coming to Fort Lauderdale, so I sat down and wrote him an invitation in longhand on a yellow legal pad Thompson said

I told him my secretary ran off with a fish hook salesman I guess that did it "



Longer ship

The Mesabi Miner, the fourth and newest 1,000-foot supership on the Great Lakes, seems to stretch the length of downtown Windsor, Ontario, in this shot from across the Detroit River. After being christened Saturday in Duluth, it will haul iron pellets from Minnesota to ports on lower Lake Michigan.

Dear Abby

By
Abigail
Van Buren

DEAR ABBY. I'm a 17-year-old girl who many times has felt like going further than I should with a boy I really like Abby, I m going to ask you a question I wish I could ask my mother but can't because all I would get is a lecture

Why should a girl be expected to wait until she's married to have sex? We all have normal passions that get stronger with adolescence. Married people have an outlet for their sex, but what about unmarried people?

Other countries like Samoa permit premarital sex Why can t we? I can see logical reasons for not being promiscuous, such as danger of venereal disease and unwanted pregnancy, but when two people want sex and know how to prevent disease and pregnancy, why the big ' No No' "

Our society is so advanced in other ways, but it insists that unmarried people either suppress their normal sex urges or pretend they don t exist

If there is any good reason why kids who are in love should refrain from premarital sex, I like to know what it is

SPEAKING FOR TEENS

DEAR SPEAKING· The big "No No" is not the relationship between two normal, healthy, MATURE, responsbile people "in love": it's the use of sex by the immature, irresponsible, confused adolescent who mistakes his first sexual stirrings for "love."

"Knowing" how to prevent unwanted pregnancies and venereal disease is not enough to prevent them, witness NO decline in illegitimacy even with the Pill. And in spite of all the education concerning venereal disease, it's still a major public health problem.

When you are ready to accept all the responsibilities and commitments of "love" and a family, you will not ask me what is wrong with premarital sex

DEAR ABBY. I am writing in reference to a letter from DAZED, who ridiculed her friend for spending so much money on her dog's funeral Thank you, Abby, for saying that to some people their pets are their "children "

My beautiful Chihuahua, Chichi, died last year at the age of 14, and if I had had the money to give her an elaborate funeral, I would have gladly spent it

When Chichi got sick, the vet told me her kidneys were failing, so I offered one of mine, but he said he could get a dog s kidney if he thought it would help

Yes Chichi was my "child " Actually, she was more loving than a human child She loved me and asked for nothing in return but my love

I know many children who don't give their parents love, but expect their parents to give them everything in creation

So, if a person really wants love, he should get a pet and love it like a child

ANOTHER PET LOVER

DEAR PET LOVER: We are a nation of pet lovers. I will come as no surprise to you that Americans spend more money on pet food than on baby food.

Scientists nearing goal of sperm sex separation

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

Some Nebraska scientists don't want the big buck; they only want to help ease the world's hunger problems. And they may be close enough to their goal that any more progress would spell success.

They're involved in research to invent an apparatus that's able to separate the male and female sperm in bull semen.

The project is the 25-year-old pet of Dr. D. C. Bhattacharya, from India (who was unable to be contacted for this story because he had secluded himself in his Omaha-based laboratory). His friends call him "Dr. B."

"He's kind of a mad scientist. He'll work 24 hours a day if he thinks he's near something important," said Dr. Bert Evans, a consultant and stockholder for Cattle Reproduction, Inc., Dr. B's company.

"The company's had a lot of ups and downs," said Evans, an agricultural economist with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. "We're careful about what we say because we're still in the Model T stage. But we're close to what would be a basic scientific breakthrough."

The breakthrough would mean gaining the ability to determine the sex of a beef or dairy animal. This could be priceless to cattle concerns, from starving Third World countries to high-priced exotic breed merchants.

"Kel's say we could send a number of dairy cattle to an African country that has a drastic lack of protein," Egans hypothesized. "We could inseminate them with a 90% guarantee that they'll reproduce females, guaranteeing more milking animals for that country."

Currently, with the hit-or-miss method, dairy cattle reproduce about 55% male and 45% female cattle. Male cattle don't give milk.

In beef cattle, the process is a bit more complicated, but put simply, it would mean that the more desirable sex in a particular breed could be guaranteed about 90% of the time, Evans said.

The process could be coupled with existing biotechnology, he explained, making the process more efficient and prolific.

He gave as an example placing the embryo from one cow in the womb of another cow for development. If beef or dairy producers find an animal that produces excellent stock for its particular species, it could be impregnanted up to 10 times a year and the embryo transplanted with good chances of the offspring's sex being predetermined.

The new optimism is due to a two-year-old marriage between two experimental methods of sperm separation, Evans said, one developed for cattle by Dr. B and the other for people in Japan.

Dr. B's method involves using a specially designed vacuum tube that electronically warms its insides while cooling its outsides. Since male sperm is about 4% lighter than female sperm, the male components rise to the top while the female sinks to the bottom.

In earlier research, Dr. B learned to differentiate male and female sperm through a dying process, a breakthrough in itself. By finding where the male and female sperm divide, required insemination amounts can be syphoned away.

"That process was tried on about 500 cattle and we were able to produce results of 40% male and 60% female," Evans said. "That's a significant shift."

Later, Dr. B read a scientific journal article about Japanese scientists using an electronic method of separating male and female sperm in human semen, Evans said.

He adapted the process to his separation apparatus and got better, but not perfect, results.

"We had some tests coming back 50-50," Evans said. "But in certain breeds and individual bulls, we were getting results of 80 to 90%."

In the meantime, work goes on in Omaha and Lincoln with support from straight insemination services done by the company.

Other income hasn't worried the doctor or Evans, whose motives are more humanitarian than capitalistic.

"We're not out to make a killing," Evans said. "The doctor's real motives are finding a way to help feed the world. All we want is enough income to keep going."

"We've turned down a lot of fast buck artists because of that," Evans said.

Moore does really intricate work himself.

Glass blower likes creating new apparatus

Honorable though his calling may be, the skilled craftsman rarely gets in on the ground floor of history.

But research in Nebraska into separting male and female sperm in cattle semen has included a Lincoln artisan in the creation of parts for the final apparatus.

The artisan is Lloyd Moore, the scientific glass blower for the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Moore's talents were sought by Cattle Research, Inc., a company founded by Dr. D. C. Bhattacharya, who's from India and making his home in Omaha, when the decision was made years ago to make the major components of the new apparatus out of glass.

In addition to his glassblowing tasks at the university, Moore opeates a private business on the side called Pear Labs, which commissions glassblowing assignments from private corporations.

"It's by far not the first scientific project I've worked on," Moore said, "but it is the first brand new scientific method I've been in on.

"The rest have been new designs of old methods," he said.

Moore has more than 20 years of glassblowing experience and is the only privately practicing glassblower in Nebraska.

Dealing with the tight tolerances on volume and glass thickness moved Moore to work on this project himself and not include any assistants.

"I'm the only one because it requires such precision," he said. "It all has to be done by hand and I'm more qualified to do the intricate work."

Although Moore works from a design, he has no qualms about calling the company and making suggestions about the apparatus' construction.

"Most of the time I'll just call the doctor and tell him that something may work better stabilized differently or I'd change a type of taper in the glass, but that's about all," he said.

So far, Moore has made one prototype of the complicated mechanism, three duplicates and is in the process of making three more for use by foreign scientists.

"It's a more difficult job than normal," Moore said, "because every part is new and they all have to be made by hand.

"And because the function is so intricate, each new unit must be exactly like the first," he said.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

Bridge is not like ticktacktoe, where you can't lose if you play the game correctly. There are situations where all you can do is exercise your best judgment and hope everything comes out all right.

Here is a typical case. Let's say you're West and lead the king of hearts. Dummy plays the seven, East the nine, and declarer the three. What would you do next?

It is clear that East's nine is a come-on signal requesting a heart continuation. But what is not clear is whether partner is signaling to show the doubleton nine and wants you to cash the ace and play a third heart so that he can overruff dummy — or whether he has the queen and wants to play a low heart at trick two so that he can win it and return a diamond.

In the actual deal, your decision is crucial. If you play the ace of hearts, South makes the contact; if you play a low heart, South goes down after East wins and shifts to a diamond.

As a defender, how do you solve such a problem? The answer is that you follow probabilities, that is, you decide whether East is more likely to have a doubleton heart or to have the queen. Expressed differently, you must decide which of these two types of hands declarer is more apt to hold:

1. ♠AKxxxx ♥Qxxxx ♦A ♣x
2. ♠AKQxxx ♥xx ♦Axxx ♣x

There is only a remote chance of finding South with precisely five hearts and East with a higher trump than dummy's jack, but a very good chance of finding East with the queen of hearts. Accordingly, you play a low heart at trick two and South goes down one.

Medical TV show made for doctors

Buenos Aires, Argentina (UPI) — A pharmaceutical company is sponsoring a monthly late night television show for doctors, a "medical program for the medical profession."

The sponsor, Merck Sharp and Dohme, Argentina, said the show, "Laboratory 77," would not interest the general public.

To prove it, they called their first program, aired at 11:30 p.m. April 19, "Glomerulonephritis." It has something to do with nerve trouble in the kidneys.

Chiefs, study agree

Des Moines (UPI) — A number of Iowa police chiefs say they agree with a study which says one-officer police patrols are as safe as two-officer patrols.

Beware of energy frauds

Life Begins At Forty

The Federal Trade Commission is warning consumers to beware of 'energy-saving' home improvement frauds Presideant Carter s energy program has zeroed in on such items as insulation and solar heaters, and potential purchasers need to realize that some of the old siding roofing insulation rip-off artists are using the new energy consciousness to gull new victims

Solar heating is in its infancy and there is no cheap method for installing it Even solar hot water heaters are costly

The best way to protect yourself from these as from other schemes is to deal only with persons whom you know either in person or by reputation or on whom you can run a check with a local bank, Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau

If you need roofing insulation or siding shop around for the best legitimate bargain If possible first go to the library and check out Consumer s Guide to see what the price and quality range is for the item you need and which brands are recommended

Keep an eye on the news from Washington Not all of the President s energy package will become law, so some of the proposed benefits to homeowners may never materialize despite what an over zealous or unscrupulous salesperson may tell you

San Francisco — To the chicks who live in our Wonderful Land of Oz, the Greatest Guru is Werner Erhard who rewinds their psychic clockwork with a thing called est.

Erhard doesn't operate directly in Oz. (Marvelous Marin, CA) But we're all into astrology and laying on of hands so we contribute many students.

The course is a toughie. "Once you're inside the hall, you can't go out until it's over," a girl graduate told me. "Not even to go to the bathroom "

Erhard started modestly in a pigeon loft in North Beach. Now has branches (run by trained helpers) all around the country. A fast brain food chain.

I only get a few pickusp on est — not listening enough, I guess I get it at lunch. We don't have many professional waitresses here The girls who work the tables are also into reading palms Studying the Lost Lemurians whose continent lies under the Pacific.

They think the world of their est experience Lot of them go back once in awhile to get their psychic opticals refitted.

What doe it do? "It made me know myself. Who I really am."

You can't knock that

☆ ☆ ☆

With no more splash than filling the dachshund's water bowl, the girl who keeps our scatter in order stopped smoking

There's a resident guru who turns you off cigarettes

It costs $150 "But I save more than that in a year."

She said: "You have to go twice a week. I can't explain it all. But he just talks to you You see that you don't have to smoke."

She talked to the dude — (she was a two-pack-a-day person). And she just stopped. Like that. Period.

"Was it hard?" "No, it's easy "

I said· "Have you got a match on you?"

These voodoo things make me nervous. Makes me smoke more. She went right on vacuuming (Living in a house demolished daily by a pair of moppets is enough to put me on early martinis. But she doesn't even reach for a filter tip.)

☆ ☆ ☆

The men in the Land of Oz are seekers, too. Most of them play a moody guitar. They wear sandals — "Because 'it makes you free, man."

Their sugar is unrefined, and they take their carrot juice freshly squeezed and straight

We're all into vitamins I pop a few multis now and then to keep up with the times. Though I'm no John Denver, the dachshund adores me when I play, "Lovin' Sam From Alabam'."

☆ ☆ ☆

Muffins who graduated from Erhard's est say it changed their lives.

I said "You mean you feel better?"

She said: "Well, you can't put it that way. It's not like getting on some kind of high. It doesn't make you more energetic. I guess it makes you more thoughtful.

"Anyway, I feel like a different person."

☆ ☆ ☆

Besides est, most of our seekers keep a finger on their astrological pulse. They twirl biorhythm wheels to get the daily forecast

"This is one of my emotionally critical days "

(On days like that, break all dates Stay home and read: "Your Erroneous Zones ")

Many are vegetarians. Some are in touch with the Masters on the Astral Plane. (The Concorde of psychic flying)

Officials ponder upkeep funding

Associated Press

Officials from state agencies began Wednesday tackling the knotty job of figuring out how to establish priorities that would act as a sort of shoehorn in fitting deferred maintenance needs into available revenues

In an informal meeting called by Stan Matzke, director of the Department of Administrative Services, the representatives of the various agencies were asked to establish a format showing their needs

During the session, it was apparent the $4.4 million available in fiscal 1977-78 for the program outlined in the recent Unicameral's LB309 would only make a dent in the overall needs

Bob Pazderka, representing the University of Nebraska, said the university alone has $20 million worth of deferred maintenance

"Each agency is going to have certain class one projects that need to be done," he said. "We could come in with $20 million."

Roger Rutledge of the legislative fiscal staff said it was true the university had more buildings than other agencies and so more need, but he also offered some criticism.

"They (the university) haven't done such a good job of maintaining the buildings," he said.

"Is that because they haven't asked for the money?" Matzke asked

"Yeah," replied Rutledge "There's too many other things that the administrators would rather ask for."

Rutledge said the $4.4 million figure the first year could be much lower than the amounts sought the second and third years

"Then you'll find out whether the legislators really meant what they said or not," he said

Kearney Sen Ron Cope, a member of the Appropriations Committee, told the agency heads and staffers that a good program the initial year would encourage more legislative funding in later years

"It seems to me if we can make a good showing with this $4 4 million, the legislature will be more inclined to help out more," he said "I think what we do this first year is vitally important

Larceny plea made by Offutt surgeon

Omaha (UPI) — An Air Force surgeon has agreed to resign in exchange for the federal government dismissing felony narcotics charges filed against him after he allegedly gave amphetamines to a police undercover officer in exchange for acts of prostitution.

Lt Col Edward Paget, 47, pleaded guilty Wednesday to larceny of government property and was fined $1,000 by U S District Judge Robert V Denney

Assistant U S Attorney Thomas Thalken said in exchange for Paget's plea on the misdemeanor charge, the government dropped felony counts of distributing a controlled substance and falsifying a prescription

The counts were dismissed without prejudice upon the condition that Paget, an Offutt Air Force Base physician, resign from the Air Force

Thalken said the Air Force would initiate dismissal proceedings against Paget who agreed not to contest the dismissal action

Paget was arrested Jan 27 in the Crossroads Shopping Center parking lot after he delivered 18 dexedrine tablets to Omaha Police Officer Patricia Sweeney, who was working as an undercover agent at the time.

The government said Paget gave the policewoman the tablets as advance payment for acts of prostitution

A subsequent investigation showed, the government said, Paget had prepared a false and fraudulent prescription for 30 dexedrine tablets at the Berquist Medical facility at Offutt earlier the day he was arrested

Schoolhouse being remodeled into residence burns to ground

A country schoolhouse being remodeled into a residence burned to the ground early Wednesday two miles east of Waverly

The Lancaster County Sheriff's office was holding a 20-year-old man, in connection with possible arson

Filled with lumber and other building materials, the building was "totally engulfed in flames" when firemen arrived from Waverly, according to chief Harold Nansel The building was unoccupied at the time

The owner Tony Jelen had recently moved the schoolhouse from its original site to the acreage at 176th and Bluff Rd. Nansel said

Nebraska girl has hopes TV pilot is her big break

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

When Bobbie Vrana was young and lived in Fremont, when bathtubs and bubbles were a time of dreaming, she thought of the day when she would be a Madison Avenue beauty. "I thought I'd be a great Dove girl."

Now Bobbie has grown up to age 29 and her dream hasn't changed

She moved to Los Angeles and became known by the name of Bobbie Mitchell. She made about 50 television commercials among them, ads for Pepsi, Coca-Cola, Shower Massage, Toyota and Metropolitan Life

Now, the daughter of Judge and Mrs Ted Vrana of Lincoln hopes the big break will start Wednesday evening, when, along with Red Buttons ("a real pro") and Lionel Stander ("one of the greatest human beings"), she will star in the one-hour television version of "The Sunshine Boys"

The show will be aired on Channel 3, KMTV in Omaha, at 7 p.m. Thursday

Neil Simon, who wrote the script for the original play, also wrote the script for the TV pilot The story is about two vaudevillian partners, now old and full of bitterness for each other, who team up again 20 years after the act has ended

NBC-TV has not agreed to buy a weekly half-hour series based on "The Sunshine Boys." TV executives are not sure how viewers will react to a show about two elderly men, Ms Mitchell said

A lot depends on how well the pilot rates with the Nielsens, she said.

Ms. Mitchell plays Myrna, a secretary for an acting agency The role, which was not in the original play, adds a "youth interest" to the show, she said.

Ms Mitchell describes Myrna as "very efficient and really into being a secretary."

Ms Mitchell said about 200 persons auditioned for the Myrna role But, she said, she wasn't surprised when she got the part

After, all, she said she has been working toward the big break for eight years. She moved to New York City after she graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln She had been a home economics major.

"I was definitely an outcast," she said "They (home economics professors) told me, 'This is not for you.' "

Ms Mitchell has appeared in several television series. Among them, "M.A.S.H." (she was Alan Alda's girlfriend for three years), "Lotsa Luck," "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "Charlie's Angels" and "Police Woman."

Ms. Mitchell said that even if "The Sunshine Boys" doesn't work out, she has hopes for a successful year

She said she recently had two "good auditions" for movie roles: one starring Dustin Hoffman, the other Warren Beatty

"At this time last year, I was getting coughs and sniffles," she said

Democrats to discuss campaign resolution

Associated Press

The Nebraska Democratic Central Committee Sunday will debate a resolution saying party officials should lose their posts if they campaign for a Republican running for a nonpartisan office

The proposal has the backing of Dianna Schimek of Lincoln, associate state chairman, and Jack Cary of Kearney, third district chairman

But the proposal faces opposition State Democratic Treasurer Loren Belker of Lincoln, for example, says the resolution is foolish

Mrs Schimek raised the issue at a recent state executive committee meeting She and Cary voted for the proposal; six others, including Belker, were opposed.

It wasn't mentioned during the meeting, but Belker's open support of Republicans Joe Hampton and Leo Scherer in the nonpartisan Lincoln City Council elections this spring helped bring the issue to a head.

Rosemary Bauer of Lincoln, first district Democratic chairman, also campaigned for a registered Republican in the council race. T R Allan.

Mrs Schimek says party officials who feel obligated to work for non-Democrats should resign their party positions.

Belker says it is "ridiculous to demand blind obedience where the party isn't even involved."

Mrs Schimek says she understands there will be times when Democratic officials "can't give wholehearted support to Democrats, but their role should be to stay quiet and out of the race, not help the Republicans."

Grain co-op files suit to recover back taxes

United Press International

The Cooperative Grain and Supply Co. of Roseland has filed suit in U.S. District Court seeking recovery of $129,478 the co-op says the Internal Revenue Service improperly charged it for back taxes and interest.

The suit said the co-op paid $38,197 in taxes to the IRS for the yeasrs 1962 through 1972 but that the federal agency said nearly $130,000 in additional taxes and interest were owed.

The co-op paid the money, then filed claims to recover the funds. It argued it was an exempt farmers cooperative and that most of its capital stock is owned by producers who market their products and buy most of their supplies and equipment through the co-op.

The suit said the IRS would not recognize as an excludable item for tax purposes patronage refunds the co-op paid during the years involved.

Methodists name three priorities

The United Methodist Church General Conference has adopted three priorities for the 1977-80 quadrennium — evangelism, world hunger and ethnic minorities within the church.

A total of $124,000 per year was earmarked for evangelism from the Missional Priority Fund. Nebraska's yearly share of this is $1,562.

A goal of $5.5 million annually was set to fund the ethnic minority local church efforts Of this amount, 1 5 million was included in the special missional priority fund for ethnic minority local churches; $500,000 for Hispanic, Asian and Native American scholarships, and $3 5 million is being sought annually in the ethnic minority local church advance special.

Nebraska's yearly share is $24,219, with a yearly goal for the advance special of $42,382

Annual support being sought for the hunger missional priority is about $5 million Nebraska's yearly share is $24,219 Its goal for the hunger advance special is $36,328.

State investigators probe roadside use of herbicide

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

An investigator for the Department of Environmental Control (DEC) examined several stretches of road in Lancaster County Wednesday to determine whether a chemical being used by the Norris Public Power District is contaminating ponds and roadside ditches.

The herbicide, Tordon 10K, has been spread on trees growing under Norris electric transmission lines. About 80% of the area along the lines in a 3,000-square mile area of southeast Nebraska has been treated with Tordon pellets.

Norris officials have said the chemical is used only on trees which threaten to interfere with those lines.

Areas where the herbicide has been used near Lincoln include stretches of 56th and 68th Sts south of Lincoln and along Saltillo Road.

DEC officials and the Game and Parks Commission were asked to investigate after property owners contended that Tordon also is killing grass, shrubs, flowers and vegetables.

DEC investigator Clark Smith, who works in the water pollution control division, said he is primarily concerned whether Tordon 10K has polluted ponds and water running along roadside ditches. DEC is investigating whether Norris has violated any laws should the herbicide be found to have contaminated ponds and water.

Smith said he met with Norris representatives Wednesday who took him to inspect several areas where they have used the chemical. He also visited a farmer who has complained about the use of the herbicide. Smith said he still is in the process of writing his report and may have to conduct several other tests before he can announce what he has found.

Game and Parks Commission officials are investigating whether the chemical is destroying wildlife habitat.

John Furrer, a herbicide specialist for the Lancaster County Extension Service, said that Tordon is not toxic to wildlife or people. Furrer noted, however, that Tordon is the same chemical which did extensive plant damage in Kimball County 10 years ago after it seeped into wells.

Furrer said the utility may have applied the chemical in too high a concentration because along some lines, not only have the trees died but grass around them seems to have died also.

Carl Wolfe, wildlife research supervisor for the Game and Park Commission, also suspects that the herbicide chemical has not been properly applied.

The use of Tordon "is not justifiable other than for killing trees," he asserted.

District court judges' recordkeeping rapped

A state auditor's check of the state's district court operations revealed that the judges haven't been keeping as close a track on their recordkeeping as the auditors would like

The audit covered four years worth of recordkeeping from 1972-76 and included the state's 48 district court judges, the probation administration and the field probation service.

Although the audit found no major problems, the report did recommend changes in the following areas:

— Records were not adequate for maintaining accounting control over federal grants
— Payroll procedures lacked formal review and approval
— The sick leave policy records violated the agency's policy
— Money received was not deposited with the state treasurer in all instances, in violation of state law

In all cases, the recommendations suggested by the auditor's office will be followed, the report noted •

Approval of health grants recommended

By Carol Goodwin
Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Nebraska Health Systems Agency's project review committee recommended three grant applications to the SeNHSA board of directors for approval during a Wednesday night meeting

Recommended for approval were.

— The Lincoln Medical Education Foundation's area health education consortium application for $163,569 in federal funds The application is a continuation proposal for the planning, coordination and provision of health manpower education in the 17-county area of the SeNHSA.

— The state venereal disease control program's application for $162,159 in federal funds, a continuation proposal to help control veneral disease in the state

— The Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs' employe assistance program application for $6,588 in federal funds from the State Division on Acoholism, a continuation proposal for identification and referral to treatment of individuals whose drinking is impairing job performance. The annual project cost is $55,253.

Two other grant applications were held over until next month for further clarification and information.

They were the state home health care program's expansion proposal for $163,569 in federal funds, and the state immunization program application for $127,370 in federal funds

The project review committee also discussed the procedure for reviewing three new applications, two of which will be reviewed by the committee during a meeting next month

The Lincoln Medical Education Foundation's Medical library application and Tabitha Home's application for satellite home health agencies, which would serve Cass and Otoe Counties, will be considered by the committee next month.

The committee will make a recommendation to the board of a project review task force to consider the addition to and remodeling of Annie Jeffrey Memorial County Hospital in Osceola

The board also received a copy of a letter from the Health Planning Council of the Midlands concerning the state's decision to overturn one of the council's recommendations The council suggests that two changes be made in the procedure for reviews: that there is citizen involvement in state level project reviews and that whenever a decision is overturned on the state level, a written statement be provided stating the basis for the state's contrary recommendation

City engineer post filled

G Rex Smith has been picked to head the city engineering division. He replaces former City Engineer Dick Erixson who was recently appointed Public Works director.

The 39-year-old Smith had been a public works maintenance engineer in charge of roads, paving repair, storm sewer and landfill divisions.

Stock prices advance in fairly active trade

Dow Ind. +4.32

New York (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad advance in fairly active trading Wednesday

More than two issues gained for every loser on the New York Stock Exchange

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed up 4 32 at 912 99 giving up some of a gain of more than 6 points it showed earlier in the day

Big Board volume totaled 22 20 million shares up slightly from 21 11 million the previous session

The upward trend was seen largely as the continuation of a technical rally which started Tuesday after the Dow average dipped to around 900

Buyers started moving in at that point and continued bargain hunting on Wednesday, analysts said

Twentieth Century Fox, an active issue since the announcement of successful box office returns on its new film Star Wars," topped the NYSE active list It posted a one-point gain to close at 20⅞

Other actively traded issues included American Telephone and Telegraph, unchanged at 62⅝ and Avis, down ½ to 20½

On the American Stock Exchange the market value index advances 42 to 113 76

Third party complaint filed in Pathfinder Hotel lawsuit

Fremont (AP) — The manufacturer of a metal coupling involved in a natural gas explosion at the Fremont Pathfinder Hotel has been named in a third party complaint in lawsuits stemming from loss of life and property

E I du Pont de Nemours Inc is seeking a third party complaint in Dodge County District Court against Norton McMurray Manufacturing Co of Geneva Ill

Du Pont is named in at least 27 lawsuits seeking damages from losses suffered in the Jan 10 1976 hotel explosion and fire which claimed 18 lives outright and damaged much of downtown Fremont

Investigators determined the blast occurred when a two-inch piece of plastic pipe made by du Pont and installed by Nebraska Natural Gas Co pulled away from a metal coupling made by McMurray

In its third party complaint, du Pont denies all claims of negligence and asks that if the court determines the blast resulted from negligence, Norton McMurray be held accountable

The complaint contends the compression fitting failed to adequately anchor the plastic pipe was improper for intended use without adequate safeguards to prevent cold weather pullout and failed to adequately hold the pipe

Farm real estate value up

Associated Press

Nebraska farm real estate increased almost sixfold in value between 1950 and 1976 according to an article in Business in Nebraska

The publication issued by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Nebraska Lincoln s college of business administration listed the increase as from more than $2 7 billion in 1950 to $16 3 billion last year

The article by Bruce B Johnson assistant professor of agricultural economics, and Larry Janssen graduate research assistant in the same department also outlined the accrued real appreciation of the farmland for farm owners

For the 26 year period the article said accrued real appreciation amounted to 25 % of net farm income In other words for every four dollars of conventional net farm income received by Nebraska farmers this group accrued one dollar in the form of real wealth gain

The range during the period analyzed however, was great and was termed 'sporadic, with 1975 pegged as a year when farmer owner real wealth gain was 133 % of annual net farm income

Dataphone expansion is allowed

Washington (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted 6 to 0 Wednesday to allow expansion of American Telephone & Telegraph Co s dataphone digital service to 40 more cities

The business service permits a customer to use all-digital facilities for transmission of data at specified speeds between two or more points

The 40 cities are in addition to 24 approval in 1975

An AT&T spokesman said it would be six-to-seven months before any of the 40 cities start using the service The FCC action Tuesday approved construction of the equipment involved

Among the 40 cities authorized to use the dataphone service was Omaha Neb

76ers' Dr. J. injects NBA fans with 'Erving-itis'

By Sam Goldaper
(c) New York Times

New York — The recently concluded National Basketball Association season will be best remembered for two significant events — the emergence of Bill Walton as one of the game's dominant centers, and the proof that Julius Erving could play the game of basketball as well as anyone who had ever played before him

It also was the season when the four surviving American Basketball Association teams were absorbed into the NBA For the first time in the 1970's, all pro basketball was united in one league

If the biggest winner was Walton, the biggest drawing card was Erving, the gravity-defying Dr J Although the Philadelphia 76ers failed to win the championship, Erving won the hearts and minds of the basketball public

Erving is now in Las Vegas, where he is competing in the Dewar's Cup celebrity tennis tournament In a telephone interview, he answered questions about himself, his teammates, the future of the 76ers and related basketball matters

Q Do you think there will be any changes in the 76ers?

A The organization will probably look to improve itself as does every club at the end of the season They try to do it from within or from the outside Thre are some 50 free agents around

Q If you were the coach or the general manager of the 76ers, what would be your first priority to improve the team?

A Unless they decide to use Terry Furlow as the big guard, I would think that is our greatest need. We are strong at the small guard with Henry Bibby, Lloyd Free and Mike Dunleavy, but when Doug Collins goes out, we have nobody to replace him

Q Should Gene Shue (the 76ers coach) have taken a more disciplined approach to the team?

A Personally, I would have liked to have seen more discipline But that has to start with training camp and I wasn't there last year I will be there next season and if there are any suggestions, that's one I will make But who is to say we would have been a better or worse team with more or less discipline?

Q What type coach would you like to play for?

A I would just like to play for a coach who works at his job I have played for three different pro coaches and all were different individuals They all worked hard conveying their philosophies I can't worry about whether a coach is soft, tough or friendly I just want him doing his job

Q Can a championship be bought?

A I think it can if it is done with the proper discretion in mind I do think it's the job of the general manager and the coach to put the team together and then advise the ownership

Q How did you feel when there were times that you did not get the ball after showoing a hot hand?

A I don t have any criticism Whatever the players did, it was to try and make us win Everybody was shooting for a cause We were not a team, like so many with a designated shooting forward or guard, we were a lot of outstanding and talented players

Q As you look back on the season, do you have any frustrations?

A No, I learned a lot I imporved my attitude and became more experienced The other thing I'm sorry about was how I went from the Nets to Philadelphia My contract was my first priority When I had no choice as to where I was going, I decided to make the best of it and enjoy it

Q Now that you have played in the NBA for the entire season who do you rate Kareem Abjul-Jabbar against Walton?

A There is no doubt that Kareem is the outstanding center, but to play one against the other is not my bag There are things Bill does, like pitching out the ball, that Kareem can't do Bill is also better consistently as a defensive rebounder But I approach the game the same way no matter who is playing center My game is to challenge them offensively

Q In the ABA, playing for the Mets, you beat Denver without having a dominant center Do you think it s possible to win a championship in the NBA without a dominant center?

A Yes I think we would have won the championship if Free and Steve Mix would have been healthy and George McGinnis had not gone into his unfortunate slump At full strength I still think we were the better, déeper team A healthy Lloyd Free just can t be stopped offensively

Q Elvin Hayes of the Washington Bullets and David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets were named as the first team NBA All-Star forwards How do you feel being relegated to the second team

A Both had great years I think I had only a mediocre season compared to what I can do Besides, the All-Star team is selected by the sportswriters and that s something that is beyond my control I might feel disappointed, but it only tells me I have to do better

Q After Darryl Dankins and Maurice Lucas were fined after their fight in the third game of the chamionship round, Dawkins played terribly and Lucas didn t Do you think the fight had an effect on Dawkings?

A I think the fight had nothing to do with it Maybe Walton should be given more credit than he was given for taking Darryl out of his game I ll tell you this, in the two games we lost in Portland that tied the series, Darryl was breaking his chops when a lot of our guys were not

So, instead of signing with the Cleveland Indians when they drafted him last January, Ferroni enrolled at Central Arizona Junior College in Coolidge, Ariz

Now, 100 innings later, Ferroni is faced with the choice again after being picked by the Minnesota Twins as the No 1 selection Tuesday in the secondary phase of the draft His college coach, Ken Richardson, thinks the young southpaw no longer needs to worry about being prepared for the pros

"He's ready to go out and play," said Richardson "He could come back, but one more year at this level really won t help him much "

Ferroni, 18, was 8-4 with a 2 79 earned run average in 16 games for Central Arizona He struck out 95 batters and walked 54 in the 100 innings he pitched

"He was our stopper," said Richardson, whose team finished first in its division and second in the state playoffs "I think the best thing for him to do as far as baseball is concerned is to go ahead and sign "

The Twins hope Ferroni agrees with his coach's position

"He's a strong, stocky-type kid," said Minnesota scout Jess Flores, Jr , who has been watching Ferroni "His speed and curve ball are exceptional He has good stuff with exceptional control "

Richardson confirmed that assessment "He has a pretty good curve and average major league velocity," the coach said "He's a hard worker "

All of the secondary round selections were players who were drafted previously but did not sign After completing the secondary phase, the 26 clubs returned to the regular phase of the draft which had started on Tuesday when 338 players were selected in 13 rounds

Montreal won the draft's persistence award The Expos, picking 10th, selected outfielder-third baseman Kalvin Adams, a teammate of Ferroni's at Central Arizona The ironic part of the choice is that Montreal also drafted Adams as the over-all No 1 selection last January. Obviously, their failure to sign him the first time around did not dissuade the Expos in their pursuit of Adams.

Sports fans like Phyllis over brains

Chicago (AP) — Television and newspapers-friends or foes?

Who broke the U S boxing championships scandal?

Would you rather watch Phyllis George ask dumb questions or someone ask smart ones?

"The plain fact is more people would rather look at Phyllis George asking innocuous questions for a minute and a half than someone else asking probing questions," said Larry Merchant, NBC's sports commentator. "That's the way it is "

Merchant, CBS broadcaster Brent Musburger, ABC Vice President Jim Spence and Chicago Tribune TV critic Gary Deeb discussed Miss George and other TV related subjects Wednesday on a panel at the Associated Press Sports Editors Convention here

"Phyllis does not like to ask tough questions, that's not her role," said Musburger of his celebrated colleague on CBS' NFL Today "We tried to have a woman football expert and it didn't work out. So we tried Phyllis, who doesn't pretend to be an expert, and somehow the chemistry has worked."

In any discussion of TV sports, Ms George's name comes up often, almost as often as the trouble-plagued U S boxing championships on ABC. ABC has suspended the event in the wake of charges of kickbacks and false ratings. Spence was kept busy fielding questions on the subject Wednesday.

"We believed in the concept at the time and we still believe in it," said Spence. "It gives young boxers a chance to earn an honest buck. It just hasn't worked out thus far "

Lack of money no barrier: Diablos make it to CWS

Los Angeles (UPI) — Cal State Los Angeles is a commuter college with 26,000 students and a picayune $5,500 budget for its baseball team

Despite the lack of money, Jack Deutsch, 59, a grandfather of four who believes baseball should be fun, has the Diablos in the College World Series for the first time in the school's history

The Diablos earned a trip to Omaha, Neb by upsetting heavily favored University of Southern California in the NCAA District 8 playoffs in Hawaii. Just because they're underdogs doesn't mean they have to feel that way, says Deutsch

He spent 34 years in professional baseball as a player, manager and scout before accepting the Diablo coaching job this season

"Nobody," Deutsch declares, "gave us a shot at winning our league and we did Then nobody gave us a chance at winning the district and we did Well, it's down to eight teams now and we could win it

"Why not? I'm sure not going to say we won't. Heck, we're not supposed to even be in Omaha and we're going to be as loose as anything We have everything to win and nothing to lose

"Our players aren't afraid of anybody We haven't backed down all year and we don't plan on starting now If we get down a run or two, we just try a little harder "

First round schedule

Friday: Southern Illinois v. Temple, 5:10; Arizona State v. Clemson, 8:10.

Saturday: Cal. State-LA v. Minnesota, 5:10; Baylor v. South Carolina, 8:10.

The Diablos, 40-20 and champions of the Southern California Baseball Association, will face three - time NCAA baseball champion Minnesota in a first round game at Omaha Saturday

Also in the World Series that gets under way Friday are South Carolina, Baylor, Arizona State, Clemson Southern Illinois and Temple

According to Deutsch, the Diablos have one bona fide major league prospect in centerfielder Darrell Brown a junior who was his league's MVP He hit 396 this season with 11 homers and 46 RBIs, stealing 43 bases in 48 attempts

"But when we get a kid out of high school or junior college," he continues, "he's a second-rate kid I mean we get the kids that the big schools don't want

"If we're recruiting a kid, for example, and USC steps into the picture, we just back out We know we don't have any chance after that

"But we think we offer good coaching and those second-rate players in high school sometimes turn out to be first rate players

Deutsch who lives in San Gabriel Calif , has been working with Cal State Los Angeles baseball players for the past 10 years A year ago he was employed by the Bureau of Scouting

When Larry Cochell resigned to accept the Oral Roberts post the Diablos asked Deutsch if he wanted the job

"I m 59 but that hasn t been any problem ' he reflects "I ve never thought of it as a problem and neither have the kids Maybe the answer is that I've never let age concern me

"I ve always believed you should have fun when you're playing too and I think the kids appreciate that approach '

A sprinkling of parents and girl friends were in the stands for the Diablos' home games when the season started By the end of the season the crowds had grown to 400

For the first time this year the Diablos can be heard on the radio from Omaha

"I doubt very seriously," remarks Deutsch, ' if most of our students even know we have a baseball team You ve got thousands of kids going in four different directions

"But there's enough people around us who keep us up It's not the greatest type of environment but it isn't bad. Believe me, if we win this thing, though, they'll know who we are "

Lincoln man spearheads AAU program

While the current trend in diplomatic relations seems to revolve around basketball and baseball, the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) has been trying wrestling diplomacy around the world for the past eight years

Lincolnite Newt Copple, chairman of the AAU's wrestling committee, started a cultural-wrestling exchange with South America seven years ago and the program has blossomed into an annual trip to Europe for many U S wrestlers

This year s exchanges are with Europe and Iran The European exchange, involving some 180 midwesterners including 26 Nebraska high school wrestlers will send teams to Austria Germany Norway, Finland, England and Denmark

' We look at this trip as possibly the most rewarding experience a high school wrestler can experience," said Copple "The kids are not only exposed to some of the best wrestling in the world and some of the best wrestlers, but they also learn about another culture

We try to get everybody housed in homes rather than motels so they can experience life as their hosts live it,' said Copple

And as most of the people on the trips in the past, especially to Iron Curtain countries, they learn to appreciate the United States more '

Stop Action

By Ken
Hambleton

Two of the local wrestlers included in this year s European exchange are two time Nebraska champion Sidney Richards of Omaha Tech and Lincoln East s Gerry Jones, a qualifier in this year s state meet

Former Nebraska Wesleyan wrestler Willie Sapp, now a teacher at Lincoln East, and Doug Nielson of Harvard will coach the team that will travel to Iran later in the summer

The wrestlers will attend an orientation camp Friday through Wednesday at Central Michigan State University, before leaving for Europe

We want to show them our training camp in Michigan and teach them some things like how to say 'thank you' and please and where do I go because I m lost' said trip coordinator Guenther Kruse, a native of Germany

Kruse will help establish the side trips through the host countries which will take half of the wrestlers' time ' They ll have about eight wrestling meets during the 16-day exchange, and then they ll have time for seeing museums, the country or whatever, said Kruse

Although the European wrestlers don t have high school wrestling, per se, they do have clubs and practice about twice a week, according to Kruse "But the advantage won't necessarily be to the Americans, because they emphasize Greco Roman wrestling in Europe and the U S works on freestyle, he said

The fact the wrestlers will be exposed to a lot of good Greco-Roman wrestling will help our wrestlers,' said Copple a six-time AAU champion wrestler

' The Russians seem to have the most imput on the style it takes to become an Olympic or world freestyle champion and they place a lot of emphasis on the Greco styles, ' said Copple

"The sport of the trip is important, but the whole program will benefit wrestling in the U S and the countries we visit " Copple said 'We ve seen a lot of development from these trips in the past

Copple noted that through the exchange program there have been more wrestlers either visiting the U S from abroad or U S wrestlers traveling, than in any other Olympic sport

Finley: Jackson, Holtzman won't give Yanks pennant

By Red Smith
(c) New York Times

Chicago — "I'll give you an exclusive," Charlie Finley said "The Yankees won't win the pennant, not with Reggie Jackson and Ken Holtzman Jackson is a disruptive influence. Holtzman is the most miserable man I have met in baseball He was with the Cubs and he hated it there We had him in Oakland and he hated it He hated it in Baltimore and he hates it in New York He hates himself We won in spite of Jackson and Holtzman, not because of them "

Charlie ("I'm proud to be controversial") Finley was relaxing with a double Scotch after telling a gaggle of Associated Press sports editors that he was preparing another lawsuit against Bowie Kuhn, a commissioner whom he describes contemptuously as a "notary" rather than a lawyer It was pointed out that Jackson and Holtzman had been prominent in the success of Charlie's A's when they were winning three world championships in a row In those seasons, Jackson hit 25, 32 and 29 home runs and batted in 75, 117 and 93 runs, Holtzman won 19, 21 and 19 games

Finley would have none of it "We won in spite of them," he repeated "The Yankees won't win, and you can quote me "

At the start of the 1976 season, the owner of the A's sold Vida Blue to the Yankees for $1 5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to the Red Sox for $1 million each, then sued Kuhn when the commissioner vetoed the sales "in the best interet of baseball " He lost, a federal judge here ruling that Kuhn had not exceeded his authority

'We are in the process of appealing that decision," Charlie told the sports editors, "and I am confident the Appellate Court will set the record straight I am announcing here today that a second suit will be filed against Kuhn in the very near future and I d like to see him wiggle out of that one like he wiggled out of the first one when he got up on the witness stand and lied, not once but several times " He declined to describe the basis of the forthcoming suit, saying he would "rather Kuhn read it in legal form first "

Rudi and Fingers were among those who played out the option year of their contracts last season and sold themselves to other teams Blue, still pitching for the A s, is suing Finley, charging that he was tricked into signing a new contract just before the abortive sale to New York The three year agreement called for a salary of $140 000 last season $140,000 this year and $205,000 next year and provided that if Blue elected to play out his option in the fourth year, his pay would not be cut

Charlie was asked whether his impending suit had anything to do with Blue's diminished market value (With most of his former playmates gone, Vida s won lost record this year is 3-7)

His value hasn t diminished ' Finley said ' I can get as much for him now as I could if he was 7-3 They know he can pitch Just this morning I had calls about him from Texas and California

An hour earlier Charlie had been jeering about 'the Cowboy and all those other suckers who had invested millions in Rudi Fingers Gene Tenace Sal Bando and other fugitives from Oakland Now he implied that "the Cowboy " Gene Autry chief owner of the Angels and Brad Corbett of the Rangers were still bidding for Blue Last April Corbett said he had sought Kuhn's permission to buy Blue and the commissioner had refused

And I chewed Corbett out then," Charlie said now, ' for consulting Kuhn on a deal before I had agreed to it If I sold Blue to anybody, the deal would include a guarantee that Vida would play for him

Whether he is accusing Kuhn of perjury, touting an orange baseball or foretelling the financial collapse of teams because of astronomical and unjustified' salaries to players, Finley is seldom dull Among other things he said "In case of a tie, the commissioner has the deciding vote The American League is 100 per cent in favor of interleague play The National is against it All Kuhn has to say is Gentlemen there is going to be interleague play He hasn t got the guts to do it '

The one big problem with baseball is no leadership I hope the next time we appoint a commissioner we'll appoint one who knows and understands baseball, someone with a baseball background, not a notary s background " "I have had no trouble with Dick Allen at all I had him in for some homemade chili that I made myself and after eating the chili, he signed."

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

Nonparticipants

Nonhunters and nonfishermen are also being labeled nonparticipants when it comes to efforts to preserve wildlife

The states of Ohio, Colorado and Missouri have given the faction of our society opposed to hunting and fishing the chance to actually do something about their wildlife interests The results have been pretty dismal

Ohio s Department of Natural Resources started a special wildlife stamp program in 1972 The $5 stamp was sold with the idea proceeds would go to develop wildlife programs not related to hunting or fishing

Colorado and Missouri have tried similar projects All met with the same results The hunters and fishermen were the ones buying the majority of stamps sold

Since Ohio s program began in 1972, some $13,270 worth of stamps have been sold That s five years worth and it didn t generate enough money to pay the annual salary of a top-flight wildlife biologist to monitor the program

Colorado sold something like $5,000 worth Missouri isn t bothering to total its sales up

Since all three found out it was the hunter and fishermen doing most of the buying, the states reasoned it was because the hunters and fishermen actually care more about wildlife, all species, hunted or not, fished or not, than do the nonparticipants

It would be nice if antihunting and antifishing groups would consider that the next time they mount a campaign

Outdoor tidbits

Neighboring Kansas, hunting territory for a number of traveling Nebraskans, set its opening dates for quail and pheasant at Nov 5 this fall That portion of Kansas north of Interstate 70 and west of U S Hwy 81 will not open until Nov 12 for quail

Ducks Unlimited will be celebrating 40 years of success this year DU has raised over 60 million dollars, managing over 1 260 wetlands totaling 2 5 million habitat acres in the four decades of its existence No other wildlife organization can come close to that claim Hats off to DU

The Department of Interior's U S Fish and Wildlife Service will review proposals for the 1977 migratory game bird hunting regulations at a public hearing set for June 21 in Washington, D C Persons wishing to participate should notify the Director (FWS/MBM), U S Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of Interior, Washington, D C , 20240

Nebraska's 1977 spring turkey hunting season was just about what was expected Some 26 per cent of the 1,852 hunters bagged a wild turkey, taking 482 birds Hunters in the Southwest and Verdigre units scored best with a 57 and 53 per cent rating, respectively By units, the hunter number and birds taken broke down like this Niobrara 600 hunters — 157 turkeys, Roundtop 1 041 — 220 Southwest 42 — 24, Verdigre 150 — 79, and Wildcat 19 — 2 Chief of wildlife Ken Johnson of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission indicated these are similar to last year s figures, indicating the turkey population is fairly stable

Golfing fireworks wait for post-July 4 action?

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

When Steve Harris opted to transfer from Southeast Community College in Fairbury after his two years at the junior college, there were several alternatives open to the former Lincoln High athlete

With his eye on golf and basketball, Harris chose Nebraska Wesleyan and subsequently earned district all-American honors in basketball and All-American at the NCAA division III golf tournament in Gambier Ohio

"I'm happy with my decision to go to Wesleyan," Harris says "I really feel pretty good about it I wanted to go somewhere where I didn t feel like somebody owned me on a scholarship

"If I had a bad day, I didn t want to have to feel like I let somebody other than myself down," he adds

There were few bad days for Harris, but there was one drawback to attending a school where no athletic financial aid is available money

Harris' golf game is probably suffering a little this summer with the hours he's putting in working at Duffy's Fireworks to earn the extra money

He's been working between 8 a m and 4 30 p m during the week plus another four nights a week to keep up with the Fourth of July rush

"It bothers me a little bit that I haven't been able to play much," Harris says "But I think after July 4th, there should be quite a bit of time for it all "

Even with his workweek that sometimes extends into the weekend, Harris has managed to play two tournaments this summer, the Great Plains two-man and the Fairbury Open last weekend

"I didn't think I'd have a chance at Fairbury because I wasn't playing," Harris admits "But I shot 72-71 for second place I guess that wasn't too bad "

Harris is now looking forward to playing in his first Nebraska State Amateur Tournament at Hillcrest Country Club, after the fireworks rush

But for the time being, he'll continue packing assortments and making trips to South Dakota for materials with hopes of making his big bang later on this summer

In golfing action around Lincoln this past week Mike Schuchart, son of Holmes Park pro Bob Schuchart, posted the best score of the week with a three-under-par 69 at Holmes

The state's top golfers are looking towards the Grand Island Tournament of Champions Saturday and Sunday at Riverside Country Club with defending champion Gary Gruenemeier registered in the field

For two-man teams, Falls City Country Club is hosting the Tri-State Best Ball tournament Sunday with entries accepted until 11 a m the day of the tournament for the 18-hole event

Here are the top scores from the week at the city's five championship golf courses

Court orders investors repaid

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

Five Buffalo County residents were defrauded on investments connected with the now-defunct Elm Creek State Bank and deserve to get their money back, the Nebraska Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The high court upheld the ruling of the Buffalo County District Court on some $100,000 in debentures issued by the Midstate Insurance Agency and Management, Inc, to five senior citizens The court ordered the directors of Midstate to repay the debentures with interest.

The directors of Midstate were also directors of the Elm Creek State Bank, which was declared insolvent and closed by the State Banking Department in 1973. The money from the Midstate debentures had been put into the bank between 1970 and the time it was closed becase bank examiners continually ordered the bank to raise more capital to cover bad loans

A debenture is a notice of indebtedness that commercial institutions issue An investor lends money to an institution, is paid interest on his investment and can usually withdraw the principle after serving notice

The high court said the debentures were issued to bolster the deficient financial condition of the bank and to satisfy the criticisms of bank examiners

Each of them (the directors) knew, or should have known that facts would have to be concealed or misrepresented in order to sell the debentures, "said the decision, written by Justice Hale McCown

In the lower court proceedings, the five directors contended they were merely stockholders in Midstate and not responsible for actions of the corporation. But that court held the action "was so flagrantly fraudulent" that they must be held responsible The high court agreed with this finding.

The five persons who bought the debentures were Adolph Jahn, $35,000, Mayme Fowler, $5,000, Clyde Smyth, $20,000, Duane Frazier, $15,000, and William Riley, $25,000

In another decision Wednesday, the supreme court ordered a new trial in the case of a North Platte man who was prevented from sueing the city after his impounded motorcycle was stolen from a police lot

Robert Nash's motorcycle was impounded after police stopped a friend riding it and discovered the engine was reported stolen in Tulsa, Okla The motorcycle was stored in a locked, fenced area.

Nash later went to police with proof that the engine was purchased from a dealer in North Platte, but police kept the motorcycle in the impoundment area. In January 1973, the storage area was broken into and the cycle was stolen

Nash tried to sue the city to recover the cost of the motorcycle, but the county court ruled the city was protected by a state statute which prevents claims for damages on goods held by law enforcement officers

But the high court quoted a federal ruling that said when one detains something, one has to keep possession of that object. The motorcycle would have ultimately been returned to Nash, the court ruled, and thus North Platte was not immune from a lawsuit when it was stolen

In another case, the supreme court ruled that Charles Casper, an inmate at the Penal Complex, did not have privileges to visit his five children after he and his wife were divorced

Casper is serving a life sentence for murder committed during a robbery. He and his wife, now Nancy O'Toole, were divorced after his conviction, and she remarried

In contesting Casper's visitation request. Mrs O'Toole told the Douglas County District Court that the visits to the penitentiary upset the children and made them difficult to handle. The lower court held that the best interests of the children called for a stable home environment, and denied Casper s request

The high court agreed, but noted that incarceration is not a sufficient reason to deny visitation rights, and added such orders are subject to change if circumstances change

Retiring chapter chairman C E. Paulson received special recognition, as did directors Jack Stewart, Alfred Adams, Arthella Anderson, John Burns, Max Roper and Mary Stewart.

Rae Gorman, chairman of volunteers, presented Irene Cullen an award for 53 years of service. Lucille Manke received an award for 50 years of service and Lloyd Jenkins for 45 years. Volunteers who had served at least five years were also recognized.

Cynthia Wedel, of Alexandria, Va., National Red Cross chairman of volunteers, addressed the meeting.

Veys retains most department heads

Omaha (UPI) — Mayor Al Veys Wednesday ousted Public Safety Director Richard Roth and Human Relations Director A. B Hogan, but said he would keep most other city department heads.

Hogan, a black who has headed the Human Relations Department since 1973, said he was dismissed because the department was "too effective" for Veys and said the new mayor's record on human rights has been "highly suspect."

Hogan, 34, said Veys voted against the city's open housing ordinance while serving on the city council and several years ago refused to allow black delivery drivers into his South Omaha grocery store

Veys called the delivery driver allegation "an unmitigated lie," while Hogan termed his dismissal from city government a "personal triumph."

Roth, 49, a retired U S. Secret Service agent, was appointed by Mayor Edward Zorinsky three years ago. He said he wasn't upset about receiving his termination notice, adding, "It's a political job. I knew that when I took it "

"The mayor certainly has the perogative to have people he knows and trusts," Roth said.

Roth has expressed interest in seeking the 1978 Democratic nomination for Douglas County sheriff, but said Wednesday he wouldn't run against incumbent Republican Ted Janing, who Roth described as a "close personal friend."

Veys replaced Hogan with Mrs. Ruth Jackson, who has served on occasion as acting director of the Human Relations Department. and Roth with Assistant Fire Chief William McDonnell.

Veys said his aide, S. B Benson, would serve as acting public safety director until the city Personnel Board grants McDonnell a leave of absence from the Fire Department.

Veys also said he would replace Clarence Shafer, parks, recreation and public property director, because of Shafer's health. He has been under medication for blood clots.

Veys said Shafer would remain with the department as parks and recreation superintendent. Three persons were being considered as Shafer's replacement

Veys said he planned to retain Planning Director Alden Aust, Personnel Director Larry Wewel, Finance Director George Richardson and Community Development Director James Kelly.

In addition, Veys said the functions of the Office of Management and Budget created by Zorinsky would be returned to the Finance Department.

OMB Director Robert Armstrong, considered one of the most powerful men in city government when Zorinsky was mayor, will become a mayoral assistant, Veys said, and work with another mayoral aide, James Cavanaugh.

Rebuilding awaits flood plain study

Omaha (AP) — David Leonard's home in King Lake burned to the ground last fall Now he can't rebuilt it because it might be in a flood plain

Leonard told the Douglas County Board the county refused him a building permit and told him to seek one from the state The state told him he could rebuild if the property isn't within the 100-year flood plain

But, the county can't tell him if the property is within the flood plain until an engineering study is completed, probably this fall, according to Donald Claussen, county permits and inspections chief.

County Board Chairman George Buglewicz told Leonard he'll have to wait until that data is available. "By that time, I'll be broke," Leonard said

He said the county's refusal to issue him a building permit has caused him hardship in his roofing work, and his children have faced problems in a new school

Claussen said if the foundation for the home had remained it might be possible to rebuild But Leonard had the foundation removed by a group cleaning up the area.

Commissioners: 4 over and 3 lines down?

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Each of Lancaster County's three county commissioners reacted differently Wednesday morning during their first confrontation with next fiscal year's budget requests.

They each received a four-inch thick accordion-fold packet containing 45 manilla folders for keeping track of the various county budgets.

While administrative assistant Wayne Hart explained a new system, which displays all budget information on green-and-white striped computer printouts, Jan Gauer concentrated, Burce Hamilton fidgeted and Bob Colin scratched his head

Computer printouts have the distressing characteristic of all looking alike Hart started off by explaining how to tell the various budgets apart. About the fourth column over on the third line down, the departments' names appear.

Below this line, it gets a bit more complicated. There are eight columns of figures, comparing next year's budget requests to last year's expenses and the current year's expenses and budget.

"What do we have to do, go to IBM school to be able to read this thing?" Colin asked.

Hart explained the merits of the printout, which he said will serve as a budget form and an accounting document

Monthly printouts will update the information so that the commissioners' packets can bulge with data as the year progresses

Mrs. Gauger maintained a studious pose, puffing cigarettes while digesting the implications of the figures.

Not all budget requests are in yet, but Mrs. Gauger's rough estimate indicated that the commissioners need to cut approximately $600,000 from the requests, which look like they will exceed $8 million and be about $200,000 higher than the 1976-77 budget.

Hamilton said, "Maybe we should just add them all up, subtract a certain percentage, and apply that cut across the board."

The actual process will be much more complicated, and time-consuming. The commissioners will be meeting almost daily for the next few weeks paring the requests item-by-item.

"I propose that we pass a resolution next Tuesday making 8 days to a week," said Colin.

Hamilton seemed to have difficulty sitting still. He kept jumping up to check his calendar. There was reason to suspect he was thinking more about a noon-hour speech announcing his candidacy for Congress than about the meeting at hand.

Just as they were getting down to the fine points of how the 45 folders were alphabetized, Colin excused himself on the pretext of more pressing business.

"We'll let you know if we cut your budget," Hart told him as he walked out the door.

The serious business of hashing over the requests line-by-line with department and agency heads will start next Monday morning with the Civil Defense and Pre-Trail Deversion Program budgets.

Omaha attorney charged with misconduct by bar

Associated Press

An Omaha attorney with several driving violation convictions was charged by the Nebraska Bar Association Tuesday with misconduct

The bar asked the State Supreme Court to take "just and reasonable' disciplinary action against John Stuart Barrett, 50.

Records show that Barrett has been convicted several times of drunken driving and driving on revoked or suspended driver's licenses

Two suspensions under state law require suspension of the license of a driver with no liability insurance who is found to be at fault in an accident

A bar association Committee on Inquiry has started an investigation of Barrett for allegedly using his knowledge and position to flout the law in connection with Barrett's conviction last fall of driving without a license

Municipal Court Judge Elizabeth Pittman postponed sentencing until probation officer Floyd Hayes could complete an investigation

Omahan faces second degree murder charge

Omaha (UPI) — A young Omahan was charged with second degree murder Wednesday in the shooting death of his brother-in-law on a north Omaha street during a family argument

Municipal Court Judge Robert Vondrasek ordered Kass D Robinson, 21, held in lieu of $40,000 bond in the Tuesday night death of Clifford J. Culliver, 24, Omaha.

Police said Culliver was the brother of Robinsôn's estranged wife, Gwendolyn Kay, and had been unhappy over the way Robinson had been treating her.

Escaped market bull injures two in Norfolk

Norfolk (AP) — An escaped bull injured a 3-year-old boy and one of its would-be captors and sent several persons in a Norfolk residential area running for cover Monday.

The bull, which belonged to the Norfolk Livestock Auction Market, was shot and killed by Norfolk police.

Three-year-old Charles James was playing in his grandparents' fenced-in yard when the bull jumped over the fence, charged at the boy and threw him in the air, police said

Robert Mercer, an employe of the market, was charged while he was searching on horseback for the bull.

Penal inmate pleads innocent

Eugene Martens, 35, pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges stemming from an alleged March 25 escape from the Nebraska Penal Complex

Martens, who was serving a one-to-three year sentence for passing bad checks, was captured in Newman Grove after he allegedly drove away from the penal complex in a state car being serviced at the penitentiary garage.

Douglas County Board sets reappraisal date

Omaha (AP) — Assessor Frank Bemis and George Buglewicz, chairman of the Douglas County Board, have reached accord on first steps for a countywide property reappraisal to be started by Jan 1

Bemis said valuations probably will be updated every year after the reappraisal is completed

Bemis and Buglewicz agreed to have Chief Deputy Assessor Robert Rice and Richard Schoettger, administrative assistant to the County Board, meet with State Tax Commissioner William Peters

They have been instructed to find out what steps Douglas County has to take to comply with LB131, a new state law governing property values

Bemis and Buglewicz also agreed to hold a meeting, possibly next week, among the County Board, assessor, Schoettger and Rice to set up a timetable and methods for revaluing property

Bemis and Buglewicz said it has not been determined whether the reappraisal will be done entirely by the assessor's staff, by an outside appraisal firm or by a combination of the two

LB131 passed by the legislature last month, requires the county assessor to have a plan by July 1 for countywide reappraisal It also requires that the reappraisal be done or at least started by Jan 1

Commissioners have said they think it would take about 18 months to reappraise the 140,000 pieces of property in the county

The last countywide reappraisal was done in 1966-67

Roskens compliments Exon, Legislature

University of Nebraska President Ronald Roskens complimented Gov J James Exon and the Legislature for their level of cooperation this year describing it as "the best I ve seen in my six years at the university

In a speech to the Rotary Club, Roskens said the university did not get as large a budget as it wanted, but I think we recognize the realities of tax money availability "

He added when he reads of states in which legislatures could not offer new money but also asked their universities to decrease their budgets, I must say I feel we can live in reasonable comfort '

The university asked the Unicameral for an 18% increase but had to settle for 6 7%

Anderson said the project will study high temperature heat transfer properties of selected solids, such as glass

Trustees of the Westinghouse Foundation awarded a $10,000 grant to a pair of Lincoln campus engineering professors for investigation of modularized instruction in engineering

They are Dr Don J Nelson, professor of electrical engineering and computer science, and Dr David W Olive, professor of electrical engineering

'Levelheaded' youth, 19, piloted crashed Cessna

From Press Reports

Gordon — The pilot of a single-engine Cessna 172, which crashed and burned Tuesday night after buzzing a farmstead and killing all four men aboard, was described Wednesday as "levelheaded" and "always took his flying seriously"

Don Brown, owner of Don Air Service of Alliance, said Samuel Foster, 19, of Hay Springs, rented the aircraft from him for a "personal flight" which was to last about an hour, United Press International said

About two hours later, the four-passenger aircraft made a low pass over the Glenn Calkins farm about 10 miles northwest of Gordon, failed to regain altitude and slammed into a 75 foot deep gully about a quarter mile away

In addition to Foster his passengers, Robert Grant, 19, of Alliance, and brothers, Darwin and Rodney Calkins, about 20, of Gordon also died in the crash.

Glenn Calkins, the first on the scene, pulled his son, Darwin, and Grant from the wreckage just before the plane burst into flames

Rodney Calkins and the pilot were trapped in the wreckage Heat from the flames prevented the elder Calkins from further rescue attempts.

Authorities said the plane stopped at the Gordon Airport just before the crash Brown said the aircraft had about four hours of fuel when it left the Alliance Airport.

Brown said Foster was a "regular user" of his planes

"He was always real levelheaded and a real sound pilot," Brown said

Nebraska death toll rises

Associated Press

One person died Wednesday following a two-car collision west of Columbus and a fifth person is dead as a result of a three-car accident Sunday near Wood River, authorities said

Platte County officers identified the victim of the Columbus accident as Jane IntVeld, 19, of Denver

The victim's westbound car collided with an eastbound car driven by Robert Wheeler Jr., 20, of Grand Island, on U S 30, three miles west of Columbus

Wheeler and two passengers in the IntVeld car, Jo IntVeld of Sioux Falls, S D, and Cornelia E VanGrouw, 50, of Inwood, Iowa, were held for observation at a Columbus hospital

The fifth fatality in the Wood River accident was 4-year-old Starla Lemburg of Wood River, who died Tuesday in a Grand Island hospital, authorities said

The child was riding in a pickup truck driven by her father, Gregory Lemburg, 22, when the truck collided with a car at the intersection of a county road and Nebraska 11 near Wood River Four elderly Wood River women traveling in the car were killed

The latest deaths raised the 1977 Nebraska highway fatality toll to 150, compared with 131 on the same date last year

Vacant building 'broke'

Omaha (AP) — The vacant Doctors Hospital building is out of money and will lose its insurance and private security guards, officials said The building is owned by the insolvent Midlands Community Hospital, which has been placed in receivership.

The Omaha City Council Tuesday failed to approve rezoning that would have allowed the structure to be sold for $200,000 to the U-Haul Co

Additional insurance likely

Omaha (AP) — A new insurance requirement from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission could cost the Omaha Public Power District $10 million for additional coverage at the district's Fort Calhoun plant.

OPPD directors will be asked Thursday to approve the borrowing of $10 million on the district's $40 million line of credit with the Continental Bank of Chicago.

Hamilton announces bid for House seat

In a moment charged with drama but little suspense, Bruce Hamilton announced Wednesday that he is running for Congress.

To a crowd of well-wishers outside the County-City Building, the 35-year-old county board chairman said, "I will not be a candidate for reelection as a Lancaster County Commissioner. I am a candidate for the Democratic Party's nomination for Congress from the First Congressional District."

In a 20-minute speech, Hamilton talked about his political philosophy and values" rather than practical issues. In the "11 long months" before the primary election, he promised to be more specific.

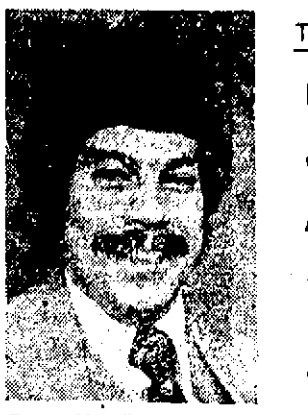
"I reject labels," Hamilton said. "I strive to blend the compassion and concern of liberalism with the caution and efficiency of conservatism."

Admitting "an instinctive kinship with the poor and disadvantaged," he was qucik to add, "I am not anti-business and in fact believe we should give free enterprise some breathing room" by abolishing governmental regulations "that stifle competition."

"The chief challenge of our times is coping with scarcity," he said. "We must evolve a new liftstyle with new methods of production and new patterns of consumption."

"The good leaders I would strive to emulate make heroes out of the people," he said.

Hamilton admits it will take time for him to gain support outside Lancaster County. Hamilton first ran for Congress in 1968 as a third-party anti-war candidate.



Bruce Hamilton
... county commissioner

He has been a county commissioner since 1974. Before that, he was in private law practice.

He is the first to announce for the House seat presently held by Republican Charles Thone.

Thone is expected to seek a Senate seat or the governorship in 1978.

Curtis says Exon won't go to Senate

Associated Press

Sen. Carl Curtis said he believes Gov. J. James Exon "is in for the surprise of his life if he runs for the Senate seat Curtis is vacating next year."

In a broadcast interview Tuesday, Curtis produced one of the strongest partisan statements since he announced the end of a 40-year career in Congress last January.

"The people of Nebraska are not going to elect two Democratic senators," Curtis said.

"No man is invincible and the Exon myth is going to explode."

Curtis said Nebraskans are not going to vote to make the Congress "more lopsided. Nebraskans haven't changed that much."

Curtis said those dissatisfied with Washington are going to turn to the Republican alternative in 1978. He said "only twice in my long period here have I served in a Republican Congress."

Curtis, 71, has served longer than any other Nebraskan in Congress. He said it is possible he will have preferences in the primary. He refuses, however, to dictate to the Nebraska Republicans.

"It will be a situation where Nebraska Republicans have had ample opportunity to see who they want," he said.

Commission names officers and duties

Mimi Waldbaum of Omaha was elected chairman of the Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission at its organizational meeting Wednesday.

Wallace Peterson of Lincoln was named vice chairman, and Ralph Slocum of Lincoln will be secretary.

The eight-member commission, created by the so-called 1976 "sunshine law" which takes full effect July 1, met in Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan's Statehouse office to launch its operations.

The commission's major duties will begin next year when it gathers campaign finance reports for the 1978 elections and receives financial disclosure statements from candidates and officeholders.

Disclosure statements for current officeholders are not due until April 1.

Lobbying disclosure provisions of the new law will take effect prior to that time.

Whelan, Secretary of State Allen Beermann and JoAnn Kimball of Lincoln were named to a subcommittee that will concentrate on lobbying provisions in the new law.

Ms. Waldbaum, Slocum and Mickey Staley of Omaha will concentrate on campaign reporting, while Peterson, Slocum and James Davis of Omaha will serve on a financial disclosure subcommittee.

Beermann serves on the commission by virtue of his elective office. Gov. J. James Exon named Whelan to serve as a member in his stead.

The other six members were appointed by Exon or Beermann and confirmed by the Legislature.

Whelan said he and Beermann believe the law should be changed so that elected officials, whose activities will be monitored by the commission, do not serve as commission members.

That, in itself, is a direct conflict of interest, Whelan suggested.

"We're not very happy about this, but we will do our duty because the law requires it," Whelan said.

Whelan said he hopes the commission can serve as a model for other bureaucratic agencies in record keeping and reporting activities.

The commission asked State Personnel Director Roy Gardner to help draw job specifications and prepare advertising for the hiring of an executive director, an attorney, an auditor, a secretary and a clerk.

Legal insurance new fringe benefit

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — In California, you can pay $25 a year for the right to telephone a lawyer anytime you want and get fast advice

In Washington, D C , laborers in the construction industry get free advice and consultation on personal legal problems, as well as free courtroom representation Everything s paid out of union dues.

In western Pennsylvania, Blue Cross is preparing to offer individual legal insurance contracts, at prices ranging from $60 to $140 per family The lower-cost contract would cover up to 17 hours of legal consultation, which might run around $450 if paid for privately

In your own city, plans like this may soon be available if they aren't already According to the American Bar Association, some 150 full-scale pre-paid legal insurance plans are now operating in the United States, covering about 2 million people And perhaps as many as 10,000 unions, credit unions, employers and other groups offer some form of group legal benefits

The 1976 tax reform law made it advantageous for companies to offer these plans as a fringe benefit, which doubtlessly will expand their number tremendously Millions of people would buy individual coverage if it were offered at a reasonable price

Low-cost legal advice is, in fact, the chief attraction of pre-paid insurance plans Typically, an employer, credit union or other group will contract with a specific panel of lawyers, offering them a large volume of legal business if they ll promise to charge each group member a low fee The cost may be 20 to 40% below standard fees

Other plans (including those sponsored by bar associations) allow you to choose any lawyer you want. The coverage pays for a certain number of hours of legal work, so if the problem can be cleared up the cost is low However, once the work exceeds the time covered by the insurance contract, the lawyer can charge his usual fee

If you know your case is complicated, you should take the precaution of negotiating a reasonable fee in advance. But your insurance at least guarantees that the case will cost less than it would have without the coverage

Some plans even cover "major legal" expenses just the way health plans cover "major medical" You have to pay a deductible (perhaps $1,000) and the plan picks up the rest of the cost

Legal insurance plans provide another benefit, worth even more than you'll save on legal fees Having the coverage encourages you to use a lawyer for legal muddles, when otherwise you might try to do without

Middle and lower income people generally avoid lawyers if at all possible Mainly, they don't want to pay the fee And a lot of people have personal grievances against the legal profession, and take pride in handling all their problems themselves

That's fine, if it works But it often doesn't Stuart Brown of the National Legal Service Plan in Westwood, Calif , told my associate Anne Colamosca that a good part of his business comes from untangling do-it-yourself legal projects — especially do-it-yourself divorces Many an heir has lost money because of the do-it-yourself will, or a seller, because of a do-it-yourself contract

Legal insurance programs encourage "preventive law ' — people asking what to do about their problems before they get bad enough to need expensive help The legal services most commonly needed involve landlord-tenant disputes, traffic cases, accidents, making or probating a will, consumer debt, family problems, like divorces and child support, criminal charges, and, a new area, upgrading military discharges and applying for G I benefits

Plans like that of the Laborers Union District Council in Washington, D C , don't stop at small disputes, as some plans do, but stay with the worker right into the courtroom if that's necessary

One footnote Most group legal plans will stand with you in court only if you're sued not if you're doing the suing This discourages litigation happy people from getting their kicks at their plan's expense

Tax Court rules crumbling cliff not a disaster

Washington — Discovery that your house is on a cliff that is crumbling into the ocean is not a disaster — at least not for purposes of federal income taxes

The U S Tax Court has ruled that your house must suffer actual damage before you can take a casualty deduction on your tax return

The ruling came in the case of Edward R Benner, whose wife agreed to pay $45,000 for a two-story redwood house on a 100-foot cliff overlooking the Pacific Ocean at Moss Beach, San Mateo County, Calif

In 1971, a county study found that the cliff was highly susceptible to earthquakes, and was crumbling into the ocean at the rate of three feet a year The country suspended further building in the area, and marked down the fair market value of the Benner home to $19,752

Benner claimed a casualty deduction, the Internal Revenue Service denied it, and now the U S Tax Court has agreed with Internal Revenue

The Tax Court decision noted that taxpayers are entitled to deductions for losses arising from "fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty "

"An individual," the Tax Court said, "may properly claim a casualty loss deduction only when there has been actual physical damage or destruction of the property

"We reject petitioner's contention that the qualifying event was the publication of the report The publication of this report is simply not the type of sudden and unexpected invasion by a hostile agency contemplated by the statute "

Court referral program may come to end soon

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The recently troubled Lancaster County Court referral program is apparently ' winding down

That s the word from Pam Fry director of the three year old program which gives people charged with minor crimes the option of doing volunteer work instead of spending time in jail or paying fines

Ms Fry told the Region II Crime Commission Wednesday that she expects to close the program by July 31, unless a reasonable alternative to administering it can be found She said there are currently 33 court referred volunteers in the program, but no new ones have entered for several months following a change in judges duties in county court

That change in duties, which saw Judge Jeffre Cheuvront switch from criminal to civil matters with Judge Robert Camp prompted Ms Fry s resignation last month and sparked a debate about the merits of the program among commission members Cheuvront was an advocate of the program but Camp declined to use it because of questions about the liability of the courts if volunteers created additional problems

The debate ended when crime commission Executive Director Curt Snoberger directed the group s courts committee to poll the judges about the program Ms Fry withdrew her resignation about a week later and decided to work on a week to week basis awaiting a final decision on the fate of the program

The courts committee released a summary of responses from the judges at the Wednesday meeting That summary was further summed up by commission member Rudy Friedstrom who said It s obvious the judges have varied opinions on the matter

Public Defender Clem Gaughan a commission member, noted that responses from district judges "should carry little weight" since they "rarely handle misdemeanor cases and have little opportunity to use the program '

Commission Chairman Maurice Russell suggested that fellow members study the responses and make some definite decision on the referral program next month

Responses from seven judges were printed in the summary On the question, "Do you feel that community service is an appropriate condition or as an alternative sentence? four said yes ' one said ' no,' one said "not for juveniles and one said it should be "out of a sense of duty and responsibility, not because a judge orders one to do so

County Judges Camp and Cheuvront, the municipal judges answering as a group and District Judge Samuel Van Pelt all said ' yes " District Judge William Blue spoke of the sense of duty and District Judge William Hastings said no

Juvenile Judge Bill Nuernberger said the system probably wouldn t work for juveniles, even though he firmly believes that a child should compensate the victim wherever possible

Permissive legislation to implement such a system has been suggested as an alternative The judges were asked if such legislation would change the circumstances and enable them to utilize the program Judges Camp Cheuvront the municipal judges and Van Pelt said they would

Judge Hastings who said he wouldn t use the program noted ' We have been trying for years to develop a meaningful and efficient statewide probation system and have always been short of funds I am opposed to constant applications for and grants of funds for programs outside the system

A recommendation by Mayor Helen Boosalis that the city cut from the budget its share of administrative funds for the Region II Crime Commission angered commission members Wednesday

Commission Chairman Maurice Russell said that several members and Executive Director Curt Snoberger met with the mayor and her budget consultants Tuesday night to discuss the cut which would remove $7 245 from the $42 000 the commission uses for administration

The mayor s administrative assistant Mike Merwick who is also a member of the crime commission said he felt the administration could best be handled in house utilizing various city employes among them Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers to handle the chores that Snoberger has had for the past 2½ years

But commission members disagreed Member Marie Arnot noted that the commission is a regional body involving the municipal governments of about 13 different cities and that Lincoln shouldn t have the majority opinion in the matter

Merwick agreed and said that funds to the city from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration have been greatly cut and that has dictated the recommendation There s nothing to say that your funding (for administration) couldn t come from another source or be totally funded from the State Crime Commission Merwick added

But any way you slice it they re tax dollars Mrs Arnot countered

County Judge Jeffre Ceuvront said he was disappointed Unless you ve got city employes sitting around with time on their hands you re going to have a mess he said

He noted that input from competing agencies into the administration of the commission would result in a loss of objectivity for the overall program The competing agencies would be the representatives of the various law enforcement agencies who serve on, and are served by the commission

Member Rudy Friedstrom on the commission since its inception said that a ' lot of legwork would remain undone without an executive director The commission with the help of its executive director, has attracted six or seven million dollars which otherwise wouldn t have been available for law enforcement work he added

Mrs Boosalis said later she intended not to eliminate the position of executive director just the city funding of that position

The commission voted 16 to 1 to urge the mayor to reconsider her decision with Merwick casting the dissenting vote

Regional crime commission approves 3 grant applications

Three grant applications totaling nearly $30 000 were approved by the Region II Crime Commission during its regular meeting Wednesday

The largest of the grants $14 111 will go for project juvenile concern through the City Corrections Division City-County Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers said the money will buy a closed circuit TV for monitoring the soon to be completed juvenile cells as well as a 300 volume character building library

There s a definite need for this (the library) in Lincoln Rackers said noting that adult prisoners are offered continuing education but nothing exists for juveniles

Another grant for juvenile use totaling $4 576 was awarded to the Juvenile Attention Center for education equipment but only after County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton spoke in favor of the item

The crime commission s juvenile committee had declined to recommend the project for approval but both Hamilton and attention center Director Jon Hill argued for it

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront also endorsed the grant noting the money would come from unused 1975 funds which would otherwise go to waste on the state level if not used

Hamilton said the Lincoln Public Schools had made no commitment to assign a teacher to the center and any educational programs carried on would have to be done by the attention center staff

Commission member Rudy Friedstrom a former public school administrator urged the attention center staff to work closely with the schools because ' you can t set up your own little system down there

The commission approved the grant and recommended that Friedstrom work directly with the schools and the center staff to establish an education program

The third grant for $10 692 will be used to update the various court records all over the county that are in various forms of arrangement according to Kandra Hahn district court clerk

In other action the commission decided to discuss adding another member to the 21-member body next month to accommodate representation from the City Council Member Sue Bailey a former council member was appointed to the commission before she was elected to the council and thus was not really a council representative

But the new City Council recently announced that Leo Scherer would be its representative on the commission a situation which posed a a problem since the commission had no vacancies

Rackers suggested that the commission voted to amend the by laws to permit a 22nd member since council representation is seen as an important part of our on going operations

PERKINS IS COMING TO TOWN
And We're Looking For Perkins People!

If you've lived in the Midwest for any length of time, you know all about us. We're famous for our breakfasts ('cakes) and our full line of lunches and dinners (steaks).

We're coming to Lincoln with a brand new restaurant, but we need good people to run it.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Thursday, June 9, 1977

On being visited by an Aquarius (secret thoughts) ... Will she be Uranus or 11th House? Will there be verbal blasts? Will the temperature be Arctic or sweet Spring? Declaration: No person, not even a skilled astrologer, should expect to accurately predict exactly what an Aquarian will think, say or do. The male Aquarian can be stubborn, ingratiating, charming, extravagant. The Aquarian woman can be electric, impulsive, affectionate and argumentative. Best counsel when being visited by an Aquarian — male or female — fast out all wagers. Take bets off the board. No one can predict what will occur, especially not the Aquarian.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New start could be featured. Study Virgo message. Permit creative juices to flow. Imprint style. Be independent, original, a self-starter. Accent on partnership, publicity, opposition from some legal quarters — and marriage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You actually learn now through process of teaching. Cancer, Aquarius persons are in picture. Basic material requires review. You are being guided in two directions simultaneously. Yes, it is time to form policy, to draw the line. You'll comprehend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remember diet, health resolutions. Say "No" to junk foods. Your appearance now is very important — those in positions to aid are being watchful. Popularity soars — young persons and romantic situations command attention. Yes, a change will occur. Number 3 figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stress attention to fine points, details, to reading between the lines. Your position is strong even though you have doubts. Cornerstone of progress has been laid — know it and get firm footing. Yes, this will be clarified.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Short trip, reunion with close neighbor or relative — this could be on agenda. Be ready for change of scenery. Member of opposite sex does care and plays significant role. The number 5 turns up more times than by mere coincidence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on personal possessions, assessing value of special collection including coins, antiques and objects. You will be excited by home decorating possibilities. Yes, it is all right to move furniture!

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
